Before Judge Oliver H. Williams in the Third District court Friday until nearly 4:30 p. m., much of the time was occupied with a trial of the case of State, vs. Mrs. Alice L. Johnson, of 21 Lincoln avenue, Norwich. A Buick car driven by Mrs. Johnson on the Watch Hill road about 6 p. m. Friday, Aug. 27th, collided with a Ford car operated by James Casey of Railroad avenue, Westerly, when both autos were more or less damaged. Judge Williams found the defendant guilty of turning a corner in the highway with failure to keep to the right of the center line of the street. A fine of $5 and costs was imposed and paid. Mrs. Johnson testified that she was proceeding at a 25 mile rate of speed for she had just passed an auto accident where five ladies were in an overturned car. She drove her car on the right of what she considered the intersecting street lines. For the defense William Kreig said in passing he was able to drive his auto between the two cars. Afternoon witnesses were Mrs. Johnson's daughter, Miss Elizabeth E. Johnson and her husband, Henry D. Johnson, both of Norwich.

Appeals From Fine

Previous to the noon recess, Murray Penn, traveling jewelry salesman of Ridgefield, N. J., was charged by State Trooper Florence J. Harvey, of the Hope Valley barracks with reckless operation of his auto when on Barber's Hill on the Noose Neck Hill road, Wednesday night when Wilfred Main of Canonchet was struck and sustained a broken leg. He was represented by Attorney John J. Dunn who entered a plea of nolo and asked for a light penalty. Assistant Attorney General William W. Blodgett of Pawtucket appeared for the state. Judge Williams imposed a fine of $200 and costs. Notice of appeal to the superior court was given by Attorney Dunn and James A. Dunn became surety in the sum of $500. This case had attracted interest because a sample jewelry case was left at the police station and it was thought that the jewelry might have had a connection with the robbery of a jewelry salesman at the Parker House, Boston, until the checkup with Boston showed that the mark of identification was lacking.

Had Blown a Fuse

George Ryan, 19, of Butler, N. J., pleaded guilty to the operation of an automobile on High and Broad streets which did not have two white lights saying he blew a fuse. When told to go to a garage he drove on. He paid a fine of $10 and costs.

Bootlegging Fine

Thomas Blummer, pleaded nolo, on the charge of possessing intoxicating liquors, made by Sheriff Fred T. Mitchell following the raiding of the Sea View Filling station, Charlestown. He was fined $300 and costs which were paid.

Thomas Salimeno, 29, of Westerly charged with driving on the private right of way of the New Haven railroad, Aug. 22nd pleaded not guilty. His attorney M. Walter Flynn, stated that he was waiting to interview him on a return from Providence when his train was 40 minutes late. The case was nolle prossed, on recommendation of Solicitor Ferguson.

James G. Kelley, 21, of New London, pleaded guilty to double parking of his Bond Bread truck on Broad street, saying that he did not stop long enough to collect. Chief Brown declared that the time was sufficient for him to get a summons and return from the police station. He paid a fine of $2 and costs.

William T. Teeden, Jr., 24, of Devon, Conn., pleaded guilty to passing a red traffic light, saying that he thought it was a blinker light, as in New London. He paid $2 and costs.

A. H. Spaulding of Charlestown was found guilty of the charge of passing a red traffic light on Broad and High streets. He paid the $2 fine.

Clarence Schaller, 20, pleaded guilty to operating his auto at an excessive rate of speed on the Noose Neck Hill road when complained of by State Trooper Florence J. Harvey, Sept. 1st. He was fined $100 and costs.

William H. Jackson of Kenyon, pleaded not guilty to driving at excessive speed on Main street. A week's continuance was allowed and bail posted in the sum of $200.

Joseph Urso retracted a former plea of not guilty to turning a corner on the left of the center line and was fined $25.

TOTAL OF 251 PUPILS IN CATHOLIC PARISH SCHOOL

For the current school year there is an enrollment of 251 pupils at the Immaculate Conception parochial school, according to report of Rev. J. F. Vincent. The number sets a new high record, exceeding that of last year by 47. A sixth grade has been added to the school this fall in accordance with the parish plan to build up the school to a full eight years. After that has been accomplished it is probable that a parochial high school will be established.

Slight Auto Accident

In Pawcatuck Friday morning there was an automobile collision between cars driven by Mrs. Timothy C. Gordon of Westerly and Mrs. Flora Cote of Hinckley Hill. Mrs. Cote turned into a lane and Mrs. Gordon came along from behind, her machine hitting the rear of the Cote car. Mrs. Cote was pushed into the fence at 45 Mechanic street and her car ripped off several pickets. Patrolman Simeon Shortman, who investigated, held neither driver as they came to an agreement.

Shore residents became interested about 9 o'clock Friday morning when one of the large Boston to New York passenger seaplanes came down and rested on the water half a mile from shore between Weekapaug and Misquamicut.

The ship was believed to be in distress and a telephone call was put through from Weekapaug to the Watch Hill Coast Guard station. The captain of the station started out in the patrol boat but the ship took to the air again and headed toward New York.

The airship was reported later as flying low over Watch Hill in the direction of New York.

CHAIN BANKING SPURS HOPES IN MIDDLE WEST

CHICAGO (AP)—Some observers believe that the spread of chain banking throughout the country has given middle western cities a special advantage.

They forecast that some of the larger banks in Chicago and other centrally located cities will find themselves in strategically strong positions to organize chain banks on a national scale.

There are approximately 26,000 independent banks in the United States. In England, where the melting down process occurred long ago, there are a few great central banks with branches throughout the British empire.

REVOLVER SHOT SCARES OFF CROOK AT NEW LONDON RECTORY

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 6—A bold attempt was made during the early hours of this morning to rob the rectory of St. Mary's Star of the Sea church on Huntington street. Had it not been for the boldness of the crook he probably would have been successful in obtaining loot of some description. As it was his boldness aroused Rev. Dr. Timothy M. Crowley, but the crook was able to make his departure from the rectory without his identity being revealed, although he was seen leaving.

The thief gained entrance through the front door, which probably had been left ajar, for there was no evidence of a forced entrance and it is more than probable that a duplicate key was not used. The crook passed through a hall and entered a living room, off which is the sleeping room of Father Crowley. There was nothing of value in the living room so the thief attempted to force the door of the bedroom. He used a jimmy and while he was prying at the door the priest was aroused. Going to the door Fr. Crowley inquired who was there and he received the warning that if he showed himself he would get a beating. The priest went to a dresser drawer, got a revolver and then opened the door. The thief by that time was making a getaway and as he passed into the hall leading to the entrance of the rectory, Fr. Crowley fired a shot into the floor of the living room to intimidate the crook, who fled from the house and disappeared through Huntington street. Fr. Crowley notified the police of the attempted burglary and several officers were dispatched to the house. A search of the neighborhood was made, but no suspicious person was found.

Shower For Norwich Nurse.

Miss Mary McGibney, of Norwich, soon to become the bride of Edward Moran, of Norwich, was given a miscellaneous shower at the home of Helen Sullivan, 231 Connecticut avenue, in this city, last night. Miss McGibney is a graduate of the Lawrence school of nurses in New London and was generously remembered by her associates with gifts. Luncheon was served. About twenty-five guests were present.

A shower was given for Veronica Casey, who is to wed Henry O'Brien Sept. 17. Miss Ellen Twomey arranged the event and it was held at her home.

Miss Katherine Troland Showered.

Miss Katherine Troland is to become the bride of James J. Flood, an attorney of this city so friends gave a shower for her last evening, at the home of Marjorie McBride in Lincoln avenue.

Dismissals from Lawrence hospital today were Lawrence Bera, of Uncasville; Frank Jones, Waterford; Mrs. Jane Shaw and daughter, Ocean avenue and Richard Nadella, of 28 North Bank street.

The Harbor club and its auxiliary, the Faire Harbour club held a dance and bridge last evening which was arranged by a committee, Mrs. T. N. M. Lathrop, Mrs. John H. Lane, Mrs. Leon Geer, Mrs. L. F. Kedzie and Mrs. William Savard. There was also dancing and a feast.

Put Blame on Marshall.

Automobiles operated by William A. Reynolds, of Montauk avenue, and Frank Marshall, of Maple avenue, both of this city were in a head-on collision at station 14, Waterford, yesterday afternoon. Marshall is held for recklessness and will be in Waterford town court Monday. The road is wide open at the point where the collision occurred and the crash came when the Marshall car was driven against the Reynolds car coming in an opposite direction. State Policemen Smith and McKenzie of Groton barracks made the arrest and the information they got put the responsibility on Marshall. Donald Magner, who was an occupant of one of the cars, is in Lawrence hospital with very serious injuries.

William T. Lugenbwl, chief petty officer in the United States coast guard and residing on Maple avenue, was in the police court this morning charged with breach of the peace and intoxication. His case was continued until Oct. 6 so that his behavior can be noted and if he commits any such offense as that which resulted in his arrest last night he undoubtedly will be given a jail sentence. Lugenbwl was drinking freely last night and went to his home where he quarreled with his wife. The coast guarder, not content with verbally abusing his wife finally attacked and beat her. Not intending to put up with that sort of treatment, Mrs. Lugenbwl made complaint to the police and her husband was arrested by Patrolmen Frank Philopena and Ernest Opperman. In his own defense Lugenbwl said that it was only when he was drinking that he beat his wife and pleaded with the court to extend leniency to him for he said that if he was sentenced to jail he would be dishonorably discharged from the service. Lugenbwl was recently restricted from shore liberty at the state pier for abusing his wife.

James H. Treadwell, 82 West Colt street and George F. Herle, 350 Montauk avenue, were charged with violations of the city's traffic ordinances, and as neither driver presented himself in court their respective bonds of $2 were declared forfeited.

Four cases of intoxication were tried. In three instances the men were discharged while another was given suspension of judgment.

Watch Not Stolen

Mrs. N. L. Matthews, 79 Garfield avenue, reported to the police tonight that she had recovered her watch which she reported lost Sunday as having been stolen from her home. Mrs. Matthews stated that she found the watch in the same place where she had left it.

But a solitary case of intoxication awaits hearing in the police court tomorrow. The man was arrested this afternoon on North Bank street.

MRS. ISABEL DOUGLAS SERIOUSLY INJURED

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 6—Mrs. Isabel Douglas, 74, residing at 40 Mountain avenue, is in a critical condition at Lawrence-Memorial hospital as a result of injuries and shock which the woman suffered last night when she was struck by an automobile. She received a fractured right collarbone and shoulder and lacerations of the hands. Mrs. Douglas was on Bank street and at Pearl street she attempted to cross to the opposite side. Hardly had the woman stepped from the curb than an automobile driven by Walter Tucker, 492 Vauxhall street, which was traveling at a fast rate of speed, struck the woman with great force for she was thrown violently to the pavements. Pedestrians who went to Mrs. Douglas' assistance realized that the woman was seriously injured and caused her to be hastened to the hospital.

RECKLESS DRIVING CHARGE AGAINST DE SANTIS

John DeSantis, 12 Woodbridge street, was arrested this morning by Patrolman Lawrence Fardy charged with reckless driving and will be in the police court tomorrow. He was arrested upon complaint of Oliver Gardner, West Farms, Yantic. Gardner's automobile had been parked beside the curb on Bank street, near Montauk avenue. As Gardner drove away from the curb and headed southerly, the automobile driven by DeSantis sideswiped it in an effort of the driver to pass the Gardner auto. In hitting the side of the auto, DeSantis lost complete control of the steering wheel with the result that the auto climbed over the curbing and crashed against a plate glass window of the store of Charles Satti.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Broadway Theatre.

"The New Show World" opens a dazzling vista of super-film production in the showing tomorrow at the Broadway of the initial offering "The Dance of Life." This amazing feature, spectacular and colorful, differs from all other similar films, in that it conveys a heart-appealing story of human interest that will thrill everyone in the audiences. Filmed from the tremendous stage success "Burlesque," the "Dance of Life" has everything, ribtickling comedy, deep pathos, vivid drama, beautiful girls, classy costumes, "whistley" music, specially written from the production, massive scenic effects, and gorgeous scenes in natural colors. Hal Skelley, the inimitable "Skid" of Burlesque, has his original role in the film, and with lovely, clever Nancy Carroll, gives an authentic interpretation of a team of vaudeville hoofers in their ups and down over the "big-time." A hand-picked chorus of eye-filling beauty, called from the big Broadway stage production and trained by masters of stage dancing furnish a colorful background for the intensely interesting story of "The Dance of Life." Intimate scenes of back stage life, on stage and in the dressing rooms, hotel life "between jumps," and shots of the actual stage production and of the audience, make a varied pattern of laughter and tears, mirth and sobs, music and gaiety which must go on despite heartaches and pain, truly a human document that will hold everyone breathless to the last foot of film. Norwich has never seen a production so massive and beautiful as "The Dance of Life," an impressive introduction to the wonderful production line-up of the "new show world." The program is augmented with an all-talking Octavus Roy Cohen comedy of high-life in the Birmingham, Ala. Darktown, "Oft in the Silly Night," the latest Paramount sound newsreel, and one of those popular "bouncing ball" song cartoons, "Mother Pin a Rose on Me."

Palace Theatre

A slice of campus life is portrayed in Columbia's "The College Coquette," the all-talking picture which opened at the Palace theatre Thursday. The plot revolves around the unselfish friendship of two girls in a co-educational institution. The girls are exact opposites in personality and habit. One is a flirt, ever ready for a lark and not happy unless surrounded by a score of jealous swains. The other is demure, a clinging vine, who has been so restricted that she doesn't know anything about men. Ruth Taylor handles the first characterization in a finished manner. Jobyna Ralston, as the unsophisticated chum, who is deceived by a carefree youth, plays her part with a sympathetic understanding.

The supporting male roles are enacted by John Holland and William Collier, Jr., John Holland, as the football coach who falls in love with the coquette, is the ideal choice for the role. He is handsome, has a striking physique and an air of reserve. William Collier, Jr., plays the gay deceiver supernerby. The big moment in the picture when Ruth Taylor saves the reputation of her girl friend by sacrificing her own deserves special mention.

This production has benefited greatly by the use of talking and sound technique. The voices of the entire cast reproduce naturally and clearly. College quartettes, laughter, song, the shuffle of dancing feet and the cheering of football fans are a few of the sound effects that convey the atmosphere of the gay life at a co-educational university. George Archainbaud is responsible for the excellent direction.

Also Pathe sound news, "The Constable" an all-talking comedy and Vitaphone acts.

This theatre will close at the conclusion of our performance this evening and will re-open on Saturday, Sept. 21st.

Al-Pierre Tab, Willimantic.

The Al-Pierre Tabarin, one of the most popular meccas of dancing in this section of the state will formally open for the 1929-'30 season this Saturday evening. The Peerless orchestra, delightful music-makers, who have been playing at Lakeside casino, South Coventry, during the summer, will furnish the music for the opening night and have been engaged for the season.

In anticipation that last year's record attendance at the week end dances will be broken this season, the proprietors of the Al-Pierre, Albert J. Piche and Pierre J. Laramee have left nothing undone for the complete amusement and accommodation of patrons. The floor has been put in perfect condition and the entire hall generally redecorated. A number of special events, which will be announced later, have been planned for the winter months, all of which should prove strong box office magnets to the dance lovers of eastern Connecticut.

PLAINFIELD WEAVER SLASHES WRISTS AND THROAT WITH FATAL RESULTS

(Special to The Bulletin)

PLAINFIELD, Sept. 6—Found with his wrists and throat cut in his room at the Lawton Inn, Gus Sanderson, a mill weaver, a resident of this village for several years, died Thursday morning and the body has been sent to the home of his sister in Washington, R. I., where the funeral and burial are to take place Saturday.

Sanderson's suicidal attempt on his

Sanderson's suicidal attempt was not learned until Thursday morning when he was found in bed in his room with both wrists and his throat gashed and weak from loss of blood. It is believed that he made the attempt on his life during Wednesday night shortly after he had returned to his room after being out with some of his friends. The cuts in his wrists were made lengthwise and that in the throat was deep but not of great length.

Dr. Arthur Chase was called as soon as Sanderson was found and the physician gave him medical treatment, but the man's death ensued about 8 o'clock.

Sanderson, who was of middle age, had formerly been employed at the inn. So far as known here his only relative is his sister in Washington, R. I.

LITTLE GLIMPSES OF WELL-KNOWN ARTISTS

Wilson Irvine, who spent last winter travelling and painting in Spain, has performed a truly great service to artists and all tourists who follow him, by obtaining for them municipal protection from the annoyance of children who so often follow and torment strangers, particularly those who set up their easels and attempt to paint in picturesque districts. While in Ronda Mr. Irvine was so annoyed by being made a target for their stone-throwing, jeers and other unwelcome attentions that he told the hotel-keeper that he must leave. Naturally the hotel-keeper did not care to lose his guests—Ronda is one of those places where tourists are the greatest source of income to the village—and so he suggested that the artist accompany him to the mayor's office. This chief magistrate was an ex-army officer and a most courteous gentleman, who was greatly distressed at what Mr. Irvine told him. Moreover, he was a man of action; immediately he issued a proclamation to the effect that hereafter not only children annoying tourists, especially artists, but also their parents, would be severely punished. This attended to, he invited the painter to go with him to the office of the chief of police, who immediately assigned him a burly officer of the law as bodyguard. Thus Mr. Irvine was enabled to continue with his painting.

One of his interesting canvases in the Lyme Art association's 28th annual exhibition held during this summer of 1929, called "Grazalema Range," is an unusual treatment of landscape, patterned in patches of green fields and orange-brown bare earth, with distant mountains looming up in palest grey or oyster white and deep slate, instead of the conventional deep blue or purple tones.

Charles Vezin, a prominent member of the Lyme Art association, is an ardent advocate of early rising! His reasons for getting up with the sun are aesthetic rather than calisthenic. For many years he has delighted in putting on canvas these elusive aspects of dawn which he has observed in his rambles about New York. Late risers have no idea of the violet shadows and rosy mists which transform the city into a poetic harmony; he interprets this fleeting loveliness for those who will not take the trouble to see it for themselves.

Apropos of his matutinal excursions with the sketch box, he says that once, returning to his hotel about 6:30 a. m., after accomplishing a good two hours' work, he was amused to have the elevator boy say as he got out at his floor, "Good night, sir," in the manner of one who watches the reveller return. Evidently this youth was unable to comprehend a person who got up at dawn because he liked to and did not regard 6:30 as merely the fag end of the evening.

COURT DIRECTS NOLLE IN THEFT CASE AGAINST CODY

Granting a plea for leniency, Judge Arthur F. Libby nolled the theft charge against John Cody, 43, of Boston, when he was presented in the city court Friday morning. Cody was charged with the theft of a fur from a woman on a New England bus. Cody was arrested a week ago and had been in jail awaiting trial.

Cody informed the court that on the day of the theft he was so intoxicated that he might have committed murder and have been unaware of the fact. The fur piece, valued at $160, is owned by Mrs. Mary Brewster of Jewett City. She left the fur on one of the bus seats when she alighted from the bus in this city. Cody happened along about that time, and picking up the fur piece, took it with him to the barge, Astoria, at Allyn's Point. He is a member of the barge crew. While in a drunken stupor aboard the barge, he lost the fur and it later turned up in Boston.

Cody, learning that the fur was in Boston, sent a friend to the Massachusetts city to secure its return to the owner. It is understood that the fur is now in the possession of the Boston police.

POETRY

Lonely Hills

Lonely hills!
Tall guardians of a darkly timbered land,
Dreaming in solitude,
Sky kissed, by rays of sun-fire spanned,
Lonely hills
Of slowly changing colors, smoky blue
And shadow mottled green;
Tarnished silver gray and wild grape hue
With tawny slopes
Cloud patterned, draped in opaline mist,
Dimly mirrored
In streams of shadowy amethyst,
Hills of silence,
Wild dreams sleep hidden in your deep ravines,
And night brings starry, darkly tinted screens
To frame your spired ridges,
Oh, lonely hills, you call me to your breast,
Promising your dreams and calm and rest!

—Iris Lora Thorpe.

Earth Bound

They think because I sew and bake
And sweep a white pine floor
I never think of winding roads
Somewhere beyond my door!

They think me deaf to messages
Of winds in trees that bend
And sway in sheer abandonment,
While all I do is mend!

'Tis true, my body dwells at home
While a white shoreline calls
The roving heart and sould of me
Beyond these humble walls!

And so I sing and bake my bread
And baste my narrow seams,
But while I put my loaves in pans
My heart is light with dreams!

—Christel Hastings, in Good Housekeeping.

HUMOR OF THE DAY

She—Darling, do you think there can be people in the moon?

He—How could there be? Where would they go when there is no moon?—Kikeriki, Vienna.

Farmer—Hello, Ed. Say, I've got a freak over on my place—a two-legged calf.

Neighbor—Yeah, I know it. He came over to call on my daughter last night.—Pathfinder.

The business men were talking over their employes.

"Well, old Johnson has grown gray-haired in my service."

"Pooh, I've got a girl with me who has grown yellow, brown and red-haired in my service."—Boston Transcript.

The common oriental tea of trade is now produced in small commercial quantities in Mexico, according to the Mexican ministry of industry, commerce of labor, which has some samples of this possibly new agricultural product on exhibition at Mexico City. This Mexican tea, which is of good quality, is being produced by a private planter who has been experimenting near Cuicatlan, Oaxaca, for some years. The fact that Mexico can produce this tea may become of great significance, for heretofore all tea-drinking countries have been dependent upon the orient with its monopoly prices.

GERMANY IS TO CONSIDER EUROPEAN FEDERATION

Will Examine the Proposal on Condition That the Federation Be Purely Economic in Nature—It is Deemed Likely That Foreign Minister Stresemann Will Make His Point Clear When He Addresses the Assembly of the League of Nations Today.

GENEV,A Sept. 8.—(AP)—That Germany is willing to examine the possibility of forming a European confederation but only on condition that it be purely economic in nature was the attitude gleaned from authoritative sources here tonight.

It was extremely likely that Foreign Minister Gustav Stresemann would make this clear when he addresses the assembly of the league of nations tomorrow. German sopesmen are as vigorous as the French in opposing any scheme for a "United States of Europe" which would be directed or seem to be directed against the United States of America. For one thing, the Germans say they need American capital to develop their industries and pay their reparations bill.

With Premier Briand of France inviting all of the chief European delegates to a luncheon tomorrow to permit a frank exchange of views on his confederation project, the topic tonight was the subject of lively discussion. The opinion most often heard was that the contemplated scheme will necessarily be extremely modest in character at the start and perhaps take the form of a regional grouping along the lines of the Pan-American union.

Although no delegates admit officially that American economic power would be the driving force in causing Europe to unite, this feeling is known to exist in some circles. Privately some men have said that with the existing possibility of an increase in the American protective tariff and with the American desire to obtain the "most favored nation" clause treatment with European countries considerations of mutual interest would seem to point to the wisdom of Europe uniting, at least economically.

During the economic meetings at the league during the past two years some delegates have alluded to the loss of markets in Latin America previously held by European exporting countries. On the other hand some quarters claimed that a more prosperous and more united Europe with removal of trade restrictions and reduction in tariffs would prove in the long run profitable to the United States by opening u new markets for American goods.

TRIO GO ON TRIAL TODAY IN DETROIT FOR MURDER

DETROIT, Sept. 8—(AP)—A melodrama which began the night of January 9 with the barking of pistols and rifles before the office of Ralph A. Wood, Wyandotte real estate dealer, will have another act written with the murder trial of Wood, his business partner, Herbert L. Sullivan and Cecil W. Holt, who acted as informer for Wood and John Mars. The trial begins tomorrow in circuit court here.

Wood, Holt and Sullivan are accused of slaying Ambrose L. Hagerty, a 24 year old Irish boy, who had been employed as a private policeman. After Hagerty fell mortally wounded in a police ambush before Wood's office, charges and counter charges became so numerous and complicated that it required a one-man grand jury three months to investigate the case and submit a report.

Before the night of January 9 Wood and Holt had gone to authorities with the declaration that Mrs. Grace M. Wood, estranged wife of Wood, was plotting against his life and had hired thugs to "take him for a ride" and leave him dead at the road side. Municipal, county and state officers decided to ambush the alleged would-be assassins and take them in the act. Wood was to put a pad in his hat and submit to a blackjacking. However, when Hagerty, Taylor Pearce and William Thompson, alleged accomplices appeared before Wood's office, Wood appeared at the door and immediately opened fire. There was general gun play and Hagerty fell, shot with ten bullets. Pearce, Thompson and Mrs. Wood were arrested the same night.

Divergent Reports Of China And Russia

Both Sides Have Reported Cases of Violence Along the Border by the Other.

(By The Associated Press)

Contradictory developments came Sunday in the troubled Manchurian situation between China and soviet Russia.

Both sides reported unwarranted violence along the border by the other. An official Tass News Agency dispatch from Vladivostok claimed that Chinese artillery and rifles had opened fire on soviet troops across the border.

Chinese sources were quoted by Tokyo as describing 20 hours of fighting near Dalainor, in western Manchuria, "with considerable loss on both sides" before the Chinese repulsed an invasion by 1,000 Russians. It also is charged that an unsuccessful attempt at invasion by the Russians was made on the eastern border on Friday morning.

As opposed to these threats of outbreak of open warfare the Chinese minister to Germany telegraphed Nanking that the soviet government had withdrawn its insistence that a new Russian general manager and assistant manager of the Chinese Eastern railway in Manchuria be installed as a preliminary to peace pact negotiations.

It was this demand, avowedly, which had held up opening negotiations for more than a month. The former Russian manager and his assistant were removed by the Chinese early in July on charges of carrying on communist propaganda and misusing funds of the railway. The Chinese declined to agree to accepting new Russian officials until the whole matter had been gone into.

HAD TO ROW OUT 150 FT. IN ORDER TO SERVE WARRANT

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 8—The city's zoning ordinance was the cause of four arrests Saturday. Richard C. Davison, 15 Blackhall street; James Carney, 13 Archer court; William Devoe, 114 Bayonet street and Selvis Baruffa, 35 Gorton street, were arrested for violation of a section of the ordinance. The men will be in court Monday. The arrest was made by Detective Sergeant John Cavanaugh, Sergeant Patrick Murphy and Automobile Patrol Officer William Corcoran, at the instigation of the city manager. The section of the zoning law under which Contractor Davidson and his men will be prosecuted, prohibits the conduct of commercial business on Pequot avenue, opposite Keeney lane, which section is classified as a residential section. Clarence W. Thompson recently purchased property there and decided to conduct a large gasoline station from which boats could be supplied with fuel. Thompson obtained permission from the government to extend his pier, insofar as the extension did not interfere in any way with navigation, Thompson then sought to cause large tanks to be put into position and gave the contract for the work to Davidson. Work was started the past week and when it became known to city officials that the tanks were being installed steps were taken to stop the work. Thompson refused to order the work stopped, so yesterday afternoon a warrant for the arrest of the workers were issued and given to Detective Sergeant Cavanaugh to serve. In order to apprehend the workers, the officers were compelled to row about 150 feet from the shore to reach the location of building operations.

ORIENTAL CLUB RAIDED— LIQUOR, CARDS, BOOKS SEIZED

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Spt. 8—The police early this morning raided the Oriental Club, Inc., 12 Methodist street and seized a quantity of liquor and gambling paraphernalia, besides arresting one of the subscribers to the charter, who was in charge of the place when the raid was made, and several young men found assembled there. The officer arrested is Abalan Khoury, 147 North Bank street, who is charged with keeping a gambling resort and keeping liquor for the purpose of sale. He was released upon furnishing a surety on his bond of $1,000 and Albert Sanalin, Louis E. Lawson, Francis Leo Thomas, Price Kelley, Fred Shasa and Thomas Duffy were arrested charged with being frequenters. All of the men will be in court tomorrow.

The building in which the club is located had been suspected some time of being a resort for drinking and gambling and that when it was corporated such action was attempted to defeat the law. When the raiders entered the building and made their search for evidence there were found four quarters of gin, and whiskey, several whiskey glasses and many packs of cards. These were seized as were books, supposedly for records, which contained various entries, some purporting to represent the payment of dues and the expenditures of the club. In one book was found what represented to be the record of corporation of the club. After the wording relating the identity of the club the following appears to show the purposes of its formation: "To promote among the members of this organization, sociability and good fellowship and clean, wholesome amusement and recreation. To maintain club rooms and do all erance and accomplishments of the things necessary for the lawful furthpurposes hereinbefore set forth." The club was formed April 10, 1929, and the subscribers are Abalan Khoury, Daniel Wain and Harris Goldstein.

A New Menace; Kill And Run Seaplaneist

One Man Was Killed and Another Seriously Injured in Jamaica Bay.

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—(AP)—Skimming the surface of Jamaica bay at high speed, a seaplane today ripped through a small motorbot, killing one man and seriously injuring another. It then rose into the air and disappeared in the mist.

The victims were fishing off the foot of Flatbush avenue when the accident occurred. Police were told the dead man was known as "Brownie" and he was said to have lived at Bergen beach.

The injured man was John Dee, 55, of Woodhaven. He was in a critcial condition in a hospital, suffering from broken arms and legs, concussion of the brain and numerous bruises.

Dee told police he and his companion heard the seaplane coming through a heavy mist and shouted, but the plane struck their boat, cutting it in two.

Part of the plane struck "Brownie," breaking his neck. As the little craft sank other boats sped to the rescue, picking the two men up out of the water.

WHY GARMENT WORKERS' STRIKE WAS SETTLED

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—(AP)—Because of specialization that goes Henry Rord one better, the strike here this week of 7,000 garment workers, not one of whom is ever employed to make a whole garment, was felt throughout the industry and perhaps accounts for the celerity with which an agreement ending the strike was reached.

The 7,000 were merely pleaters, tuckers, hemstitchers, and embroiders. But banded together, exclusive of all the other crafts in the making of woman's dress, they were able to virtually tie up for several days the garment industry in New York.

Here is the reason:

A woman's dress with a pleated skirt—and pleated skirts are still very popular—did not have a chance of being finished in any union shop in New York city while that strike was on.

And this was during the rush season, while dresses, pleated and unpleated, were being turned out by the thousand here in the biggest garment center in America.

Out of some 50,000 workers employed in the making of women's dresses and coats in New York, only about 5,000, says David Dubinsky, acting president of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' union, actually are employed to make a whole garment.

Those 5,000 are custom dressmakers, who work in the small and exclusive shops along Fifth and Madison avenues. They qualify at doing all the work on gowns and wraps but cost from $250 to $2,500.

TO PUBLISH INTERVIEW WITH W. R. SHEARER

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—(AP)—New York newspapers tomorrow will publish an interview with William B. Shearer, the first statement he has made in his own behalf since President Hoover called the attention of the nation to his activities as a self-admitted paid propagandist against naval reduction and called for an explanation of those activities from the shipbuilding companies Shearer said employed him.

The interview was obtained on the railroad station platform at Stamford, Conn.

Shearer said that when he went to the three-party naval limitations conference at Geneva in 1927 he "was supplied with naval intelligence data officially."

He said that until called before the proposed senate investigation, scheduled for Tuesday, he would not reveal the names of the navy officers or navy department executives who supplied these data.

Mr. Shearer said his discharge by the shipbuilding companies was at the instigation of Secretary of State Kellogg.

He said that his reports from Geneva were sent also to Henry C. Hunter, counsel to the national council of American shipbuilders, composed of the leading American shipbuilding and marine equipment manufacturers.

Mr. Hunter tonight denied he or the council ever received such reports.

BODIES OF EIGHT PERSONS FOUND IN WRECKED PLANE

Transcontinental Air Transport City of San Francisco Struck the Side of a Mountain Near Mount Taylor, N. M., Last Tuesday—Charred Bodies of the Victims Were Found in the Seared Airplane—There Was Evidence on the Ground About the Plane of an Explosion.

GRANT, N. M., Sept. 8—(AP)—The last search for the Transcontinental Air Transport plane, City of San Francisco, ended today as a party of forest rangers, an ambulance crew and newspapermen lifted a burned and crumpled fuselage from the charred bodies of the five passengers and a crew of three on the side of Mount Taylor, seven miles from its summit and 27 miles northwest of Grant.

The bodies were unrecognizable and, with the exception of that of the woman passenger which had been burned less severely than others, may only be identified by dental work.

The impact of the plane, which disappeared last Tuesday and was located first yesterday from the air by Pilot George K. Rice, of a Western Air Express passenger plane, plowed a swath 300 feet long through the heavily wooded mountainside. It had thrown the bodies forward until all were crowded toward the front of the cabin. One lay virtually under the crushed and almost totally destroyed center motor of the tri-motored ship, the latest model passenger liner.

An area of more than 300 feet square about the wreckage literally was covered with debris.

The plane, following its regular route from Albuquerque, New Mexico, to Los Angeles on its last flight, had crashed into a pine tree 67 feet above the ground. The left motor struck the tree, and its propeller slashed deeply its trunk and felled the upper part. At the right a few paces farther on a second stub stood, a little larger in diameter, against which another motor received the blow which ended its usefulness. Less than a dozen feet away in a double-strewn swale this motor lay, not a whole piece of metal left.

For approximately 100 feet farther the air liner had plunged, carrying with it destruction to trees, some of which were broken off, while others literally were uprooted. Boulders which had lain close to the root of the trees had been tossed for a score of feet.

As the big ship tore its way through the heavy growth of spruce and pine, it shed its tail and then its wings one by one.

There was not a piece of the all-metal plane, with the exception of doors and windows, left intact after the crash through the trees.

As the ship dropped to the ground it buried its nose and part of the landing gear two feet in the rocky soil. Gasoline from its tanks, broken by the snapping of wings, became ignited, throwing burning gasoline on the bodies of passengers and crew, experts with the party believed.

On the arm of one of the pilots there was strapped a wrist watch that had stopped at 11.01. The pilots were required to carry Pacific coast time on flights between Albuquerque and Los Angeles, which placed the time of the crash at one minute after noon, mountain time. Valencia county authorities said this would indicate the plane never passed over Grant on the morning of its fatal ride on the winds, but had gone directly from Albuquerque to the point of the crash.

Aviators who were in the party of searchers declared it appeared Pilot J. B. Stowe was blinded by the severe rain and wind storm which beat Mount Taylor from the southwest, and while keeping his bearings, did not realize he was flying so near the mountain, and the wind drift carried him onto the peak.

There was no indication the plane was struck by lightning.

Those who lost their lives in the wreck were:

Amasa B. McGaffey, wealthy lumberman of Albuquerque.

William Henry Beers, New York golf magazine editor.

William Livermore, shipping head of Boston.

Mrs. Corina Raymond, wife of George E. Raymond, Glendale, Cal., employe of T. A. T.

M. M. Campbell, paper concern sales manager, Cincinnati, Ohio.

J. B. Stowe, chief pilot of Clovis, N. M.

Edwin A. Dietel, co-pilot, of New Braunfels, Tex.

C. F. Canfield, New York, courier.

Officials of the T. A. T., who accompanied the party, wanted to remove the bodies immediately, but United States Forester J. M. Mims, who had been commissioned by Valencia county authorities, refused to grant permission. A quarrel followed and blows narrowly were averted. Mims insisted the bodies must not be touched until the coroner and district attorney arrive.

$10,000 IN REWARDS FOR DISCOVERER OF PLANE

LOS ANGELES, Sept. —(AP)—Officials of Western Air Express announced today that they had filed a claim for Lieut. George A. Rice, pilot of their eastbound plane, who yesterday discovered the wreckage of the Transcontinental Air Transport missing liner City of San Francisco, in distribution of fewards totalling $10,000 which had been offered for the finding of the ship. Acceptance of the rewards, however, the company said, would be left entirely with Lieut. Rice and his aerial crew, whose vigilance ended one of the greatest air searches in the history of aviation.

Lieut. Rice personally had posted no claim of the rewards. $5,000 was offered by T. A. T. to any man or group of men finding the plane, and $5,000 was offered by the parents of C. F. Canfield of New York, courier aboard the ill-fated liner.

BRINGING BODIES OUT ON HAND-BORNE LITTERS

GRANT, N. BINGHAM TO TAKE LEADING PART IN TARIFF DEBATE

(Special to The Bulletin)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8—It has been decided by high republicans that Mrs. Alvan Hert shall be re-elected vice chairman of the republican national committee, and it is unlikely any other name will be formally presented at the meeting tomorrow.

There is practically no opposition to the selection of Houston for chairman, and the slate will go through quickly.

Senator and Mrs. Walcott, who have spent the summer sailing in southern waters will arrive here tomorrow.

Senator Bingham is here, ready to take a leading part in tariff debate, but as the house has decided not to meet in regular session before October 14, instead of September 23, on account of delay in getting the tariff bill out of the senate, Floor Leader Tilson and Connecticut members of the house are not expected until the middle of October.

BLAMES JEWS FOR RECENT OUTRAGES IN PALESTINE

JERUSALEM, Sept. 8—(AP)—The grand mufti, head of the Arabs in Palestine, in a press interview today accused Jewish ambition and greed of provoking the recent outbreaks to bring pressure to bear on the British government.

He said that if the Arab attacks had been premeditated other steps would have been taken for simultaneous attacks on all other Jewish colonies with cutting of the telephone and telegraph lines and similar steps, which had not been adopted.

The mufti complained that even now while individual Jews were able to walk through Arab quarters without escort during the last nine days there had been several Jewish attacks on Arabs. These he said paved the way for creation of further trouble.

The country was everywhere quiet today and Jerusalem itself was regaining a normal appearance.

ANOTHER GANGSTER KILLING IN CHICAGO

CHICAGO, Sept. 8—(AP)—The slaying of Patrick O'Donnell, 33, in a speakeasy on the West Side today brought to four the number of gangsters who have been killed since a week ago.

O'Donnell deviated from underworld practice by naming his slayer as Joey Mangels, alleged blind pig operator and hoodlum. Mangels is a reputed member of a North Side gang and police fear the shooting may result in reprisals.

The first of the week's gang executions was that of early Monday when Henry Connors, minor political terrorist, was shot down in a cabaret. Three days later, C. Cawley and Edward Westcott, alleged racketeers, were shot and killed.

TWO TRUCK DRIVERS WERE SHOT IN NEW YORK

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—(AP)—Two truck drivers were shot tonight in what police said they believed was a continuation of a feud between beer racketeers. The shootings followed within 24 hours the slaying last night of James L. "Buzz" Donovan, described by police as a beer runner from Hoboken, N. J.

Robert Burns, of New York, a brother of Jackie Burns, who was killed in 1925 and whom police said was a beer runner, and John Lyons, 18, who said he had no home, arrived at Bellevue hospital in taxicabs within a few minutes of each other, and told of being shot as they were walking in First avenue. They said they did not know each other. Each declared he had not seen his assailant.

Burns was shot near the heart and his condition was described as critical. Lyons had a wound in his right arm. They said they did not know whether the bullets had come from an automobile or from a window. The shootings apparently took place within a few minutes of each other.

Police found in Lyons' pocket seven steel-jacketed bullets but no gun.

150 LIVES LOST WHEN STEAMER KURU CAPSIZED

HELSINGFORS, Finland, Sept. 8—(AP)—The total loss of life resulting when the steamer Kuru capsized off Tammersfors yesterday now is estimated at 150 including a number of children coming home from school for the wee end.

A heavy storm was raging when the steamer left the harbor and within 15 minutes it was struck by a huge wave. The vessel sank within five minutes. Most of the passengers were below at the time. A panic broke out, passengers tried to jump through cabin windows and many seized lifebelts but they were almost completely uninstructed in the use of them.

The high waves made rescue work extremely difficult. After rescue boats had worked for hours they saved about 20. Lifeboats had been launched when the Kuru began to sink but they were quickly swamped.

Mr. Adams and Chief Brown had the engine out for a trial at the small pond in the old rubber mill yard Saturday afternoon when it functioned perfectly. Chief Brown is of the opinion that it will pump about a hundred gallons a minute. The officials of the fire company make the suggestion that an old Ford car be procured so as to install the fire engine on the chassis to provide an easier means of moving the apparatus about. In addition to this old fire engine the borough is equipped with the large up-to-date Reo gasoline-powered pumper so that in case of a serious fire more effective fire fighting work can be accomplished.

WHATCHMAN CHAS. F. ADAMS FOUND DEAD IN NEW STORE

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., Sept. 8—When workmen arrived Saturday morning to continue the stocking and arranging of displays for the new Montgomery Ward store in their recently completed business block on Canal street, they were unable to gain entrance. Forcing their way in, the discovery was made that the night watchman, Charles F. Adams, 78, had died during the night. The lifeless body was found in a large chair on the top floor where he had probably sunk exhausted during the night. Indications showed that trips had been made by him to the basement, main, mezzanine and top floors during the night. Medical Examiner Dr. Michael H. Scanlon was called to view the body and gave his opinion that death was due to natural causes, probably heart disease, and permission was given for its removal to undertaking parlors across the street. It was some time before identification was established as only the name "Adams" appeared on a pay envelope found in his pocket where he had placed it when it was given him the night before.

Mr. Adams, coming to Westerly to visit with relatives, had boarded at White Rock. According to Medical Examiner Scanlon he had died several hours before the body was found at 7 a. m. He had been married twice and both wives are buried in Oak Grove cemetery, Ashaway. In Westerly Mr. Adams had resided with his half-brother, George W. Burdick, and his niece, Mrs. Bertha M., wife of William A. Mayhew, 14 Main street, White Rock.

Pierce, of 41 Olney street, Watertown, Mass. The Massachusetts car was reported as turning into the drive to the store when the cars came together and both were badly damaged. Dr. Michael H. Scanlon had to treat cuts on Miss Ferraro's head. Patti and Pierce were also given medical attention. Patrolman Simeon Shortman, of Pawcatuck, found Patti near the ice cream plant and he was taken to the Liberty street lockup.

WESTERLY DELEGATES AT LEGION CONVENTION

At the eleventh annual convention of the Rhode Island department of the American Legion, which closed Saturday night in Warren, at which time the state auxiliary held its convention, Westerly members of both organizations were candidates for state department offices. Past Department Commander Walter F. Thorp, of Pawcatuck, a past commander of Harold W. Merrill post, No. 16, A. L., of Westerly, was a candidate for the post of national committeeman for the state department. It was evident that former National Committeeman Bertram W. Hall of Bristol, due to irregularities in his handling of under-age certificates as a member of the school committee of this town would have opposition to his re-election, but he was nominated, as was also Thorp, of Westerly, Raymond B. Littlefield of Central Falls and Rev. James B. Claypool, of Newport, R. I. When Wall withdrew his name, his strength was thrown to Littlefield, and on the second ballot Thorp withdrew and Littlefield was elected.

Mrs. Lydia Y. Brown, wife of Abial B. Brown, former Westerly Legion post commander, was a candidate for second vice president of the auxiliary. She was opposed by Miss Frances O'Reilly, of Woonsocket. The ballot stood 78 for Mrs. Brown, 37 for Miss O'Reilly. Among Westerly delegates to the convention were Mr. and Mrs. Elmer R. Sherman, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick C. Young, Mr. and Mrs. Abial B. Brown, H. Russell Burdick, W. F. Thorp.

A peculiar tempest, with thunder, lightning and later a heavy downpour of rain visited Westerly Saturday night, and caught many late theatre-goers before they were able to reach their homes. Departure from the picture houses was hastened by the failure of the electric current, reported as due to the Montville transmission line being put out of service. Approaching in a heavy fog it was almost impossible to tell from which quarter the storm came.

MYSTIC

LOCAL INTEREST IN GIFTS TO NEW TOWN HIGH SCHOOL

A large number of local people attended the dedication of the new Robert E. Fitch high school at Poquonoc Bridge, last week. The presentation of gifts included: The outside flag for the flag pole, Junior Order of American Mechanics, Washington council, No. 7; the Bible for the auditorium, Liberty council, No. 8, Daughters of America; the inside silk flag for the auditorium, Anna Warner Bailey chapter D. A. R., Groton; engravings of famous Americans, Entre Nous Literary society, Groton; pictures for the classrooms, Groton grange No. 176; "The Ship Dauntless Rounding the Cape," painted by Lars Thorsen, Noank; establishment of a fund, the interest only to be used annually as an award to the graduate excelling in the social studies (details to be announced later), League of Women Voters, borough of Groton; a book, "Groton, Conn., 1705-1905", Charles R. Stark; set of books, "The Nature Library," Mrs. Clara B. Whitman.

As long ago as 1922, the town of Groton felt the need of a modern high school. Charles P. Fitch died May 26, 1926. The terms of his will relating to the bequest to the town of Groton were: "I give, devise and bequeath all of said rest, residue and remainder to the town of Groton, to be used to build a high school, said high school to be built at Poquonoc Bridge, near site of present town hall of said town, and to be known as the Robert E. Fitch high school. In the event that said town does not build a high school and accept the provisions, within five years after the death of my niece, I do give the residue to the Groton Heights Baptist church." No action was taken for some time, and it became advisable to do something about it, if the town was going to have the money, so a group of citizens had several meetings, at which the three following resolutions were presented and favorably acted upon. 1. "That the town accept the fund for a high school building as provided under the terms of the will of Charles P. Fitch." 2. "That a building committee of seven be elected to provide and equip a suitable building for the town of Groton." 3. "That the sum of $140,000 be appropriated for this building project."

DANIELSON

SEVERAL WEEK END REVELLERS TO FACE COURT TODAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Sept. 8 — Though Labor day has come and gone, there was a generous amount of evidence during the early hours of this Sunday morning that the whoopee season has not as yet gone into a decline in this neck of the woods. Both state and local officers picked up celebrators in Danielson between three and five o'clock this morning who will be in Killingly's town court Monday to say whatever they may have to say to the judge about the escapades with which they will be charged.

Chief John McFarland and Night Officer Laird Winchell rounded up three young men early this morning in the Connecticut Village section of Danielson for creating a disturbance, and for trying to execute forward passes with milk bottles that had been left out on verandas and various other convenient places where the milkman would be looking for them an hour or two later.

Perhaps it was because it was a hot night, weatherwise, as well as otherwise, that brought developments that kept officers hopping around the borough clearing up cases arising from complaints that came in. In running down one of these State Officer Elton Nolan picked up Hubert Watson of Westerly about 3 o'clock this morning. Watson was being held at the barracks today, and will be in court Monday to plead to a charge of operating a motor vehicle in the manner that will be alleged against him and in the condition that he was in when taken into custody. No charges were preferred against the young woman who was riding with him, but she was detained at the barracks up to late this afternoon, when there was the prospect that arrangements would be completed for her release.

A somewhat different series of circumstances will entail the appearance in court Monday of John Sweiard, resident of the Mashentuck district of the town. Sweiard came dashing out of the old dirt road leading southward from the old town house at Killingly Center last night to cross the state road leading from Elmville to East Killingly, and crashed broadside into a car headed toward East Killingly that was being operated by William Harrell of this town. Harrell was so cut and bruised in the crash that he required the attention of a physician, and Dr. W. A. Tanner was called to attend him. Sweiard, more or less shaken up and bruised in the accident, was ordered to appear in court to answer to a charge of violating the rules of the road.

Where Chief John McFarland and Sergeant G. L. Gardner, state barracks, were today and why they went there remained a secret in police circles this afternoon, but it likely had something to do with the running down of clues that may eventually result in the arrest of the persons responsible for burglarizing the Church company store here over the Labor day holidays. It is believed that the police have obtained certain bits of information that promises interesting results and not unlikely the arrest of the raiders of than $800 worth of merchandise was the store, from which a little more taken away.

Danielson had its semi-annual Dollar day Saturday, and from the throngs of shoppers on the street, the number of buyers in the stores and the reports of merchants who talked about the matter this morning it appears to have been very much of a success. The participating business men made it a point to offer some surprisingly great values, and to widely advertise the same. The results would appear to have made their efforts worth while. There was an uncommonly large number of out of town buyers in town, many of them coming from distant points in eastern Connecticut.

The forecast that the entrance to Broad street at North Main street near the north end of Davis park is to be widened directs attention to the probability that the state highway department has not abandoned a project talked of widely two or three years ago of building an additional trunk line highway through Broad street and the Green Hollow road to a point between Central Village and Moosup.

The coming September fair of the Windham County Agricultural society, at Brooklyn, will be the 80th to be held there under the present organization, though similar exhibitions have been held at the grounds for upwards of 100 years. The premium list for this year, already published, proudly and justly, proclaims that this is "The Oldest Agricultural Society in the United States," the "Brooklyn Fair" as it is generally known has never gone in for various things that have turned the average exhibition of the kind in New England into a combination of carnival, musical comedy and sales mart, not to mention a score or more of other innovations. It remains today, after all the years, just what it started out to be—a real agricultural, dairy and allied endeavors fall show, for all of those interested in the work of that part of the population that sees to it that he milk comes around promptly every morning, that there are plenty of fresh vegetables for the countryside and an ample supply of everything that farm workers supply to those engaged in many other lines of production.

It may be necessary, it was said today, to extend parking restrictions to that area of Main street between Academy and Reynolds street. This section of street, on a double trunk line highway, is almost constantly jammed solid with cars, leaving only a narrow bit of traveled way where there is always danger of accident, however carefully drivers are managing their cars.

When Killingly's schools reopen for the second week of the new school year Monday morning the classroom work will be completely organized. Many changes have been made in the school system of the town the past year, but these have worked out well with the few days for organization that have gone before.

Politicians who are interested in candidacies for town offices where there promises to be plenty of opposition did not make this Sunday a day of rest. They were scurrying about, interviewing their henchmen and other friends and arranging for support at caucuses to be held within the week.

Radio fans, and also dealers, are again insisting that some sort of organization should be perfected in local territory to clear up noises originating from wire service lines that interfere with good reception, as has been done in many towns and cities where there exists a laudable degree of co-operation.

Danielson had no fire losses during the month of August, a matter that is of general interest and satisfaction. But at this time again comes the warning that the great majority of Danielson's fires are due to dirty and defective chimneys, and the days are near at hand when flues should be cleaned against the starting of heaters and kitchen ranges.

Horace A. C. Bentmann of Boston was a visitor today with friends in Danielson.

Light showers last night and during the early hours of this morning, accompanied by electrical displays, relieved in only very small degree the serious drought that has plagued this area of eastern Connecticut for a long term of weeks.

Rev. Antheleme Mollard, M. S., pastor of St. James' parish, who has been in Europe during the summer season, is to return to his charge in Danielson within a few days.

Labor day did not bring a close to the outdoor bathing season this year. This praticular dog day found many disporting themselves in waters of ponds or lakes in this vicinity where bathing is permitted.

Miss Dorothy Hamilton of Academy street and Chester Irwin, professional golfer at the Putnam Country club, are to be married Wednesday evening at an elaborate wedding at St. Alban's church.

Lights about the borough clicked off for a short interval this afternoon as thunder boomed overhead, and a bit more rain came to relieve the dry conditions that have prevailed during the summer season.

The usual precautions will be taken at the annual fair of the Windham County Agricultural society in Brooklyn, to be held within a few days, against grafting exhibitors in the midway section. The Brooklyn fair management never tolerates this variety of fakir.

Leslie Murray, now enrolled at the New England school of Embalming in Boston, was a visitor here today with his mother, Mrs. Patrick F. Murray of Academy street.

There is continued progress on the job of building a state-aid highway way between the Haskell stand in Pomfret and Brooklyn center, a work that has been underway for several months, and is as yet quite far from completion.

PUTNAM

A. E. DODGE ARRESTED FOR DRIVING WHILE INTOXICATED

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, Sept. 8—Arthur E. Dodge of East Woodstock narrowly escaped serious injury late today when a truck which he was driving got out of control stopped on the edge of an embankment by the side of the road. The accident occurred on the East Woodstock-North Quinebaug road about a mile west of the four corners. Hermon G. Carver and George Potvin, registrars of voters have compiled a complete list of the legal voters of the town, a copy of which has been posted on the town sign post. Benoit; Town Tax Collector Irving H. Miron, together with others holding minor town offices.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Flip Has a Swim.

By Thornton W. Burgess.

If you would nothing have to rue.
Be sure you know whom you pursue.
—Old Mother Nature.

Bowser the Hound and Flip the Terrier had gone down on the Green Meadows to see what they might see. Bowser trotted sedately along. Flip couldn't be sedate if he wanted to. You see, Flip was young and full of high spirits. He simply had to race around, Bowser would stop occasionally and sniff in the grass, but Flip was sniffing all the time. It was all a great adventure for Flip.

"Where are we going?" Flip asked.

"What do you say if we go over to the Smiling Pool?" replied Bowser.

"There he is, down there, sitting on his big, green lily pad."

"Are we likely to find any one to chase over there?" inquired Flip.

You see, Flip's idea of a good time was to chase some one.

"We might," replied Bowser.

"Who?" demanded Flip.

"I don't know," replied Bowser. "We'll find out when we get there."

So together they made their way over to the Smiling Pool. As they drew near it Flip raced ahead. He was the first to reach the bank of the Smiling Pool. He looked all over it and saw no one. This disappointed him. He looked disappointed. In a moment or two Bowser joined him.

"Well," said Bowser, "have you seen any one?"

"No," replied Flip, "there isn't anyone here."

"Chug-a-rum" said a deep voice from somewhere down below.

It was so unexpected that it startled Flip. He looked at Bowser inquiringly, but Bowser appeared not to have heard it.

"Chug-a-rum' said the same deep, gruff voice again.

"What was that?" demanded Flip.

Bowser grinned. "That was Grandfather Frog," said he. "Don't you know Grandfather Frog?"

Flip shook his head. "This is the first time I ever heard of him," said he. "What is he like?"

"Look at him and see for yourself," replied Bowser. "There he is down there, sitting on his big, green lily-pad."

Flip looked at the lily pad. "I don't see any one down there but a green Toad," said he.

Bowser chuckled. "If you should call Grandfather Frog a Toad," said he, "he would be insulted. That isn't a Toad at all; that is Grandfather Frog himself. He is first cousin to Old Mr. Toad, but he lives in the water instead of on land. Just to think that you shouldn't know Grandfather Frog! You have a lot to learn. You certainly have a lot to learn."

"Chug-a-rum!" said Grandfather Frog once more, and jumped at a foolish green fly that came near. The fly disappeared and so did Grandfather Frog, for he dived into the water and went down into the mud.

Flip couldn't sit still as Bowser the Hound did. He began to explore. He ran up along the bank and into the bushes, where the Laughing Brook enters the Smiling Pool. Suddenly he caught sight of a brown-coated fellow sitting on the end of a log. He knew it was a rat and Flip was death on rats. He made a rush for this fellow. The rat went into the water with a splash. In a moment his head appeared. He was swimming out toward the Smiling Pool. Flip didn't hesitate. He plunged into the water and started after that rat. He hadn't the least doubt that he would catch him.

Bowser, on the bank, grinned. "Well, anyway, Flip will have a swim," said Bowser.

PROPAGANDISTS.

Stirred by a situation which he believes should be thoroughly investigated, President Hoover has called upon the attorney general to learn what can be done in regard to the situation which has been revealed concerning certain propaganda in behalf of a big navy while the government is directing its efforts in behalf of limitation.

The president doesn't deny that any citizen has the right to his opinion upon the subject, the right to express it and to work in its behalf, but he regards it as "obviously against public interest for those who have financial interest in, or may be engaged in, contracts for the construction of naval vessels to secretly attempt to influence public opinion or public officials by propaganda in favor of large armaments".

In his statement the president does not attempt to deny those who hold big navy views such a right. He doesn't maintain that just because the government is working for disarmament that everyone else must do so. He doesn't undertake to deny a freedom of thought and action, but when it appears that there are corporations which are engaged through a representative to direct propaganda that creates international distrust and hate and are working in an underground way to upset governmental efforts for personal benefits he declares it is time to find out whether it is so and what the facts are, and he will get general support in the stand which he has taken.

Evidently the time has been reached when there is need for a showdown in regard to the particular brand of propaganda in which the person indicated in the president's statement has been engaged. It is likewise time to find out what the part is that was played by the corporations which he appeared to represent. Apparently nothing would have been known as to the backers of this propagandist if there had been a complete understanding in regard to compensation. Through a disagreement and a suit there have been revelations of a character which call for more light.

Whether the reference of the matter to the attorney general will result in all the information desired or whether it will terminate in a congressional inquiry, such as some members of congress are always anxious for, remains to be seen. In one way or the other there is good reason for believing that the situation will be cleared up and it is evident that as long as the uncertainty prevails concerning what has been done by interested parties that it should be thoroughly investigated.

PEACEFUL SETTLEMENT.

Once again, according to the information coming from New Orleans, there has been an adjustment of a prolonged and bloody strike through resort to peaceful methods.

New Orleans has been experiencing the detrimental effects of a trolley strike. There was a dispute between the company and the men with the result that the latter ceased work and let it be known that they would not tolerate anyone else taking their places. When efforts were made to operate the cars there was resistance followed by violence. Cars were overturned, streets were blocked, police had difficulty in getting control of the situation and several deaths resulted.

It was one of those cases where there was no disposition to resort to a peaceful adjustment. As a consequence the public was denied the transportation service which it had relied upon, the improvised bus service was inadequate and there were large daily losses by both the company and the men. Violence on the part of the employes did not change the attitude of the company and it didn't incur the pleasure of the public. Neither did the insistence by the company and its efforts to give service relieve the situation. It was a case of danger and inconvenience for the innocent third party to the strike.

When it became evident that it was impossible to fight it out on such lines there was a resort to a discussion of the facts in an endeavor to bring about an adjustment of the differences. Regardless of the merits of the demands by the respective sides, those who were named to deal with the situation were not long in agreeing upon a proposition which, upon being submitted to those involved, was accepted. In a brief time there had been ended a struggle which had become aggravated by the methods pursued. Good judgment had been exercised in working out the plan which was adopted and once more peace reigns, but in this, as in all such cases, the question arises as to why this could not have been done in the first place without any strike, without any violence and without subjecting the public to great trouble and inconvenience.

Possibly it will be claimed that the respective sides would never have been brought to the point of participating in a compromise but for the experiences that accompanied the strike, but it cannot help being felt that there have been enough similar experiences and outcomes to have impressed them with the need of resorting to all possible methods of settlement before rushing into grips, spilling blood and destroying property, only to back down. It would have been much better for all concerned to have compromised in the first place.

JUNKING GARBAGE.

Converting garbage into grease and other by-products is nothing new. It has been going on for a long time. There were those who used to solicit from householders the fats and grease for convertion purposes and give soft soap in exchange. They were making use of what many were disposed to throw away and it is the recognition of the chance to prevent waste that has prompted many to convert city garbage into grease and other things which it can be made to yield. It means junking garbage instead of throwing it away.

Disposing of the garbage in large cities is not a small problem. It runs into large expense figures. Cities on the ocean front are disposed to cart it to sea and dump it. Some use it for the purpose of filling in low land and others maintain incinerators to burn it. In practically all of these cases there is no return for the money spent in getting rid of it, barring the land redeemed. And yet it is a well known fact that there are valuable substances in this discarded material.

It is thus not surprising that Henry Ford offers to take all the garbage that is produced in Detroit and nearby cities and dispose of it for the grease that may be obtained. Here is a proposition that must interest Detroit from a financial standpoint when it is realized how expensive such disposition is to a city.

This isn't the first time Mr. Ford has interested himself in the elimination of waste. He is already practicing this policy in his manufacturing business. One conspicuous illustration of what he is doing is furnished by the manner in which he requires the utilization of all wood, such as boxes, crates and the like. This formerly was thrown away or burned, but it is now made to serve some useful purpose and a big contribution is made to the cause of forest conservation. Instead of throwing away he is committed to the policy of complete utilization.

If he can do this with wood there is no reason why he cannot do it with garbage. It is not to be supposed that Mr. Ford has made this offer without first going over the ground and learning what he can do. His chemists have unquestionably learned what can be expected from a ton of garbage and he is satisfied that he can at least make ends meet. While Mr. Ford has proved himself a pioneer in certain fields it is a matter of record that he has made a success of many of his undertakings and if he can aid Detroit and get a profit from his venture everyone should be happy.

BRINGING EUROPE TOGETHER.

When he puts forth his plan for the United States of Europe, Premier Briand of France gives recognition to the long recognized fact that in unity there is strength. He urges the importance of a move that has previously been urged, but he does so at a time when conditions were never more favorable for carrying it out and yet, even though he put it in the most favorable light, it doesn't appear that there is any assurance of immediate compliance.

In the very demand itself it becomes evident that the countries of Europe have long been acting for their individual advantage. This is not surprising, but in doing so they have been guided to a large extent by the action of the others. They have been disposed to view with alarm such moves as were made by others to meet existing conditions. There have been suspicions and jealousies and much of the time there has been a pulling in opposite directions by some of the countries instead of pulling together. Even the suggestion of such a thing hasn't been able to gain much support. Whether there is any greater readiness to overcome these difficulties of the past is a question that may be answered as the result of the Briand suggestion.

Without a doubt Premier Briand's idea has been advanced at this time for the purpose of ascertaining the reaction of the other countries. He anticipates some opposition when he makes it a point to declare that it is not intended to exclude England. That country is wanted in the group. Furthermore he insists that it should not be regarded as being a plan directed against the United States of America, although it might seem that the intention was to so control the economic power of Europe and that it would have that effect.

It is not an analogous situation that prevails in Europe to that in America. The United States is a group of states under a common constitution, a country of one language, and a nation with one flag and purpose. It stands out in that respect in marked contrast to the situation that would prevail should there result a United States of Europe with its many languages, its many rivalries and those long-standing suspicions.

Still Prime Minister Briand has a right to learn how the others feel about such a proposition. He has taken the right method of finding out and it will be interesting to note the various reactions that follow. Those to whom he has directed his plan will doubtless have some questions to ask and in doing so will give some idea of what the sentiment is even though there's no definite answer.

WOMAN IN LIFE AND IN THE KITCHEN

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

Liquid ammonia will remove rust from copper articles.

Never pass by an exposed nail without removing it.

A soft broad brush makes an ideal duster for carved and ornate furniture.

Add a level teaspoon of salt to every pint of water when boiling vegetables.

Fresh lemon peel rubbed on the fishy forks and knives will remove all odor.

Clean the white window shades with a rough flannel cloth dipped in flour.

Oil of sassafras will keep away red ants. Pour a little around the places where they frequent.

Keep your eye on the dip pan or drain under the refrigerator, for roaches are very fond of such places.

Keep the bed a few inches away from the wall so as to allow a free circulation of air around the sleeper.

Grilled apples, flavored with nutmeg are an excellent addition to a dinner dish of grilled ham, sausage, chop or bacon.

A tasty supper or luncheon dish can be made by serving upon thin slices of toast hot string beans covered with rarebit sauce.

Stiff paint brushes will again become pliable if soaked, bristle deep in vinegar that is heated almost to the boiling point.

A pinch of soda in the water when cooking string beans will make them very tender and a bright green.

Flavoring extracts should always be added to puddings, candy, etc., after they are removed fro mthe fire to get the full strength of the extract.

A bottle of home-made chocolate sirup is convenient, says the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, to have on hand for making milk shakes, cocoa and sauce for puddings and ice cream.

BATHTUB

It is very hard to keep the bathtub perpetually ringless in vicinities where hard water is used. In such cases try adding a few drops of kerosene to the soapy water and see how wonderful it wipes away the rim. A small bottle of kerosene might be kept in the medicine closet for convenience. Of course, carefully marked.

SANDWICHES

Cookie cutters in the shapes of diamonds, hearts, clubs and spades are particularly appropriate for sandwich cutters for the card party. The sandwiches look most appropriate on their separate platters.

CARPET SWEEPER

A coarse comb will remove the hairs and ravelings from the vacuum cleaner and carpet sweeper brushes without hurting the bristles.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY

Never leave medicine or beverages uncovered in a sickroom.

As a hot weather precaution begin the day right by eating a substantial breakfast. At noon it will be too warm to eat heartily and at night you may be too tired to eat.

Eat, drink, work, walk and sleep in moderation if you would keep well during the heated term.

When flies are troublesome in the sick-room try placing sweet peas in the room. The odor of them is so unpleasant to the flies that they will not remain where it is.

If you eat all your meals in a restaurant you will find your digestion will be greatly aided if you think twice before ordering and let the dessert you choose furnish the kinds of material lacking in the first courses. If your meal has been heavy, choose a dessert of fruit. If your meal has been of fish, remember that fish contains little fat and a dessert containing butter would be a good choice.

COAT HANGER

The decorated coat hanger is nice to keep on one's clothes tree when expecting a guest. It will keep the guest's wrap in so much better condition than when thrown on the bed, especially in wet weather. The person with a fur coat will be doubly thankful for this courtesy, as the wet nap will have a chance to dry.

SCRUBBING

When doing a lot of scrubbing protect yourself from sore knees by folding some soft cloths into squares and tucking them into your stockings before you start the job.

BIRDS

If the youngster is interested in birds and wishes to have a birdhouse limit him to one house. Birds like privacy during the incubating and brooding periods and are impatient if bird neighbors are too near. Usually you will find only one birdhouse occupied if several are placed close together.

RAISINS

Perhaps the best method of freeing raisins from seeds is to put them in a bowl, cover with boiling water and let stand for two minutes. Drain, open the raisins and remove the seeds. They will come out easily without stickiness.

BROILING STEAK

When broiling steak in a gas oven frequently the fat will catch fire. To prevent this, cover the bottom of the broiling pan with water. This will catch the fat from the steak and prevent its catching fire.

ODORS

A bottle of oil of lavender is nice to have in the kitchen cabinet. Then when the smell of cooking permeates the house it may be removed by filling a basin with boiling hot water and pouring into it a few drops of lavender. It gives a delightful aroma.

LAUNDRY HINTS

A handful of salt in the washing water will set dye in cotton stockings.

Peroxide of hydrogen will remove perfume stains from linen bureau scarfs.

If you find you have trouble finding the bad stain on the table linen after it has been wet, outline it lightly with pencil before putting it into the tub. Then the spot can be found readily.

Have you tried making oil cloth pockets for the end of your ironing board, so that if you keep it in the kitchen closet with one end on the floor the cover will not bet soiled?

Clothes soaked in borax water will come out beautifully white, with no injury to materials. Borax water is also very easy on the hands and will not roughen them as so many cleansers do. Put a handful of borax in with the soaking clothes next week and give it a trial.

TO INSURE PROPER LINOLEUM LAYING

In laying linoleum the first move is to see that the floor, whether of wood or concrete, is thoroughly clean and dry. If it is on cement or concrete, every crack should be filled with plaster of paris and allowed to dry for at least two months before linoleum is laid. If the floor is of wood, all tacks and nails should be hammered down thoroughly or removed.

The next step is to take up the quarter round molding at the base board, so that the floor covering can be slipped under it and hence leave no edges under which dirt and water may creep. A layer of felt, made for the purpose, is then pasted to the floor.

After the felt has been laid, the linoleum is cemented on top of it. To prevent water from seeping under the edges, waterproof cement should be used to fill all the cracks and for about six inches around the edges.

BEFORE USING ENAMEL

Before using enamel, open the can and place the lid on loosely. Place the can in a pan of hot water. Keep the water not higher than an inch from the top of the can. From time to time add more hot water. When the enamel is thoroughly heated through it will flow perfectly from the brush and give a good finish.

POLISHING LEATHER

Gasoline will clean real leather, but do not use it on imitation leather. When latter becomes sticky, sponge thoroughly with mild suds containing a little borax and when perfectly dry apply a light coat of white shellac.

SCRUBBING BRUSHES

Scrubbing brushes should be turned bristles downward when not in use so the water will run out of them and they will dry. If laid on their backs the water will soak into the wood and loosen the bristles.

CONCERNING WOMEN.

Miss Mary Anderson, director of the women's bureau, United States department of commerce, came to America as an immigrant girl from Lidkoping, Sweden, at the age of 16.

Mrs. Harriet Hayward is acting as tax collector of Manchester, N. Y. She has succeeded in collecting every dollar on the tax roll of the municipality for the first time in 20 years.

Dr. Maria Castellani, founder of the Business and Professional Women's clubs of Milan and Rome, Italy, is backing a movement of an international federation of business and profesisonal women's clubs.

Mrs. William J. Brown, a member of the Maryland state board of education, has joined a number of educators and liberals for an investigation of penal institutions and prison government in Soviet Russia.

One of the highest administrative posts in Washington, D. C., is now held by a woman. Miss Mae A. Schnurr has been appointed to fill the new position of assistant to the commissioner of reclamation. During the World war she was the first woman appointment clerk in the patent office, which had a personnel of approximately 1,500 officers and employes.

BREAD BOXES

The bread box should be frequently washed out, dried and thoroughly aired by keeping the lid a little way open so that the bread will never have a musty taste.

FOR MUDDY FEET

Nail a large scrubbing brush inside down to the rear porch steps and train the children to wipe their shoes on this before entering the house. It will save much labor.

DICTATES OF FASHION

Brown promises great vogue for fall wear. Dashes of red, orange, green and yellow liven it.

Milady just must have a dinner turban this autumn. They are deftly draped, enchanting colors and exquisite fabrics, matching one's gown.

Just the thing for wear in town during the hot days are linen suits of brown or black. The skirts are box pleated, and smart little blouses of yellow crepe de Chine are worn with them.

A new garment is the little sleeveless frock that is a coat dress and therefore easy as an old glove to slip into. Made of colored pique or linen it is charming. Double-breasted ones are popular.

Wide wale pique is used for suits, which are a copy of a successful French model. They come in white or pastel colors and with them one wears a blouse of organdie or handkerchief linen.

When cutting a frock of very sheer chiffon or other exquisite fabric that is apt to pull or cut irregularly, baste it onto a sheet of thin tissue paper and cut through the paper and then remove it, to keep seams narrow and straight.

If you want to "stop the show" at your next party be sure to have a frock of taffeta in the new shade of chartreuse and have it made very long, with huge poufs and bows in back or at the sides and tricky ends that sweep and trail on the floor.

Among the most delightful exponents of the vogue for yellow are midsummer frocks of printed silk or chiffon, with small designs on a yellow ground. There is a coolness and freshness about their coloring that makes them an ideal choice for sultry days.

A new evening cape is a somewhat different version of the square. It is made of metal brocade in white or pastel colors, bordered all around with a band of white chiffon, and at the back of the neck the chiffon forms a large flat butterfly bow.

Wide and elaborate are the new evening bracelets set with brilliants. These are most effective when several are worn on one arm and when the neckline is conspicuously free from a necklace.

WHITE HATS FOR FALL

The milliners are saving out the white felt hats for late summer and autumn when they will be the very epitome of style. Right now they are being worn mainly with black or black and white semi-formal evening gowns. As was expected the velvet hats are coming in again, especially the transparent velvets. They are worn with more or less formal afternoon chiffons.

GLOVES FOR EVENING

Long suede gloves in white or off white shades are as yet an ultra-exclusive fashion for evening. With the heightened sophistication in formal attire the glove has been revived to take its proper place. The classic white lace kid type also is correct.

DAY FROCKS WITH GALYAK

Having won to universal popularity in spring coats, galyak now finds a place in trimming autumn day dresses of canton and wool crepe. This very flat silky fur scarcely weightier than velvet makes very smart decorative touches.

CARACUL JABOT

A new fall suit is made straight line, with three box pleats below the skirt's yoke and the jacket buttoned with eight matching buttons from the lower edge up to where the caracul jabot flares.

RECIPES

Stuffed Peppers: Put some left-over beef or steak through a meat grinder. To a sufficient quantity to fill six peppers add one large slice of stale bread crumbled fine, one small onion sliced and fried with one slice of bacon chopped fine, salt, and a tiny bit of cayenne or tabasco. Stuff the peppers and place them in a baking dish. Cover with one small can of whole tomatoes and half a cupful of hot water. Add salt, place in the oven, cover and bake until the peppers are tender. If necessary, add more water, so that there will be a thin tomato gravy with the peppers. These take only about 20 minutes to cook.

Pickled Cantaloupe: Pare and cut ripe melons into thick slices, then weigh them and for every eight pounds allow four pounds of good brown sugar, one quart of vinegar and one cup of whole spices, stick cinnamon, cassia buds, allspice and cloves all mixed together, using less cloves and more allspice. Tie these mixed spices in a bag and boil with the vinegar and sugar. Skim well, and when clear pour over the fruit. Cover and let stand overnight. In the morning pour off the sirup, boil for five minutes, and again pour over the fruit. Repeat this for three successive mornings, then pack into jars, seal and keep in a cool place.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8 — Uncle Sam's army bombers did a bit of work in August that justifiably drew prompt appreciation from that stout old soldier, Gen. Charles P. Summerall, chief of staff.

Forty-one hours from the time the group of heavy-duty air fighters lifted into the sky from their home station at Langeley field, Va., just a stone's throw from ancient Fortress Monroe on Chesapeake bay, they had executed a bombing mission at sea off San Diego, Cal.

They needed but a half hour after arrival at that port to refuel, load dummy bombs and sweep out over the Pacific to face a hypothetical enemy fleet.

The flight, according to Summerall's prompt congratulatory message to Maj. Hugh Knee of the air corps, commanding, afforded "most illuminating data on possible operations of such groups in time of emergency."

It did more than that, the Bystander imagines, for it tended the confirm judgment of the army strategists who originally worked out the location of various air bases and the organization of the combat groups.

And as Knerr pointed out in his own report, it gave opportunity for tests of use of civil air field equipment and personnel to service military ships. He urged further cooperation with the civilian installations in peace time training.

A Brilliant Group

The Langley field bomber wing has long been a bright spot in air corps accomplishments. The Bystander recalls watching a year or so ago maneuvers there between the heavy ships, flying in tight formation, and the fleet of single fighters brought on from their home port in the interior for the purpose.

The dogfighters lost themselves in the sunpath above the seemingly slow moving bombers, then came howling down in attack. From the ground below it seemed that the bombers must have had the best of it in a real row. They flew so close together that 20 or more of them made a target too small for the attackers to blanket with fire.

Riding one of the bombers in this tight formation was rather a hair-raising experience at first. To see monster planes seemingly at arm's length over each side of your ship, all of them jogging up and down on the air currents as they swept along at nearly a 100-mile gait, was appalling until you got used to it and your trust in those blase young army pilots was revived.

Suppose they miscalculated a bit and touched you, with the ground three or four thousand feet below? Not a cheerful thought to an innocent onloker.

Yet you did not have to fly long with the Langley birdmen to become almost as blase about it as they were. Their ships looked and are gigantic. They seem even bigger viewed aloft than they do on the ground, yet flying with them makes the average man count absolutely on the ability of the pilots to control their craft with unerring skill. If the noise of the motors will let you, bye-and-bye you doze off comfortably way up there and cheerfully leave it all to the pilots.

Training

The San Diego flight no doubt was a demonstration of the value of insistent training in formation flying maintained at Langley field.

It took good team work to pull off that trans-continental stunt. And the results some day may figure largely in determination of the final answer to the problem of who is to be charged with defense of a 200-mile zone off the coast lines, the navy or the army air corps.

Doctor Advises Eary Protective Measures

By George S. Luckett, M. D., State Health Officer, Santa Fe, Mexico.
(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

New York city has employed some of its street cleaning equipment in a new form of clean up campaign, the elimination of diphtheria, not with shovels and brooms and white wings, but with white clad doctors and nurses, riding in biz trucks. The trucks have been thoroughly scrubbed and fitted with refrigerators and other equipment necessary to give toxin-antitoxin, for the prevention of diphtheria, to every child who will take it.

It is scarcely ten years since this new preventive for diphtheria was first prepared, yet it has made remarkable inroads on the disease already. When the state health department of New Mexico first began to function, in 1919, diphtheria was prevalent throughout the state the year 'round. About 1921, physicians began giving toxin-antoxin extensively, and the disease was reduced by 77 per cent. in the next five years. It has never assumed such proportions since. Many counties have gone for several years without a case of diphtheria among children.

The giving of toxin-antitoxin is as simple as typhoid vaccine: three "shots" in the arm at weekly intervals. Within three or four months, about 90 per cent of children who take it are fully protected against the disease. With modern preparations of this "vaccine" ther are no general symptoms, especially in young children. A newer preparation, called toxoid, requires only two doses instead of three, but makes some older children sick for a day or two.

Every baby should have this protection on its first birthday. Any time after the age of six months, it can be given, and the sooner the better for the child.

The family doctor or the local health officer should be called upon for the treatment, before a child enters school. "Better be safe than sorry" is perfectly exemplified in this simple protective measure.

Stories That Recall Others

"Funny" Milk

Little Norman, three years old, recently made his first trip to the country and it was very difficult to convince him that the fresh warm milk just brought in from the cows, was really milk because it was not delivered in a bottle. On returning home he informed his mother that they had "funny" milk down in the country: "They got it out of cows and put it in a grinder."

Love vs. Hunger

John, just turned six, big for his age and still growing, was always hungry. At a family gathering he said to his mother: "Let's go home, I want a sandwich."

His grandfather said: "Well, John, if your family can not give you enough to eat, you'd better come and live with me; I'll see that you get plenty."

John was silent a few moments, then said: "No, I'm not going to leave my family. I love my mother and I'm not going to leave her. I love her better'n anybody! I love my daddy, too."

ST. THOMAS' SEMINARY PARISH DRIVE OBJECTIVE

It was announced at the four masses in St. Patrick's church Sunday, that Sunday, Sept. 22, had been appointed the date for the parish offertory for the new St. Thomas' seminary, Hartford. The present seminary, built about twenty-five years ago, is far too small for latter-day demands. In consequence, Bishop Nilan has begun the erection of a $2,000,000 new seminary at Bloomfield, suburban to Hartford, with the expectation of having the magnificent building paid for on completion. Already the Catholics of the state have contributed over $650,000 toward it and there is great interest in having the big project put over with success.

Referring to the part which the Norwich parish would take in the work, Rev. John J. Reilly, speaking at the 9 o'clock mass, stated that every Catholic understands the importance of such a training college for priests. As long ago as 1645, the Council of Trent stressed the importance of segregating theological students in seminaries. Every Catholic understands that the important thing in the church is not the crowds attending services, nor the evidences of material prosperity, but the priesthood continuing the teachings of the founder of the church, Christ. The piety, the intellectual characteristics of their priests count with the people.

Father Reilly lauded the marvellous accomplishments of the present St. Thomas' seminary during its quarter century of effort, many of the younger priests of the diocese having received their training there.

At mass, the altar railing was crowded, following Saturday's confessions, as Father Reilly assisted Rev. Myles P. Galvin, who read the low mass, in giving holy communion to scores of penitents. It was announced that Sunday school would resume sessions following that mass, for children from the 2nd to 8th grades who do not attend the parish school. All children of the parish are expected to attend their own special mass at 9 every Sunday.

The organist, Henry J. LaFontaine, has returned from his vacation and led the junior choir in singing the hymns during the service, beginning with Hymn to the Sacred Heart of Jesus, the symbol of the love of God for mankind. Following communion the children sang "Mary, Dearest Mother," in tribute to the Mother of Christ.

The parish school opened during the week with the usual large attendance, so that several lay teachers have been secured to aid the Sisters of Mercy in caring for the crowded classes. The rector of the parish, Rt. Rev. Msgr. M. H. May, also acts as superintendent of the school.

DISPUTES SURVEYOR'S BLUE PRINT ON LOCATING OLD BURYING GROUND

William S. Case, who has lived all his life at Norwich Town within a stone's throw of the Post Gager burying ground, and Civil Engineer George E. Pitcher, who has made a report to the selectmen, with a blue print, of the location of the burying ground, according to his search of the records, are in sharp disagreement upon the location of the burying ground.

Mr. Case declares that the Foxborough lot contained the Gager burying ground. Surveyor Pitcher finds the Post burying ground on the uplands, but Mr. Pitcher puts it on the low land.

The Foxborough Lot

In his location of the Post-Gager burying ground, Mr. Case says:

The Boxborough lot is described in the deed of Elisha Tracy to Samuel Case as the remaining to me part of my Gager Hill pasture and Foxborough lot so called, being, and lying near the dwelling house, lately the property of Ezekiel Barrett, bound northerly on land lately the property of said Barrett, Westerly on the land of said Barrett deceased, southerly by an old post, and rail fence on the bank of ridge between Foxborough and the said Tracy's River Meadows, easterly by a part of my Gager Hill pasture deeded by me to Oliver Tiffany as the fence now is until it strikes the land of Lewis Hyde. Thence by the said Hyde's land to the northeast corner of the land I now deeded to said Case.

Excepting and reserving out to whomever it may belong a small burying place not mine in said lot now deeded estimated to contain three and one-half acres to the same, more or less, and contains all the land within said described lines except the said burying place.

Is A Gager Lot

This Foxborough lot is a Gager lot, containing the Gager burying ground. It is bounded on the north and west by the Barrett or Post land. The Gager burying ground was in the north corner of the lot and on the opposite side of the fence was the Post burying ground. It was in this north corner of the Gager lot that the Samuel Gager grave stone was placed in 1740, which stone remained in position until after 1844 when Samuel Case sold this Gager land to Daniel L. Huntington.

In the division of the land, Miss Caulkins says: "House lot of John Gager, eleven and a half acres, part of it a dense swamp, and Hammer brook running through it."

"Thomas Post adjoining Gager, on the upland six acres a burying place excepted that lyebti within his lot, and also a way to it." This burying ground was toward the rear of his home lot. It joined the Gager burying ground. The Post burying ground was on the uplands, not on the low land by the water. For it contained no low lands. The upland was light-gravelly soil. The better land lay toward the north along the highway.

Fence Original Boundary Line

In the first paper upon this subject I gave the location of the Gager burying ground in the Gager-Foxborough lot just as it had been told to me, that it was adjoining, connected with, as an addition to the Post burying grounds. That the corner of the fence in the boundary line between the Gager burying ground and the Post burying ground is the point by which both portions may be located. This fence is the original boundary line between the Post and Gager home lots.

This is verified by the location of the Post burying ground given by L. W. Lee, in 1872, the owner of the Post property at that time. This fence is the southern boundary of the Post burying ground. The northern boundary is five and one-half rods to the north of the fence. The distance from this northern boundary to the plot on which the monument stands is the distance that Mr. Lee had in his mind when he used the word adjacent in the deed to the Mason Monument association. It is something over 50 feet.

Under Old Oak Tree

The north and south boundary of the Post burying ground is easily defined. The boundaries east and west are not so easily determined. I have been told this much, that it was always understood that the Post burying ground occupied the level plot under the old oak tree. It was about in the middle of this plot that Mr. George W. Perkins was buried in 1858.

Caulkins Hist in the extract from the deed of conveyance of Joseph Post to Ezekiel Barrett, says "Excluding about 32 rods of land within said bounds belonging to the town of Norwich being the old burying ground." The original amount of land seized or purchased by the town was 44 square rods. Here are 12 rods inaccounted for the 44 square rods included the oak tree and the side hill.

In connection with the Gager burying ground we have two of the original bounds, the northern and the western boundaries. The price paid by the town in 1699 to Samuel Gager, "twelve acres of land" would indicate that it at least was as large as the Post burying ground.

The description given in the first paper upon this subject of the Gager burying ground as it was in 1844 when Samuel Case sold it to Daniel L. Huntington and as it was known to be by Mr. Case for 40 years afterward indicated that the northern boundary was of equal length with the adjoining Post burying ground.

At the time of its purchase by Mr. Case it had been abandoned for 139 years, but had retained nearly its entire length, and the stone of Samuel Gager and others remained.

Criticism of Surveyor's Work

In criticism of the work and findings of Surveyor Pitcher, Mr. Case has the following to say;

In the blue print the surveyor has removed or does not recognize the Post lot as it was in 1839 when Samuel Case purchased it. Then in the western part of this new lot he seems to have produced he makes this memorandum, "Elisha Tracy to Samuel Case." Samuel Case never owned a foot of Post land.

In the southeastern corner of this blue print Mr. Pitcher locates the Post burying ground and adjourning it on the other side of the line of division. Mr. Pitcher locates on what, for many years was known as the James McNally lot, the Gager burying ground.

These two burying grounds or what is commonly known as the Post-Gager burying ground are by this means removed from the front of Mr. Houghton's house, and obliginly located nearly 450 feet from the John Mason monument, the very farthest point possible. This disposition of the Post burying ground was made by the surveyor long before the construction of or building of any kind commenced by Mr. Houghton on the monument lot.

It was known around town about the first of May, according to Mr. Case, that the burying ground would be located down near the water. The attention of the town officials was called to the fact that tradition at least located the Post burying ground in the monument lot and protested to the locating of it elsewhere.

The authorities also had the description of the deed to Samuel Case that this Foxborough lot in which Mr. Pitcher intended to locate the Post burying ground was a Gager lot. They also were aware of the deed of Mr. Lee to the Monument association describing this Post burying ground as being adjacent to the Mason monument.

Says Location Absurd

This absurd location by the surveyor seemed to give great satisfaction to those who brought it about, but really this effort was a failure. The surveyor was only able to place the location there on paper. He was obliged to leave the body of Mayor John Mason, and all the rest of them where they were adjacent to the Mason monument. They are where they can be discovered whenever the town authorities shall decide to act.

It was also absurd for the surveyor to locate the Gager burying ground upon the McNally lot. This land did originally form the major part of the Gager home lot. At one time my uncle, Thomas M. Frazier, owned this same property for years, but I fail to find that it ever was uncumbered with a Gager burying ground, but I do know that I am in possession of a deed of the Foxborough lot which describes it as a Gager lot incumbered with a burying ground. This burying ground contained a Gager grave stone and some of its pieces are at this present time in the foundation of the Mason monument.

Wandering Burying Grounds

It is a bit curious just how those two burying grounds get lost, some years ago they wandered out of the town records in the town clerk's office.

Then at another time the Post burying ground wandered down into the Gager Foxborough lot as far as Pickeral pond, and would go no farther. Then the Gager burying ground wandered along after and made out in some way to get into the McNally lot. At least that is where the surveyor found them.

Are the town officials really desirous to find these long lost burying grounds—Yes. If they can find them where they claim to have found them. Are they desirous that they may be found where they were originally recorded in the town records as an incumbrance to certain properties for more than 240 years? Evidently not.

Are they desirous that the town records should e corrected, so that they may witness to the truth, and not act the part of a false witness, as they certainly do at this present time? Evidently not. Nothing but a vigorous public sentiment will move them. What is the matter?

Why the delay in the surveyor's report? It was the same on May 9th when Mr. Murray informed me that the surveyor intimated that the Post-Gager burying ground would be located down by the water—as when I was notified on July 26th that the report had been received by the selectmen, and that there was no burying ground on the property of Mr. Houghton.

Why the delay? Over two months had elapsed and no change in the location, but during this delay a two-car garage had been finished and the construction of a valuable house commenced, with the knowledge and facts in their possession that the buildings might be very close if not upon the burying ground that Mr. Lee described as adjacent to the plot of land 15 ft. square, the site of the Mason monument. The surveyor takes but little notice of the word adjacent. In fact he takes no notice of it.

Results.

What is the result of this delay, waiting for the report of the surveyor hired by the town officials?

Well, the search for the two burying grounds that were lost in some way from the town records is ended. They have been found, but not on the lands that the records describe as being incumbered with them for 240 years. A Post burying ground is found in a Gager lot. A Gager burying ground is found in the James McNally lot. This is an impossibility, for a Post burying ground in a Gager lot never had an existence.

Is this all that has been gained by the delay of the surveyor to send in his report? Well, the friends of the different parties interested seemed greatly pleased with the delay, until after the reception of the report in July, and then what promised to be the ending of a perfect day was utterly ruined by this absurd, ridiculous, preposterous blue print of the surveyor.

Contradictions.

The blue print misrepresents the Gager-Foxborough lot by removing the boundary fence separating it from the Post land on the west, thereby representing the lot to be one containing four acres of Post land, and eliminating the three and one-half acres of Gager land described in the Tracy deed to Samuel Case.

It contradicts this Tracy deed of the Foxborough lot which declares that Samuel Case is the owner of three and one-half acres of Gager land.

It misrepresents Samuel Case by representing that he is the owner of four acres of Post land.

It misrepresents the location of the Post burying ground by locating it in a Gager lot, on the low land, instead of on the Post upland.

It misrepresents the location of the Gager burying ground by locating it in the James McNally lot.

It contradicts the description given by William T. Case in the written lines on the First Burial Spot in Norwich.

It contradicts the location given by Lyman W. Lee in the deed to the John Mason Monument association.

It contradicts the location given by Miss Caulkins when she says in reference to the erection of a memorial to the memory of Major John Mason that "The beautiful elevation in the western part of the town where his remains lie unhonored, unmistakably and imperatively claims the memorial". Hist. of Norwich. Page 589.

Real Estate Gymnastics.

Even a superficial view of this blue print reveals so many noticeable peculiarities, glaring inconsistencies, and perhaps an intention and design to support some object to be accomplished, that these things seem to indicate that it was an interesting future. Some of its gymnastics in dealing with real estate problems are truly wonderful. It misrepresents the size of the Gager home lot, and the Post home lot by annexing the Gager-Foxborough lot of three and one-half acres to the six acres of Post upland. This last feat is perhaps the most important of them all, and is absolutely necessary because it is the only possible way to remove the Post burying ground from the Houghton lot which occupies the highest elevation of the Post uplands. It is also what causes the necessity for the locating of the Gager burying ground in the McNally lot.

Lack of Interest.

The organizations whom one would be naturally inclined to think would be eager to embrace this opportunity to locate, restore, and preserve the burial place of Major John Mason, his son Captain John Mason, and the Founders of Norwich, are very much disinterested, Mr. Case continues. There seems to be no way, method, or plan by which they may be approached. Their committees are without real power to accomplish much.

The organizations themselves are more or less divided upon this subject. They are, however, very decided upon one point, that they have no money to expend for such a purpose, either as an organization, or as individuals. From my own viewpoint I think that their position is the true one. It should be a matter for the town of Norwich to take up, act upon, and make right, but their lack of interest I cannot understand.

There is a large, beautiful and expensive monument known as the John Mason monument. L. W. Lee in his deed to the John Mason Monument association says that the burying ground is adjacent to the land described in the deed. In this burying ground lie the bodies of Major John Mason and his son, Captain John Mason, two men noted in the history of this town and state. They rest within comparatively a few feet of this beautiful shaft. These two men should be a source of admiration to everyone. Gallant and impressive in appearance, full of ardor and impetuous in temperament, heroic by nature, they served their purpose well in the founding and settlement of this town.

Who Are Opposing?

Am I the one to say at this time who the persons are that oppose the location, restoration, and the preservation of this burying ground? If this were my duty I would willingly do so. All very well know who are the principals concerned in this matter, they themselves are included with them if they are not in favor of this effort.

There are quite a number of lawyers interested in this matter. They give us to understand that this proposition might prove expensive. The other proposition might prove expensive and in any event it would be best to be prepared for an expensive litigation.

Matter of Justice.

If this matter of locating the body of Major John Mason is to be made expensive by a group of interested lawyers, then under certain circumstances I myself might be inclined to feel differently regarding this matter. I am not a descendant of these people. They are not relatives of mine. It is because this effort is supported by the fact that it is a matter of principle and justice that I shall adhere to this search until the goal is reached. It cannot fail.

Miss Caulkins says: "In very few instances are the graves of the first generation of our settlers distinguished by coeval monuments. The men of that age, encompassed with labors, and privations, exhausted in laying the foundations of society, had no leisure to cultivate the monumental arts, and rear tombs, and columns over their falling companions.

"But the more favored inhabitants of a later day, the prosperous sons of these laborious fathers, have a debt of grateful reverence to pay which should lead them to preserve the sacred dust from dishonor, and cherish with reverent awe the sepulchres of the fathers." Hist. of Norwich. Page 131.

THREE UNDER ARREST IN RAIDS ON SPEAKEASIES

State and local police, in two raids Saturday night, seized a large quantity of home brew, alleged alcohol and liquor, and considerable equipment for the making of home brew. At each place, the police claim, actual sales were secured as evidence that the liquor law was being violated.

During the electrical storm that broke around 10 o'clock the raiding squad descended suddenly on the Lake street place conducted by Charles P. Driscoll, 46. There were a half dozen patrons or "customers" in the place when the police appeared. All were allowed to go after Driscoll was taken into custody and the home brew and liquor in the place seized.

Six full cases of home brew, several cases of empty bottles, a gallon jug containing a quantity of liquor, a full pint bottle of liquor, a quart bottle, with some liquor in it, two 30 gallon crocks used for the making of beer, caps, etc., were found in the place and taken to police headquarters in the patrol wagon. Driscoll was charged with violation of the liquor law. He was unable to secure bonds and will appear in court this (Monday) morning.

About 11:30 o'clock the raiding squad descended on the speakeasy at No. 7 Hill street, conducted by Wilfred Lariviere, 47. Two arrests were made in this raid, Lariviere, alleged proprietor, being charged with keeping liquor with intent to sell, and his son-in-law, Marcus Burns, 29, with violation of the liquor law, in making a liquor sale. Both men were later released on bonds of $1,000 each for their appearance in the city court this (Monday) morning.

At Lariviere's place there were a dozen "customers" when the police put in their appearance. A five-gallon jug of gin, one one-gallon jug with about a quart of liquor in it, a quart bottle of gin, five half-pints of gin, four pint bottles of whiskey, two half-pint bottles of whiskey, a slot machine, a punch board and 12 cases of home brew were seized and taken to police headquarters.

The raiding squad comprised State Police Officers Whitmarsh, Hill and Murphy, Sergt. Matthew Delaney of the local police department and Officer Patrick Shahan.

BALTIC MAN INJURED; STRUCK BY AUTOMOBILE

While waiting in the rain for a trolley car Saturday night near the witch hazel mill stop on the Norwich-New London line, William Andrew, 54, of Baltic, suffered a fractured right leg when he was hit by an automobile driven by Mrs. W. W. Corchinsky, of Oakdale. The blow threw him against the trolley car.

Mrs. Corchinsky, who, police say, drove away after her car struck the man, was arrested on a charge of attempting to evade responsibility. She returned to the scene of the accident after her car had been pursued by another after she hit the Baltic man. She was released on $100 bail.

Andrew was taken to the hospital in New London.

On Drunken Driving Charge

John Roydel, 40, of this city, was arrested Sunday morning about 3 o'clock on North Main street near Boswell avenue by Supernumerary Hanks, on the charge of driving while under the influence of liquor. He gave bonds of $300 for his appearance in court. The officer noticed the erratic way in which the automobile was driven by Roydel.

Enumerating School Children

The two registrars of voters, Tyler D. Guy and Joseph B. Downes, are engaged upon the annual enumeration of school children. They will call upon all the homes in town in order to secure the names of all children between the ages of 4 and 16 years.

WILL MAKE PLANS FOR CHRISTMAS SEAL SALES

Representatives from more than seventy local tuberculosis and health associations in Connecticut will meet at the state capitol on Wednesday of this week to discuss plans for the Christmas seal campaign next December. For more than fifteen years the state tuberculosis commission has acted as agent of the National Tuberculosis association for Connecticut, and since that time has increased the sale from $17,000 to the present high total of nearly $116,000.

Mrs. Albert E. Sinks, seal sale executive of the National Tuberculosis association in New York, will direct the conference at the capitol, and will be assisted by Miss Mabel Baird, campaign director for the state commission.

SLACKENING OF ACTIVITY IN RETAIL TRADE AND MANY INDUSTRIES LAST WEEK

NEW YORK, Aug. 8—(AP)—With the Labor day holiday and extremely hot weather last week, there was a notable slackening of activity in retail trade and many industries. There was no evident change in fundamental conditions, however, and prospects for fall trade were regarded optimistically in most quarters.

Retail trade during the week slowed up to about the level of activity of the like week of last year, but industry generally maintained operations at a substantially faster pace. While some of the heavy industries, notably steel, slowed up operations, availing themselves of the opportunity to make much needed repairs in many cases, some of the lighter industries, particularly radio and shoe manufacturing, speeded up their production schedules.

Steel mills noted a further slackening in new buying, but prices held steady, mill operations were around 90 per cent. of capacity, as against 100 per cent. during the peak month of last May. Wall street estimates that the U. S. Steel corporation's unfilled tonnage report, as of August 31, to be announced next week, will show a decrease of more than 200,000 tons. Definite indications as to the last quarter operations are not expected to appear before October 1. As this industry experiences only a negligible lull during the summer, the sharp autumn upturn of recent years can scarcely be expected.

August sales reports of chain store systems were highly favorable, showing wide gains over August of last year.

Wheat prices were under pressure for a time, but rallied with improvement in foreign buying. Corn was firm, and there were rumors of serious crop deterioration during the hot weather. The outlook in cotton remained somewhat uncertain, with reports varying as to the damage done by the drought. The government crop report is due next week and is anxiously awaited. Livestock prices sagged a little.

Textiles were generally firm, and manufacturers active with good fall and winter clothing orders.

TWO NORWICH DRIVERS SCRAP AFTER COLLISION IN NEW LONDON

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 8—As a result of an automobile collision in this city Saturday evening, two Norwich men engaged in a serious altercation with the result that one was beaten and the other will be prosecuted within a few days, provided the aggrieved party carries out his threat to cause the arrest of his assailant.

James W. Miner, 43 Fourth street, was driving on Main street and when near Pierce street, another automobile figured in the crash with the car. Miner and the other driver, whom he did not know, but who said he resided in Norwich, argued forcibly over who was responsible for the accident in an attempt to bring about a satisfactory settlement of the damage resulting. During the exchange of views of the crash, Miner was struck a blow on the mouth that broke off the top of several front teeth. The unidentified driver then entered his car and drove away. Miner reported the accident and assault at police headquarters and requested that his attacker be arrested. An hour later Bruce Sloan, 333 West Main street, telephoned police headquarters for the purpose of reporting the accident. It was then revealed that he was the driver whose arrest Miner sought. As the police were not in a position to carry out Miner's request that Sloan be arrested, the former was informed of Sloan's identity by telephone and Miner stated that he would seek Sloan's arrest Monday.

Sloan came to New London this afternoon and went to police headquarters in further reference to the accident in which his car figured last night with Miner's auto. He was locked up on a charge of breach of the peace. Sloan furnished a surety on his bond to assure his appearance in court tomorrow.

GEO. SPINDLER, NEW BRITAIN, DROWNED AT OCEAN BEACH

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 8.— (AP) — George Spindler, 50, of 64 Church street, New Britain, was drowned at Ocean beach this afternoon, the fatality being the second there within a week. Spindler and his brother, Philip Spindler, of 65 Seymour street, New Britain, came to New London for the week end, with several friends. This afternoon the visitors went to the pier and attempted fishing. After spending an hour or more on the pier, Spindler was seen to lurge and in another instant he fell into the water. There were numerous swimmers nearby and when assistence reached the man, he was unconscious. The rescuers, however, succeeding in bringing him to the landing at the pier, but when he was pulled from the water he was dead. Efforts at resuscitation, including the applying of the inhalator, failed to result in any signs of life. Medical Examiner Charles Kaufman viewed the body and pronounced death as having been caused by exhaustion and shock. The body was taken in charge by Mr. Sprindler's brother and will be forwarded to New Britain.

GIRL UNDER 15 FOLLOWS SAILOR FROM NEW JERSEY

NEW LONDON, Sept. 8. — A girl, not yet 15 and residing in Hoboken, N. J., was arrested as a runaway this afternoon by Motorcycle Officer Augustus Ray, but instead of being a runaway, the girl is the sweetheart of a sailor, stationed at the United States Coast Guard academy and is believed to have been brought to New London by the sailor. When arrested the girl declared that she was 17, but she will not be 15 until December. The girl was taken in charge by Policewoman Jeanette Cassidy and will be given a hearing in the police court tomorrow morning, which time the sailor will be presented on a charge of lascivious carriage. The father of the girl came to New London this evening and will remain until after the case is disposed of in the police court.

STOLEN ARMY TRUCK FOUND IN WILLIMANTIC STREET

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 8—Sergeant McCormick, U. S. A., on duty at the government pier, Water street, reported to the police early today that a G. M. C. army truck had been stolen from the pier during the night. When the police of Willimantic were informed of the theft it brought the information that the truck was in that city where it had been abandoned because of being disabled, as one of the wheels had been smashed.

TWO STOLEN NORWICH CARS HAVE BEEN RECOVERED

A Buick sport touring car, owned by Julian L. Williams, proprietor of the Buick agency, Norwich, which was stolen in New London several days ago, was recovered today when it was found parked on Blydenburg avenue. A representative of the owner came to New London and took charge of the car. The auto was parked on Federal street several nights ago by George A. Chase, 7 McKinley avenue, Norwich, and during his absence of an hour or two, the thief stole the machine, finally abandoning it where it was found.

An automobile owned by James Kavalanka, Greene avenue, Norwich, stolen here last Sunday morning, has been recovered in Boston. The auto was parked on John street by the owner and when he went to drive it away six hours later, Kavalanka dislovered that it had been stolen. No trace of the car was found until today.

The police made a drive Saturday night on motorists who refuse to adhere to the city's parking ordinances, more particularly those drivers who persist in parking on both sides of Pearl street, where parking is not permitted. The drivers arrested and who will be in court Monday are Charles E. Benson, this city; Melvin L. Douglass, 190 Thames street, Groton; Raymond H. Wilson, Saybrook; John M. Sullivan, 33 West Thames street, Norwich, Walter Bori, Groton; Thos. Impelletteri, 94 Williams street; Reidar Johnson, box 15, Montville and Charles Brown, 5 Clay street, Norwich, were other drivers arrested Saturday night charged with violations of traffic regulations. All of the drivers will be in court Monday.

Rudolph Grabner, Waterford, was arrested Saturday night by Motorcycle Officers George Cockell charged with driving without a license. He will be in court Monday.

Another driver who will be in court Monday is Harris Harder, Irvington, N. J. He was arrested Saturday night by State Police Officer John Smith charged with reckless driving on Bank street, corner of Truman.

Raymond Davis, a sailor residing at 238 Huntington street, was arrested Saturday night by Motorcycle Officer Clarence Martin and Patrolman Frank Philopena charged with breach of the peace, upon complaint of his wife. He will be in court Monday. Davis has a long court record.

Horace Newbury, 44 Berkley avenue and Leo Waxman, College Point, L. I., were arrested Saturday evening charged with failing to stop at automatic danger signals on Bank street. Both drivers will be in court Monday.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Palace Theatre.

With but one object in view, the comfort of its patrons, the Warner Brothers Corp., today will start a corp of men to work at the Palace in an effort to bring it to the same high level of its 900 or more other theatres about the country. During the coming two weeks the play house will be completely renovated, changes and improvements to be made in every department. Probably the outstanding of the improvements will be the reseating of the place with the most modern and comfortable of seats, constructed principally for sound purposes. In addition to the reseating, the place will be redecorated and the lighting system will undergo a complete change.

Other improvements, too numerous to mention, will be made before the playhouse is reopened on Saturday, Sept. 21 with Al Jolson's latest hit, Say It With Songs.

Splitdorf Spark Plugs.

Splitdorf spark plugs, long famous among motorists throughout the country, have now literally "gone to sea" to win new laurels.

It is obvious that an outboard motor really gives a spark plug harder punishment than either an airplane or an automobile engine. This is mostly due to the fact that the outboard motor, being a two-cycle job, sparks on every revolution rather than on every other revolution as with airplanes and automobile engines. Then, too, the outboard is frequently drenched with water so that its spark plugs alternate between excessive blasts of heat and cold douches of spray. Motorists who have been troubled by poor-firing, easily cracked or corroding plugs have been quick to take the hint.

Splitdorfs attained much of their popularity for long endurance and high power through such events as the first annual Manhattan Island outboard motor boat race when Kirk Ames of New York, won the Class B event with a Lockwood outboard motor equipped with Splitdorf spark plugs. Earlier in the year they also received considerable favorable mention when H. S. Harris and J. D. Ramsey navigated their outboard motor boat equipped with Splitdorf spark plugs from Miami, Fla., to New York city, a distance of 1,600 miles.

Broadway Theatre.

With a story as big as life itself told by a hand-picked cast amid scenes of homely simplicity alternating with gorgeous splendor, the all-talking production "The Dance of Life" thrilled and delighted turnaway audiences at the Broadway last evening, and will continue at "the house of hits" until Wednesday. Adapted directly from the tremendous stage hit "Burlesque," with Hal Skelly, the lovable "Skid" of the original production in his familiar role, "The Dance of Life" reveals an intimate portrayal of the life of a team of vaudeville comedians and hoofers, Skid and Bonny, in their attempts to "crash the big time". True to life shots back of the curtain, on the stage during rehearsals and production, in the dressing rooms, and in the railroad stations and hotels en route, with dialogue that will touch the heart and tickle the memory of anyone who ever had anything to do with the stage, either as a "trouper" or a spectator, the "Dance of Life" is truly an intensely interesting human document—a slice of life itself. Old time theatregoers will get an added thrill in witnessing the old time "beef trust" chorus, with their military drill under an elephantine leader, in sharp contrast to the shapely and well trained girls of the regular chorus, who were selected for their beauty and ability from the leading shows of Broadway. The tuneful melodies of the show are already "best sellers" among local music dealers, and the wonderful scenes of the stage production shown in "The Dance of Life," together with the dazzling costumes of the chorus are very beautiful. An added feature are the scenes in natural color made through the improved technicolor process. Included with the program is one of Octavus Roy Cohen's side-splitting comedies of colored highlife, "Oft in the Silly Night," the latest Paramount Found News, and another bouncing ball song cartoon "Mother Pin a Rose on Me."

SAYLES' HOLE-IN-ONE FEATURE OF NORWICH-WINNAPAUG GOLF MATCH

SPORTS—DBL —dvG . .-sZ

A hole-in-one by Johnny Sayles of Norwich was the high light of the team golf match between Norwich and Winnapaug at the Winnapaug course on Sunday morning, Winnapaug winning the match 24 to 11. Sayles made his ace on the sixteenth hole of the new course, a 158-yard hole. He used a mashie, his ball hitting on the edge of the green trickled 20 feet across the green and dropped into the cup.

It was the first time that the Norwich club had played the new course and the majority of the local players found themselves in plenty of difficulty. John Fontaine, Dr. V. D. Eldred, Gibbs Mitchell and Eddie McKay were the only point scorers for the Norwich aggregation.

A return match is to be played at the Norwich course on next Sunday morning. The scores follow:

Fifteen youngsters, members of the Taftville American Legion team of the Norwich Junior Twilight league, in company with three local men, joyfully departed on a two-day trip to New York city last night as a reward for winning the league title.

It was a happy collection of youngsters that left Norwich by automobile at 9:30 o'clock to take the boat at New London for New York. That boat trip to New York is one thing that will remain in the memory of the youngsters for years to come. About half the boys carried their harmonicas with them and a boy and a harmonica create more tuneful music than a jazz orchestra. Some of the wise youngsters, who are apparently budding business men, were planning as they left to sell their staterooms on the boat and thereby gain a few extra dollars for the treasury. As one youngster put it, "Whatda we want of staterooms there ain't nobody goin' to sleep anyway. And a coupla bucks will buy a lotta ice cream."

The delegation will arrive in New York shortly after seven o'clock this morning where they will be met by a representative of the Hotel Albert and will be taken to the hotel where they will make their headquarters for the next two days. Following breakfast at the hotel the youngsters will be taken on a sightseeing trip and then to the Yankee stadium where they will see the Yankees-Detroit game this afternoon. After seeing Babe Ruth and Co. perform they will return to the hotel and after dinner will attend the theatre. Tuesday morning will be spent in visiting the Aquarium and parks and the party will leave for Norwich late in the afternoon arriving here in time for the banquet of the Dusty league.

Members of the party are:

Team—Walter Szydlo, Lewis Mercik, Joseph Walkowski, Arthur Peltier, Walter Murphy, Joseph Carter, Rene Paradis, Leo Martin, Walter Navick, Joseph Perry, Francis Liberty, Michael Abugel, Arthur Breen, Henry Cyganowski, and Joseph Corcoran. Napoleon Pepin, commander of Taftville American Legion Post, Donat Fournier, manager of club and James V. Pedace, president of Junior Twilight league

D.dja ever git in the close proximity of a foresome at bridge, a mixed foursome, and. listen in on the conversation

You can learn a lot about bridge that way but you'll learn more about your neghbor, the best way to serve limberger cheese, where you can get the heaviest crepe de chine at the lowest prce and how much Mrs. Blank pad for her hat.

Yes, and you'll learn a whole new assortment of cuss words and what two representatives of the masculne gender thinks of the opposite sex and their ability to play cards.

The bridge game has taken the place of the old knitting and knocking circle that used to be so flourishing a few years ago. Remember how the members of the chin and chatter club used to assemble on the porch of the hotel or the country club for an afternoon's session?

Remember how they'd come in their black taffeta dresses and raffia knitting bags and get set for the afternoon? They'd rustle up like autumn leaves in a gale, spread out their skirts, (that's the time when skirts were skirts) and deposit their knitting in the spacious laps.

And the opening remark was, "Didja know that Mrs.——was thinking of getting a divorce?" And then her life was gone over with a fine-tooth comb and was only stopped by the appearance of the woman under discussion.

Now it's across the bridge table that a person's reputation is taken apart and put together again. And it's not always put back the way they found, either. And isn't it funny how the man will always stick up for a man no metter how black his reputation may be?

And the women are just as strong for the women if a man starts to tell a few things he knows. And so it goes. Bridge is the last thing talked about at the bridge table.

I happened to listen in on one of these mixed foursomes the other afternoon and what I learned is nobody's business. I sat an hour and saw just three hands of bridge played. I saw perfectly good aces being trumped and suits being refused time after time.

The ultimate conclusion of the game came when one of the men remarked that he guessed he would go and see if he couldn't rustle up a drink some where. It was him that needed the drink.

The officer on the beat wishes to know who it is that they call the Red Grange of the West Side.

RIVERVIEW NOSES OUT QUINEBAUG IN THE TENTH

After Quinebaug had rallied in the fifth to tie the score and then squeezed a run across in the ninth to again tie it, Riverview came through in the tenth inning to beat the Quinebaug boys 6 to 5 at the State hospital diamond Saturday afternoon. The game was one of the best seen at the state hospital this summer. Riverview took the lead by scoring two runs in the first and another brace in the fifth. Quinebaug scored a lone tally in the second and then rallied strongly in the fifth to knot the count. In the eighth Riverview went into the lead again with one run only to have Quinebaug push over the tieing run in the ninth.

With one out W. Mangan, pitching for Quinebaug hit a batter which was followed by two successive hits scoring the winning count. Tony West pitched nice ball, fanning six and allowing nine hits, much of which were bunched in the fifth. Normandin led the hitting with three hits. The score:

SMOKE SHOP LOSES OPENING GAME OF COUNTY CHAMPIONSHIP SERIES

The Socony club, championship array of the New London City league, scored an easy 13 to 5 victory over the Smoke Shop team, pennant winner of the Norwich Industrial league in the opening game of their inter-city series Sunday afternoon at Hollyhock island. About 1,500 saw the game, probably the largest crowd yet for this newest addition to the city's recreation facilities.

Babe Santos, Smoke Shop importation from Boston, failed to live up to advance notices and was abelied from the mound in less than four innings, during which time the Whalers scored eight of their runs and made eight of their hits. Lefty Lucier, who has done most of the twirling for the Smokers this year and is a local boy, made a better job of it, holding the slugging Socony bunch to six hits for 5 2-3 innings. He struck out six men. Tilly Daniels pitched for Socony and coasted along with a big lead, although he was none too steady himself. The Smoke Shop collected nine hits, Eddie Burns, third baseman and Capt. Bill Barry, shortstop were the hitting stars for the visitors, each with four safeties while Foote collected a synthetic home run for the only round-trip smack of the day. Chubby Gibbs, with three out of four led the Smokers with the willow.

Socony had two big innings, the third and fourth, in which they sewed up the game, scoring four and five runs, respectively. Although Santos was very wobbly and contributed a lot to his own undoing by passing four men and hitting one, he was not given the best of support. Couillard singled on the first ball pitched in the first inning and Beaney hit safely with two away in the second, but both were stranded. In the third Foote, first batter, was given a pass. Daniels laid down a bunt and Santos, with a sure play at second, fumbled and when Cummings tried to make a recovery, he threw badly to first and runners were on second and third, Couillard was also passed, filling the bases. Burns then tapped a single between short and third, scoring Foote and Daniels, sending Couillard to third and he went to second on the throw in. Harran popped to Santos but Barry smashed a single to center, scoring Couillard and Burns. Hewitt hit to center, sending Barry to third but Cragan flied to Jarvis, who held Barry on third and Beaney sent up a high one to Gibbs.

The Smoke Shop scored once in their half of the inning. With one out, Gibbs lined a single to center and when Couillard juggled the ball, Gibbs made second. Jarvis walked and so did Tombari. Sadinsky forced Tombari at second, Gibbs scoring.

Five runs pattered over in the fourth for Socony. After Foote had rolled out to Cummings, Daniels was hit by a pitched ball. Couillard walked and Burns doubled to left, scoring Daniels and Couillard. Harran filed to Pheno Tombari. Barry doubled, scoring Burns. Hewitt singled to right, scoring Barry. Cragan walked and Santos was taken from the box. Beaney singled off Lucier and Hewitt tallied. Foote walked but Daniels forced Cragan at third.

The Smokers picked up two in the sixth when Anso Tombari was safe when Beaney dropped his fly and Barry mussed up Cummings roller, both scoring on Lucier's double to right center. The local bunch scored once more in the seventh on singles by Gibbs and Jarvis, Gibbs going to third while Jarvis was being forced at second by Pheno Tombari and scoring while Socony were missing a double play on Anso, the next batter.

Socony scored three in the seventh when Foote opened with an ordinary single to right that bounded into the river for a homer and an error, a single by Burns and a long double to center by Barry. They closed with one in the ninth, consisting of Burns' double and Barry's hit, both boys getting their fourth hits. Smoke Shop scored in the ninth on Fagan's single and Jarvis' triple.

Next Sunday it may be different with Lucier working the whole way, for Manager Bill O'Brien announced last night that the Taftville youngster will get the call. The score:

FARLEY THINKS DONOHUE SHOULD UPHOLD N. Y. COM.

NEW YORK, Sept. 8—(AP)—As one friend to another, James A. Farley, chairman of the New York State Athletic commission, today addressed a letter to Thomas E. Donohue, Connecticut boxing commissioner, explaining why he thinks Donohue should put his foot down on the proposed featherweight titular bout between Andre Routis, the champino, and Bat Battalino.

Farley said "there is no justification for the bout taking place in Connecticut or in any other state that has an agreement with us' in view of the fact that Routis is under suspension in New York state. Routis fell under the ban when his manager, Joe Jacobs, was suspended in connection with the controversy raging over Max Schmeling, the German heavyweight.

Farley's letter follows:

"The press reports which have come into my possession would indicate that you are going through with the Routis-Battalino match at the East Hartford velodrome some time this month. The report referred to also indicates that you are giving your endorsement to the contest because you believe that Routis is an 'innocent victim of the incident which brought about the suspension of his manager, Joe Jacobs.'

"The agreement we have with your commission and the other commissions around the country is that we respect one another's rulings. The New York State Athletic commission has at all time gone along with the other boxing commissions with which we have had agreements and have never questioned their right to inflict a penalty of any kind on any fighter or manager operating in any other state even though we might have disagreed with the action taken by them. We have respected their decisions on the theory that what was done was for the best interests of boxing insofar as their states were concerned and we felt obligated because of our agreement to go along.

"The way I feel about it, Tom, is that we took our action in the case of Jacobs and his entire stable for reasons which are familiar to you and everyone else who watches boxing events and I don't hesitate to say to you freely and frankly that there is no justification for the bout taking place in Connecticut or in any other state which has an agreement with us.

"You and I have been friends, Tom, for over 15 years, long before I became acqu

REV. THEODORE M. SHIPHERD BEGINS PARK CONGREGATIONAL PASTORATE

Rev. Theodore M. Shipherd, to whom Park Congregational church extended a call in May of this year, began his pastorate there Sunday with the resumption of the church services after the summer recess. At the morning service the church had a congregation of goodly numbers, who listened with deep interest as the new pastor delivered his first sermon to them, which was upon the theme, Our Business, from the text "Master, Teach us to Pray."

Rev. Dr. Samuel H. Howe, pastor emeritus, whom Rev. Mr. Shipherd succeeds in the pastorate, was present at the service and gave one of his splendid prayers. The music by the church quartette, Mrs. J. A. Bidwell, soprano; Mrs. Charles E. Schwenk, alto; Lyle H. Fillmore, tenor, and William A. Lund, bass, under the direction of Miss Annie L. Taft, organist, consisted of the anthem, Hark Hark, My Soul, (Shelley), and the offertory, Lead Us, O Father, (Coern), which was a trio for soprano, tenor and alto.

In his sermon Rev. Mr. Shipherd spoke in part as follows:

This is a time where business is king. We live in a country where business is king. The United States believes in business. Europe says so. Asia says so. We say so. All the world says so. What does it mean to be business-minded? The analysis that is most often given includes the word profit. Business is not only to be busy, but to be busy at a profit. If business has an end in view, namely a profit for those who own and a profit for those who manage and a profit for those who labor, their business is going some where and it knows where it is going. It is in this sense of going some where and knowing where one is going that I am thinking of "Our Business."

Our business as a group of people with moral purpose, religious aspiration and a reasonable faith, has a purpose, a cluster of purposes in fact. We are going some where, we are busy, at something, we expect to realize on our effort, we purpose a profit—many profits in fact.

I am concerned this morning with one, only one of the yields that a Christian church exists to realize. It is suggested by the text which marks our morning theme: "Master, teach us to pray." The picture is a very simple one: A young man with a little group of devoted friends. They sat no doubt in the gates of the cities and argued with the elders. From time to time they were in this town and in that town. Jesus chatted with men, he exhorted groups, he rebuked some, he was pleasing, teaching, comforting and steadying. He came to be known as one who went about doing good. Always a few young fellows stayed with him. They ate and slept and walked with him, to and fro, up and down, the countryside. It was one of the odd habits of this young teacher that he would often leave his friends and go off by himself. When he came back to them he seemed different and more than before. One day he had been by himself apart, away from them, and knowing that he had been talking with his father and seeing the change in him, one of his companions said: "Master teach us to pray."

I take it that the friend saw something in his teacher which he wanted to possess himself.

Just as I see and hear a friend play an instrument and the experience is one that I crave for myself. A teacher stirs a desire in the pupil to be like the teacher.

The story goes that he gave his followers a formula to be used as a habit-former. A formula is a help toward an experience that most of us seek in prayer, not a formula merely.

Jesus did not teach His disciples to play. What then did he do? He gave them a glimpse of an experience which they coveted. His experience affected them, was contagious in a penetrating way.

The other thing He did was tot give them a formula to begin work on. It has been a good working formula, and has been used by almost unnumbered generations. This is the Lord's Prayer. It is in fact a formula on which to go to work toward a prayer-habited mind.

Prayer is a method of mind-action, a way of looking at life and a way of living one's life at life's centre. Prayer is instructive and history makes clear that it is universal. Prayer rises out of conscious inadequacy of the self, and it assumes that there is wisdom and power to be found and known. It posits God and dares the belief in the goodness of God. In this sense prayer is a sheer gamble and a splendid dare.

Prayer becomes a process of mind, a way of living. The man who goes to God in conference will have a finer type of integrity. He will check his own greed, reduce his passions, cleanse his heart, restore his self-respect, recover his sanity. Prayer becomes a central civilizing process. For the headstrong and the feeble prayer is a saving process in living.

Prayer as a creative and productive process is "our business."

For this work we may all set ourselves. This is personal work, home work. Youth needs it. Maturity needs it. All men and women need it. No man can do it for his neighbor. It is personal work for and upon one's self. A prayer-formed mind is "our business."

DEFECTIVE EQUIPMENT ON 65 PER CENT OF AUTOS

Defective safety equipment was found on 65 per cent. of the motor vehicles inspected by the inspection section of the state motor vehicle department, cooperating with local and state police, during tests on the highways in the last two weeks of August. Brakes were discovered in poor condition frequently, 62 per cent. of the braking systems being inefficient or ineffective. Thirty per cent. of the cars were without some items of equipment required by law.

Because of the conditions found by the preliminary inspections, it was announced by the department Monday that practical highway tests of equipment will be continued indefinitely. The tests will be made in all parts of the state under a sysematic but flexible plan which will allow check of Connecticut cars at various times. The objective, which it is hoped will be reached by education as well as by enforcement, according to department officials, will be to make certain that all motor vehicle owners comply with the safety equipment regulations.

During the first two weeks of the survey, 672 Connecticut motor vehicles were inspected and tests made on various articles of equipment. Of these, 437 were found with defective equipment of some sort. The brakes on 422 cars were poor, including 260 hand (emergency) and 162 foot or service brakes. Both the hand and foot brakes were defective on a large number of cars. There were 22 vehicles without headlights, 80 with no tail lights, mirrors were missing from 56, windshield wipers from 29, warning horns from eleven, and seven were without markers.

Eight cars were found to have steering gears so worn as to be practically unserviceable. Sixty-nine cars had defective headlights; the lights were not properly placed on three cars, and eight were equipped with lenses which are illegal in this state.

Included among other items of defective equipment discovered by the inspectors were 54 taillights, 41 obstructed or illegible markers, 36 improperly adjusted markers, four defective mirrors, two mirrors not properly placed, 23 defective windshield wipers, 15 defective horns and two defective tires.

Arrests were made in several cases when it was manifest that there was flagrant violation of the law. In all cases where defective equipment was discovered operators and owners were ordered to have repairs made. Such orders have been complied with immediately. Only 39 of 437 were pending, or incomplete so far as repairs were concerned, at the end of the two-weeks' inspection period.

POETRY

The Divine Lullaby

I hear Thy voice, dear Lord;
I hear it by the stormy sea
When winter nights are black and wild,
And when, afright, I call to Thee;
It calms my fears and whispers me,
"Sleep well, my child."

I hear Thy voice, dear Lord,
In singing winds, in falling snow,
The curfew chimes, the midnight bell,—
"Sleep well, my child," it murmurs low;
"The guardian angels come and go—
O child, sleep well!"

I hear Thy voice, dear Lord,
Ay, though the singing winds be stilled,
Though hushed the tumult of the deep,
My fainting heart with anguish chilled
By Thy assuring tone is thrilled—
"Fear not, in sleep!"

Speak on—speak on, dear Lord!
And when the last dread night is near,
With doubts and fears and terrors wild,
With doubts and fears and terrors wild,
Oh, let my soul expiring hear
Only these words of heavenly cheer,
"Sleep well, my child."

Barefeet In The Rain

Kinder wisht I was a boy
When the rain comes ystidday;
Long gray ropes o' rain that smoked
On the pavements 'cross the way.
Kinder wisht that I could be Free o' heart an' young again,
'N roll my pants up to the knee,
Goin' barefeet in the rain.

They's a youngster 'crosst the lawn,
Say, he clum right to the street,
Walked fust like he had a corn;
Till the puddles touched his feet;
Then his cheek wux like a rose,
An' he laughed like he's insane
Squishin' water 'tween his toes,
Goin' barefeet in the rain.

Gutters brimmin' like a flood,
Every manhole gulped an' sang,
An' that youngster splashin' 'round
Like he owned the hull shebang;
Got his britches wet, of course,
When he dangled in the main;
Them things every boy expects
When he's barefeet in the rain.

'N Mary Ann, she went out too,
Helpt her brother build the dam,
Wich the stream kep' leaking through.
Both on 'em happier'n a clam.
Pshaw, I wisht, I wish—say!
What's the use o' loss an' gain?
An' grown-ups—'d like to holler: "Maw, Kin I go barefeet in the rain?"

—James H. Powers, in Boston Globe.

When it comes to living without water, there are "camels" of the plant kingdom as well as of the animal kingdom, asserts Dr. F. L. Pickett, head of the botany department of the State college at Pullman, Wash. This botanist has discovered ferns and mosses in the semi-arid regions of the northwest that will live indefinitely without moisture, he says. While the ordinary plant will not grow without at least a 4 or 5 per cent moisture content, these ferns and mosses may have their water content reduced to one-tenth of 1 per cent. and live in this condition indefinitely, he has found. "Some of these plants, known to have been kept between the leaves of a folder in a perfectly dry state for seven years, began to grow when water was applied," Dr. Pickett asserts. "There is also a wild onion growing in this section of the country which conserves its water supply through the dry season by means of a corky layer on the outside of the bulb."

FIERCE FIGHTING ALONG CHINESE EASTERN RAILWAY

Report Says the Eastern Terminal Has Changed Hands Twice During the Last Three Days, in the Heaviest Fighting Since the Manchurian Dispute Began—Artillery and Airplanes Were Used by the Russians.

(By The Associated Press)

Real war seems to have burst along the Manchurian border between the province of Kirin and the Siberian maritime province between Russia and Chinese forces, which for a month have been strengthening their positions on each side of theb order.

The strategic railway center of Pogranichnaya, eastern terminal of the Chinese Eastern railway, has been the scene of fierce fighting for the last three days. It has changed hands twice in the heaviest fighting yet to occur since the beginning of the Manchurian dispute two months ago.

Despatches from various points in the Far East, Harbin, Mukden, Shanghai and Tokyo, indicate the seriousness of the fighting, artillery and airplanes were used by the Russians but there has been no report of the large number of casualties which may indicate exaggeration of the gravity of the situation.

The belief was held here that the fighting was more in the form of border clashes which had been feared because of the proximity of the opposing troops and not authorized campaigns.

RETALIATORY ACTION BY SOVIET TROOPS

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., Sept. 9.—(AP)—The foreign commissariat tonight stated that soviet troops had been compelled to take firm retaliatory action for the protection of the Siberian frontier and its peaceful population. It alleged there had been 19 new attacks by Chinese and white guards.

The statement was contained in a note handed the German ambassador for transmission to the Mukden and Nanking governments. The note hinted at grave consequences which may result for China if additional provocative assaults occur.

It was stated that there had been 19 new attacks on soviet territory by Chinese troops and white guards for which the Nanking and Mukden governments were fully responsible.

The note said, "the soviet government, as previously, considers that the only way of avoiding additional serious consequences is by immediate measures to terminate these new assaults on soviet territory."

CONFIDENT THERE WILL BE NO OPEN WARFARE

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9—(AP)—Despite the serious character o freports of fighting in Manchuria between soviet Russian and Chinese troops, state department officials tonight tained their confidence that open warfare between the two nations would not result.

A KITCHEN SHOWER FOR MISS FLORENCE TRUMBULL

PLAINVILLE, Sept. 9—(AP)—The young social set of Plainville, home of Gov. John H. Trumbull, gave his daughter Florence, who is to become the bride of Major John Coolidge, son of former President Calvin Coolidge, the afternoon of September 23, a kitchen shower tonight.

The shower, arranged by Mrs. John Minor, Jr., and her sister-in-law, Mrs. Richard Minor, social leaders of this place, was held in the former's home, which adjoins the Trumbull estate.

Miss Trumbull emphatically told The Associated Press that a list of the guests "would not be made public," but declined to give the reason.

A friend of the family who was to attend the shower and who assisted with invitations for the wedding and the reception that will be held at the Trumbull home said that Mrs. Coolidge is taking a "personal interest" in the wedding arrangements. She indicated this interest was more than the usual interest of a mother in her son's marriage.

The same informant said that among the 100 persons, who have been invited to attend the ceremony in Plainville Congregational church, are the former President and Mrs. Coolidge, U. S. Senators Hiram Bingham and Frederic C. Walcott, J. Henry Roraback, chairman of the republican state central committee; J. E. Usher, Plainville postmaster and uncle of the bride, and Mrs. Usher, Edward J. Kelly, executive secretary to the governor, and the governor's staff, of which Major Coolidge is a member.

U. S. MARINE CORPS PISTOL TEAM RETAINS GOLD CUP

CAMP PERRY, Ohio, Sept. 9—(AP)—The United States marine corps pistol team today retained the gold cup, emblematic of the national pistol team championship in the national rifle matches here.

In winning the cup and individual gold medals for the third consecutive year the marines shot a score of 1,286 out of a possible 1,500 to easily defeat 33 other competing teams.

The U. S. infantry team was second with 1,273. The U. S. navy was third with 1,262. The U. S. cavalry was fourth with 1,249 and the Missouri national guard team was fifth with 1,213.

The match was fired over three stages—50 yards slow fire, 25 yards timed fire and 25 yards rapid fire. Each member of the five man teams fired 10 shots for record at each stage.

Lloyd E. Wilson, Cashmere, Wash., civilian, won the national individual pistol match by one point when he fired a score of 270 out of a possible 300.

JOHN RINGLING HAS BOUGHT FIVE CIRCUSES

NEW YORK, Sept. 9—(AP)—John Ringling, noted circus owner, tonight announced purchase of five circuses, Sells Floto, Hagenbeck-Wallace animal show, Sparks, John Robinsons and the Al G. Barnes wild animal show. The transaction was completed here last month, the announcement said.

The purchase price was not disclosed, but the transaction was said to involve millions. Ringling, the last of three famous circus brothers, already owns the Ringling Brothers-Barnum & Bailey shows and the Forepaugh-Sells circus. The acquisitions give him control of the greatest group of tent shows in the world.

The purchase includes all the physical properties of the five shows, their winter quarters and trade names.

When the purchase of the five shows was announced, it was said that they would be operated as individual units, although talent probably would be transferred from one to another.

AVIATORS AND INDIANS SEARCH FOR AIR PILOT

THE PAS, Man., Sept. 9—(AP)—Aviators and Indian trailers today continued an intensive search for C. F. Mews, pilot for the Northern Aerial Minerals Exploration company, who has been missing since he made a forced landing in the wilderness more than two weeks ago.

Searchers have located the plane, apparently abandoned after it ran out of fuel. The Indian trailers, who have found berries stripped from bushes along the route they are taking, have expressed the opinion they will overtake Mews soon—alive or dead. He had only a week's supply of food with him.

"Doc" Oaks, well known northern aviator who taught Mews to fly, is directing the search from the air.

BODIES OF PLANE VICTIMS BEING PREPARED FOR BURIAL

GALLUP, N. M., Sept. 9—(AP)—The bodies of six of the victims of the fatal crash of the Transcontinental Air Transport plane City of San Francisco were being prepared here today for burial. Two of the bodies, believed to be those of A. B. McGaffey, Albuquerque, N. M., businessman, and Mrs. George Raymond, of Glendale, Calif., were taken to Albuquerque.

Identification of the remains of the six bodies here was being made as fast as possible. Through buttons found on shreds of clothing the bodies of Pilot J. B. Stowe, E. A. Dietel, co-pilot and C. F. Canfield, courier, were picked out.

The Gallup undertaker said that through rings, molten pieces of metal found near the bodies, and through dental work and general physical stature, identification would be made of the other victims, Harris Livermore, of Boston, M. M. Campbell, of Cincinnati, and William Henry Beers, of New York.

Officials of the Transcontinental Air Transport indicated today that some days would elapse before regular service is resumed on the route in this section.

Wisconsin was second followed by other states in order of their charter seniority. The department of Maine, as host to the encampment, will be last in line.

Dr. W. G. Gelkie-Cobb, who recently conducted the wedding ceremony for a divorced member of parliament despite disapproval by the bishop, was the advocate of divorce by mutual consent. He accused churches of too great a control of the marriage status.

THREE "PETTING PARTY" BANDITS FELL INTO TRAP

NEWINGTON, Conn., Sept. 9.—(AP)—The three "petting party" bandits, who fell into a trap set for them by Town Prosecutor Harold Lucas, August 25, were bound over to superior court on charges of highway robbery by Town Judge E. Stanley Welles tonight. Bail was fixed at $10,000 for each.

The two men who were shot by the prosecutor the night he, Constable R. V. Hallern and Percy Goodale captured them—Chester Burrello, of 66 Capital avenue, and John Fitzgerald, of 145 Franklin avenue, both of Hartford—have entirely recovered from their wounds. The other man is Julian Masurk, of 1918 Broad street, Hartford.

The men were arraigned solely on the charge of holding up Hallern and Goodale, as Prosecutor Welles knew none of the "petters" whose darkened autos, parked on dark roads, were allegedly invaded by the men would appear against them to press charges.

Countless "petters" had reported being held up and on the night of August 25, Constable Hallern and Goodale, a citizen who volunteered his services, parked themselves in a car on a dark road. Prosecutor Welles, revolver in hand, hid behind a tree. The three Hartford men, one carrying a paper-cap pistol and another a cigarette lighter with the appearance of an automatic pistol, came along, the two officials and citizen say, and held up Hallern and Goodale. Prosecutor Welles sprang out from behind the tree and ordered the bandits to hold up their hands. When they refused and indicated they would show resistance, he fired. Burello and Fitzgerald were wounded and were taken to Hartford hospital. Masurk was lodged in the police lockup.

Police allege that they found much of the loot, which included automobiles, household furnishings, electrical appliances, provisions and sundry other articles at the home of Blodgett.

DEFENSE OF LIGHT AND POWER MERGER

NEW LONDON, Sept. 9—(AP)—M. S. Sloan, head of the New York Edison company and president of the National Electric Light association, in an address before the New England division of the organization, in convention here, tonight defended light and power mergers as further progressive steps in an industry which has contributed "considerably to the prosperity of the country."

He said critics of such mergers know nothing of the "nature of the business or they would not denounce the mergers," and added. "I fear no social or economic difficulties in such concentration."

After presenting statistics proving the national and individual wealth of the country, Sloan said, "the power and light industry deserves some of the credit, at least, for the nation's prosperity. I am willing to make no comment except on the weather," and walked away. As at that moment the mercury was nearing the 90 mark perhaps the lack of interest Mr. Roraback displayed in politics may be explained and forgiven.

The telegram was in response to a message received at the white house from McClintic, who is a member of the house naval committee, stating that Jones had been in close connection with Shearer.

Admiral Jones was technical adviser to the American delegation at the ill-fated Geneva conference in 1927 and now is an adviser of President Hoover in naval disarmament negotiations.

Scannell's throat had been cut from ear to ear. A terrific struggle apparently took place those who found the body on the banks of the Rio Grande, said.

Scannell's assailants are believed to have gone back across the river into Mexico.

NATIONAL ENCAMPMENT OF SPANISH WAR VETS

DENVER, Sept. 9.—(AP)—Taking a direct slap at an effort made by one Spanish-American war veterans camp in the Washington-Alaska department to limit its membership to the white race and criticizing conditions in many of the government hospitals and soldiers homes throughout the country, the annual report of the officers of the U. S. A. W. V., was placed in the hands of thousands of delegates at the opening session of the national encampment here today.

In one instance, the report reveals, veteran hospital patients suffering with mental diseases are kept in a ward also used for "sobering up" drunks. Inspection of another government institution disclosed that bootleggers in the nearest town, four miles away, victimize the veterans.

A number of the institutions devoted to the veterans are overcrowded and consist of old buildings which are a fire menace, the report contends. In others, funds to supply the inmates with respectable uniforms are not available, so the veterans put up a ragged and tattered appearance the report charges.

The slap at the effort of one of the camps of the veterans' organizations to limit its membership along racial lines was taken in the report of the national judge advocate general. He ruled that a by-law of the camp excluding as members all persons not of the white race was invalid and quoted a decision to the same effect of a former judge advocate general.

The political campaign in the national encampment was developing rapidly as two candidates appeared in the field for commander-in-chief for the ensuing year.

With Governor Fred W. Green of Michigan, as the candidate of the administration group and Col. Winfield Scott, former commissioner of pensions as his leading opponent, the race promised to be the most hotly contested in years.

RESOLUTION IN SENATE TO DENY VARE A SEAT

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9—(AP)—The three-year-old dispute over the right of William S. Vare to a seat in the senate was suddenly forced before the tariff-minded senate for determination today by Senator Norris, republican, Nebraska, with a resolution to bar the Pennsylvania republican.

Offered just as the debate on the tariff bill was opening, the resolution was promised precedence over the tariff, to which the Nebraska senator is vigorously opposed. The surprised republican leadership forestalled debate on Norris' resolution for a day but Senator Robinson of Arkansas, the democratic leader, announced later he thought the Vare case should be settled now.

It seemed certain tonight that the issue would sidetrack indefinitely the republican tariff measure beginning tomorow or Wednesday.

Senator Watson, the republican leader, forced a day's delay by invoking the senate rule that all resolutions must lie over for a day. Norris gave notice he would call it up tomorrow and Vice President Curtis ruled the resolution was privileged.

MAIL TURNED BACK TO SHIP BECAUSE OF FOG

BOSTON, Sept. 9—(AP)—The North German Lloyd line officers here were notified at 6:05 p. m., (e. d. t.) that the New York mail from the Bremen, bound for Boston, had turned back to the ship because of heavy fog along the coast.

Because of the pontoons on the New York, it will be impossible for it to land on the Bremen deck. It was planned to land on water beside the ship, making it possible to hoist the plane aboard.

The New York, in its flight shoreward, was in constant communication by radio with both the Bremen and the navy yard.

In the Supermarine S-6 which won the race for Flying Officer Waghorn of the British team, Orlebar will shoot over the straight three kilometre course above Southampton water in an effort to register 370 miles an hour.

The record is 332.49 miles an hour.

There is growing discussion here as to the advisability of holding more Schneider cup contests. Colonel Bernasconi, captain of the defeated Italian team, said today: "I doubt if Italy will take part in the Schneider cup race again because the cost is too great. If Great Britain wins the next race and gains permanent possession of the trophy, that will be the end of the event."

It is estimated that Italy spent $5,000,000 on the Schneider trophy machines and in preparation for the race.

MAY NOT BE PROSECUTED FOR THEFT OF $3,000 DOG

STAMFORD, Sept. 9.—(AP)—Edward B. Rockwell, 35, self-styled British war flyer, who was arrested here on a charge preferred at Lewisboro, N. Y., that he stole a $3,000 police dog, may not be taken to that place for prosecution, it was indicated tonight.

They reported the following answer from Justice of the Peace Webster, of Lewisboro to the telephoned news that Rockwell was in custody here: "Oh, that fellow. Tell the state police about it." The arrest was made on a warrant signed by Justice Webster.

If the Lewisboro authorities, who failed to come this afternoon for Rockwell as expected, do not call for him, he will be held a day or two longer and released, unless a local investigation bears fruit.

POLICE SERGEANT'S OFFICE IS VOTED ABOLISHED

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC, Sept. 9—The office of sergeant of police was abolished in a resolution presented by the police committee and adopted at the September meeting of the common council here tonight. Chairman Eugene B. Lewis of the committee explained that the act was a conservative measure which placed the patrolmen on their honor as to the performance of their duty on the night beats. Sergeant Grant Bombria, who has occupied the office for some years, has been incapacitated for some time from an injury sustained in performance of his duty. The office has been filled for some time by Officer Roderick Lariviere. The principal duty of the sergeant was to supervise the work of the night patrolmen.

The cutting of trees in the city is prohibited and a fine of not less than $25 is provided in case of violation of a resolution presented at the meeting by Alderman Webber. The action follows considerable agitation against a vote which spelled doom for a number of this city's beautiful trees and which was rescinded after the cutting of one tree had been started. Trees that through age or decay become dangerous to travel are to be reported to the council for action according to the resolution. Another resolution by Alderman Webber provides that no additional gasoline station permits within the city shall be granted except on the south side of the Willimantic river or except by unanimous vote of the council.

CORONER FERGUSON TO BEGIN INQUEST IN PLANE FATALITY

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., Sept. 9.—Coroner John Ferguson will begin today (Tuesday) his inquest into the deaths of Mrs. Marie Antoinette (Gamache) Hunter, 21, wife of Fred Hunter of 13 Avery street, Westfield, Mass., bookkeeper and stenographer, and Miss Marie L. Day, 20, telephone operator, daughter of Alexander W. Day, of 20 Colton avenue, West Springfield, Mass. Both lost their lives in the burning of the two-passenger Travel-air biplane, piloted by Lieut. Arthur Manning, of Hartford, which burst into flame while making a forced landing at the Atlantic airport field, Misquamicut, about 4:35 p. m. Labor day. Examiner Dr. Michael H. Scanlon, called to the field following the crash, gave his opinion that the deaths were due to suffocation and body burns.

The two badly charred bodies were brought to Westerly and the following day after examination and positive identification from rings worn, were taken to Springfield. Miss Day was buried in St. Michael's cemetery, West Springfield, and Mrs. Hunter in Pine Hill cemetery, Westfield. Following the crack-up at the Misquamicut field, Pilot Manning was found with his head on his arms about 300 feet from the burning plane. He was rushed to Westerly hospital by Hjalmar E. W. Larson, who was staying at his summer home nearby and has been at the hospital ever since, being treated for severe burns on his hands, arms and face. Larson had planned to take an air trip at the time of the fatal flight ending, in order to secure photographs and due to the thick haze had postponed his trip until the following day.

Lieut. Manning was reported to Chief of Police Thomas E. Brown Monday at the hospital as in a much better condition and able to talk with investigating authorities, having at first been allowed to talk with no one concerning the accident. On the day following the plane crash, New England Inspector John Moran, of the department of commerce, flew to the Misquamicut flying field and made a careful examination of the burned plane and talked to witnesses. At the conclusion of the federal official's investigation the statement was made that the cause had been ascertained but would not be disclosed.

PURCHASES PROPERTY FOR NEW HOTEL SITE HERE

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Sept. 9—Danielson will be joyous over the fact that an ambition that it has dreamt of for a number of years is about to become a reality. Late this afternoon it was announced that Earl C. Rogers, landlord and owner of the Putnam inn at Putnam has purchased through J. Carl Witter the T. E. Hopkins estate at North Main and Hutchins street, opposite Westcott road, the trunk line outlet to Providence and is to develop it into one of the finest hotel properties in the eastern part of Connecticut. The fine old mansion setting well back from the Norwich-Worcester trunk line highway is surrounded by beautiful lawns and magnificent old shade trees. There are six and a half acres of land in the estate.

Mr. Rogers said this evening that he will begin alteration and enlargement operations immediately, and that he intends to have preliminary work underway before the end of the present week. He was not prepared this afternoon to reveal in detail his plans for the hotel, but his assurance is that it will be one of the finest of its type, a tourist-commercial hotel, for many miles about. Construction of an addition will be necessary, but just how large this will be and what it will contain remain subject to future announcement.

Mr. Rogers is one of the best known hotel men in southern New England. He has spent practically a lifetime in successful catering to the public. He has built a splendid reputation as a host to the public. In this lies the assurance that Danielson is about to have a splendid hotel, modern in every particular, in a beautiful setting and certain to fulfill a long felt requirement of the community.

The location of the hotel is at the junction of the Hartford-Providence and Norwich-Worcester trunk line highways, and it is one of the best locations for such a hostelry as is to be developed there in this section of southern New England.

STOLEN GOODS LOCATED IN PROVIDENCE STORES

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Sept. 9—Three of a considerable number of men's suits stolen from The Church Co., store in a burglary over the Labor day holiday, were located today in out of the way clothing stores for men in Providence. William Levinsky, with a store on South Main street, Providence, had a $45 blue serge suit that he had admitted he bought on Labor day about noon time for $3.55. At Morris Robinovitch's store on the same street two other suits were located, one a blue serge which retails for $50 and was sold for $7 and a brown suit selling at $45, which Robinovitch bought for $4. Inspector Tidd of the Providence police located the suits from descriptions furnished the department from Danielson. Both Levinsky and Robinovitch told Chief John McFarland and Sergt. George L. Gardiner, state officer of Danielson, that they had purchased the suits from two young men whom they did not know. Frankie Ayotte, an Attawaugan boy, on parole from the state school for boys at Meriden, who had been held by Providence police on suspicion of being implicated in the Church store break, was brought back here by the local officers but released after questioning.

W. A. Musgrave left here today for New York to attend the international congress of accountants being held this week at the Hotel Commodore. Mr. Musgrave is scheduled to make two addresses before the assemblage of accountants, in excess of 1500 in number and representative not only of the United States, but also of England, Ireland, France, Germany, Italy, Roumania and Australia. Mr. Musgrave will speak Tuesday on Problems of Depreciation and Obsolescence as Effected by Appraisals, and on Wednesday on The Accountant's Responsibility for Inventory.

Henry A. Myers announced today that he is to have installed a milk pasteurization plant at his place on Mechanic street. It will be the first in Danielson. Mr. Myers has an accredited herd of cattle and among others supplies a large quantity of milk daily to schools in Danielson. Some of the equipment for the new plant already has arrived here and the remainder of it will be along at once.

Four Court Cases.

Judge W. Fenner Woodward disposed of four cases that came before him this morning in the town court. John Sweiard, resident in the Mashentuck section of the town, was fined $5 and costs, a total of $15.50, for failure to grant the right of way. His car figured in an accident with another machine at a point where a dirt road cuts across a state road at Killingly Center late Saturday night. William Harrell, operator of the other car, was injured in the accident.

Antoine Cote, a young man, who was before the court in August, came in again this morning to answer to charges of intoxication and breach of the peace. Because of his inclination not to do better than he has been doing he was sentenced to serve 60 days in jail—30 days on each count. Leo Comtois, facing charges like those filed against Cote, was fined $1.00 on each count, and costs, a total of $10.74.

Herbert Watson of Mystic was fined $100 and costs and given a sentence of 30 days in jail for operating a motor vehicle while he was intoxicated. Of the fine $75 was remitted and the jail sentence suspended. Watson is married and has a child.

After a suspension of regular meetings that has extended through the summer season the chamber of commerce is to meet Tuesday evening of this week, and will have various matters of public interest to talk over. The members will gather at the Attawaugan hotel at the usual hour and have a supper before proceeding with the business session. One of the proposals that is scheduled to come before the meeting will have to do, upon recommendation of the board of directors, with requesting the town to publish, presumably in the annual town report, the names of delinquent taxpayers. This could be accomplished, if a majority of the voters are agreeable, through having a clause dealing with the matter inserted in the warning for the annual town meeting. Still another matter to be on the discussion list for Tuesday evening is that having to do with the general revaluation of the property of the town that must be made during 1930. The chamber has previously discussed this matter and has had various viewpoints on how the work should be done presented. However, up to this time the town has taken no formal action in preparation for the work, and it has not been decided whether it will be done by experts in revaluation work or by local residents.

Still another subject that will get discussion Tuesday evening will be that of snow removal from the business section, especially along Main street, a narrow thoroughfare at the best and always heavily laden with traffic and its sides lined with parked cars. In the winter state highway department plows clear the street, pushing the snow out into the gutters, where it is piled up along with that cleared from sidewalks and allowed to remain. This further narrows the street. The chamber of commerce would like some arrangement for the carting away of this accumulation of snow.

There is a mineral spring in territory south of South Killingly in which there recently has been a revival of interest, though the spring has long been known to older residents of some sections of the town and of nearby towns. The water is said to taste much like waters of a sulphur spring and is said to have certain curative qualities. The present owner of the land where the spring is located is to have it housed over. There is an ancient tale relative to this spring that goes back to the days when oxen were used to haul materials and supplies between this town and Providence. The gist of it is that the owners of the spring back in those days used to fill a barrel with this mineral water and trade it in Providence for a barrel of rum. No one now living can vouch for the truth of this yarn, but there are those still in Killingly who recall having heard their ancestors tell about it. For one thing, the water of the spring, applied externally, is said to be a prompt and certain cure for ivy poisoning.

After all, Thursday night's republican caucus is not to be without a contest. It was learned today that Joseph Ware, of Attawaugan, is again to battle Selectman Napoleon P. Gingras, of Dayville, for the nomination for second selectman. Ware made an unsuccessful attempt to defeat Gingras a year ago. While this contest centers between two second district candidates, it becomes of general interest to the republicans of the town because Selectman Gingras is a member of the board that made the splendid record of reducing the town's debt by about $26,000 the past year.

PUTNAM

MAYS FARM NOT TO BE MADE INTO AN AIRPORT

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, Sept. 9—The farm of William Mays on the Pomfret-Putnam road, recently purchased by Charles Van Brunt Cushman, wealthy Pomfret man, will not be converted into an airport or a racing park, William F. Johnson, secretary to Mr. Cushman said today.

Following Mr. Cushman's purchase of the vast farm lands rumors were widely circulated to the effect that Mr. Cushman's intentions were that of building an airport and still other stories were current that the Pomfret sportsman's object of purchase was to have a racing track over which the colors of the Cushman stables would fly.

Mr. Johnson said this afternoon that his employer's live stock enterprise has grown so rapidly that he was forced to acquire the Mays farm to pasture and house his cattle, and this is what the acreage is being used for at the present time. The secretary asserted that Mr. Cushman, when asked, denied contemplating the erection of a horse-racing park or an airport, such as were described in the unfounded rumors. For the present Mr. Johnson added, the Mays' farm will be used only as a cattle farm for the Cushman stock.

MARY LAFRAMBOISE SECOND IN BIG DIVING CONTEST

Mary LaFramboise, of Jewett City, 13-year old diving star of the Ashland club, finished second in the women's high board diving contest which was one of the events of a most colorful water meet promoted by the Brookline Swimming association at Boston, Saturday.

The diving event was won by Ester Morrison, senior New England champion and nationally known star.

No less than a dozen title holders for various distances and branches of swimming were competitors in the meet, which had upwards of 50 entries, male and female. State, district, national, Olympic and world titleholders were listed. The bride was gowned in an ivory satin dress embroidered with seed pearls and with orange blossoms, caught on the skirt. A tull veil with valencienne lace was caught on each side with pearls and orange blossoms. Her bouquet was of white roses and sweet peas. She wore a pearl necklace. The baseball pot has kept up a steady bubbling, with occasional boiling over periods, ever since the world renowned series ended, between the Benedicts and Bachelors. The married men's trouncing at the hands of the single players appears to still be rankling. Now comes that great baseball organizer, "Jale" Weschler. He declared at a largely attended meeting Sunday afternoon that he would guarantee to put a married men's team in the field some time this week that would reverse the recent trimming records. Managers Barnett and Blake accepted the challenge, with the promise that the greatest game in all history is in the offing. Of Manager Weschler it is known that what he proposes that he performs. ENTERING THE WORLD COURT.

Whether the United States should become a member of the world court has been a much discussed question. In view of the favorable action by the diplomatic conference at The Hague in giving its approval to the Root formula under which it would be possible for the other nations to accept our reservations in joining, we are nearer than ever to joining, but there remains the necessity of favorable action by the United States senate. What that body will do no man knoweth, but it is known that President Hoover has given his approval to the plan and hope continues strong that the senate will do likewise.

The senate has previously considered joining the court. Then the question was raised concerning the relationship of the court to the league of nations and it was claimed that a member of the league could call for advisory opinions concerning questions arising between two nations, and that inasmuch as the court is required to give them it would involve this country with the league.

Adherence to the league was finally agreed upon with reservations, one of which had to do with advisory opinions. By this it would be necessary to first obtain the consent of the United States if the question involved this country. These reservations had to be approved by all the members of the court and therein was encountered a stumbling block. It was then that Elihu Root was delegated to represent this country and interpret the meaning of the reservations. It was as the result of his visit to Geneva and the setting forth of the intentions of this country that the formula now being considered was produced.

The Root plan in regard to such changes in the statutes of the world court as will protect the point raised by the United States relative to advisory opinions has received favorable attention thus far. It promises to get the endorsement of the assembly of the league of nations even though it insures notification of the United States in case an advisory opinion is asked of the court concerning a matter involving this country or in which it is interested and also permits this country to state its wishes. It remains to be brought before the United States senate where a renewal of the previous debate can be expected. With our interests protected, however, it should clear the way for our entrance into the court.

RANK VANDALISM.

Nothing much more cowardly and contemptible can be imagined than the desecration of cemeteries. Fortunately these acts of vandalism do not occur very often, but when they do it is indicated that they are perpetrated by those who give little heed to what they are doing and are chiefly relying upon working out some grudge or giving vent to an outburst of fanaticism.

The latest instance of this destructive work is reported in Salem, Mass., where over 100 graves were desecrated, monuments overturned, stones broken and disfigured, markers uprooted and grass plots dug up. Ropes and crowbars were used in accomplishing the dastardly work and there is no mistaking the fact that the wreckage that was created was intentional. Just what satisfaction anyone could gain in destroying the markers on the resting place of the dead is difficult to understand, but evidently some misguided persons thought there was some and havoc is the result.

It will be unfortunate if it is not possible to locate and arrest all those who took part in such a disgraceful affair. If they are mentally responsible, which hardly seems possible, they should be made to feel the full penalty of the law, and if they are not responsible they should be placed where they will get no chance of any future outbreak. It is bad enough to have cemeteries neglected by those who should be interested in them, but when graves are well marked, expensive monuments are placed and grounds are made attractive those who conspire to destroy this work must be regarded as a menace to any community. They display a citizenship of such a low order, such a disregard for law and such disrespect for the dead that they can be regarded only as a menace to a community, and should be treated accordingly.

PRIVILEGES IN CHINA.

Under what are known as extraterritorial privileges China has permitted other countries to have consular courts at which the cases of citizens of the respective countries are tried under the laws of their own countries. There are also the concession areas which other countries control.

China has been endeavoring with much success to terminate the rights possessed by other powers in that country. It has impressed upon them the fact that China is able to take care of its affairs much better than it used to be and they have yielded to the desire for the ending of outside control.

Encouraged by this China has asked for the ending of these privileges in communications submitted to the respective governments. There arises in this connection the question of China's fitness to deal justly with cases which would now be handled in consular courts and which would concern those located in the concessions.

It is a situation where there is need of better proof of this disposition and ability. Consequently this country in replying to the appeal has set forth that while we are not ready to give up these privileges at the present time we are ready to see what China intends to do and can do in assuming these responsibilities and if it is satisfactory to afrange for a gradual abandonment of the privileges, it will be done. This government rightly has no intention of abandoning such protection as the American residents of China require. It is not concerned so much in the matter of concessions as other countries, and yet Great Britain takes much the same attitude that the United States does in being willing to talk over the possibilities of a gradual retirement from present privileges.

It must be apparent to China that if it is prepared to give the protection to subjects of other nations which would be expected of it upon relinquishment of their privileges by other countries, it should be ready and willing to demonstrate what it can do. Thus while it hasn't received a reply which indicates immediate compliance it has grounds for satisfaction in knowing that relinquishment will depend to a large extent upon itself. When China is ready to meet requirements and can prove it, it will be in a way to get what it wishes.

BOLIVIA AND PARAGUAY.

Right after the settlement of the long standing difference between Chile and Peru over the provinces of Tacna and Arica, there comes an interesting possibility that similar result will attend the efforts which have been underway for the past several months looking toward the adjustment of the dispute over boundaries between Bolivia and Paraguay. There would be equal cause for rejoicing over the latter agreement as over the former.

Bolivia has long been denied an outlet to the sea. There was a time that it possessed one, but it was not strong enough to retain it. Its avenue to the Pacific was valuable and it was a serious blow when it lost it, and efforts to regain it through peaceful methods have never succeeded. There was a suggestion that a corridor to the sea might be provided for Bolivia in the settlement of the Chile-Peru contest, but it failed of success.

Denied the way to the west Bolivia naturally turned its attention to the east and it has been involved in a long dispute over boundaries concerning that great unused territory known as Gran Chaco. The threat of a war between Bolivia and Paraguay prompted peace efforts and now there has been devised a plan by the commission engaged in conciliating their differences which it is hoped the respective countries will approve. Under this Paraguay would receive the territory for which it has been contending and Bolivia would be given a port on the Paraguay river. This would provide it an outlet to the ocean for which it is so anxious and the arrangement would seem to be an ideal one.

It would require some development on the part of Bolivia to make full use of such a port, but it holds the best prospects that country has at the present time of seeing its ambitions realized. What might happen should Bolivia become involved in war with Paraguay is a question. It would be inclined to inflame other countries and cause much destruction and distress with no assurance of relief. Settled through peaceful methods there would be eliminated that feeling and opposition which always accompany battlefield decisions, a better neighborhood spirit would be created and the outcome would react to the general benefit of the lower part of South America. If Argentina has any influence it should be for a friendly settlement.

FOREST FIRES.

Rain in this part of the country has temporarily halted the danger from forest fires. It is to be hoped that as much relief has been obtained in other sections of the county where the danger from such fires is as great if not greater.

Last week it was the declaration of Chief Andrews of the forest fighters of Michigan that "it is the most critical hour in my memory. The long drought has made the forests suitable kindling for a series of the most disastrous forest fires in our history and unless a merciful rain comes the question of control is one of grave doubt."

Michigan has extensive forests enough to create such concern in view of the dry conditions that prevailed, but it is to be hoped that it was not also confronted with the same situation that is faced in California where the state forester has been quoted as saying that 75 forest, brush and grass fires have been deliberately set.

The handicap is bad enough where those engaged in prevention work, fire lookouts and fire fighters are forced to contend with the fires which are caused by lightning, by locomotives and by careless individuals, but it is a particularly distressing situation where such heavy losses and the efforts to check them are intentionally caused.

When the horrors of a big forest fire are realized, and they must be by those who have resided in states where there are great wooded areas, it is difficult to understand how anyone could knowingly start fires which they know others will have great difficulty in stopping and which may cause the loss of life and the destruction of homes as well as valuable timber, to say nothing of the birds and animals that will be sure to be destroyed. It lends emphasis to the lesson of carelessness for those who know better.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The man on the corner says: Will someone please call back the dog days?

With the thousands of cigarette butts being thrown away every minute, perhaps the wonder is that there are not more fires.

Even though Louisiana exports over a million dollars worth of Spanish moss yearly there's no danger that there'll be a shortage.

There's a dryness that can be relieved by going to Canada, but when it comes to breaking a drought the dominion is helpless.

WASHINGTON AFFAIRS

(Special to The Bulletin)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9—With the fall of the speaker's gavel in the house, the 23rd of this month, a full Connecticut delegation will be present. Floor Leader Tilson occupying the seat of honor on the republican side as leader of those forces on the floor. Since the removal of desks from the house chamber within the last ten or 12 years, only those conducting the debate, and the floor leaders, of the two major parties have desks, or rather they have large mahogany tables in front of the seats specially reserved for the leaders. Facing the speaker, and sitting at the end of the table next the main aisle, Col. Tilson is daily at his post. It is he who, having mapped out the program for the day, in conference with the speaker and rules committee, takes the wheel and pilots the day's work till adjournment. It's a big job, but Tilson is equal to it, and comes through the session with even a higher standing than he began with, among both the members of his own party and those of the opposing party. That's a remarkable thing, for the majority floor leader always has to bear the brunt of saying "no" when members beg for time, for attention, for pushing through some matter not on the official program, and being a general buffer for the party. Tilson does it to perfection he doesn't lose either his poise, his temper or his determination to play fair with everybody. Everybody admires and likes him, even when he points a long finger at some offender, and roars "Mr. Speaker, the gentleman is out of order." But he will have his hands full when the tariff gets back to the house, battered, bruised and unrecognizable as the bill passed by that body last June.

Some of us who watched the passage of the 1922 Fordney bill, and listened to the bitter accusations and heated debates of conflicting factions, recall some of the amusing slips of the tongue committed by noted and zealous advocates for or against some of the items. Will Sen. Borah, for instance, bring senate and galleries into unrebuked laughter this time, as he did unwittingly one day during the Fordney tariff discussion? It happened this way: The discussion was so full of personal accusation and recrimination that an outbreak of hand to hand tussles seemed imminent. Then Borah, saved the day, by breaking in with one of his most ardent and eloquent pleas. But in his anxiety to keep the ball rolling, he referred to "long-tailed cotton" instead of long staple cotton. The slip was unquestionably intentional, and broke the high tension. Senator Robinson of Arkansas, the recent candidate for democratic vice president, rose and waving his long arms, shouted: "The republicans are wasting our valuable time," then argued for more than two hours; the late Senator Jones of New Mexico, democratic, also set what he termed "a brief statement" talking four hours on a stretch then remarking, "I have thus stated briefly a few of the objections to the item now being considered."

Another amusing incident of that day was when Senator Tom Heflin of Alabama, with his customary haste to be heard, lest the country lose one of his 57 varieties of daily utterances, rose and vehemently declared in favor of a high tariff on graphite, one of Alabama's products, in the same breath he lambasted the republican party for protection of American products. In an instant Borah was again on his feet calling out "We welcome the senator from Alabama to our ranks. He is a fine protectionist in spots."

Another episode of the day which I recall, was the hasty flight of Senator Brandegee of Connecticut from his seat next to Senator Smoot, over to the Cherokee strip at the far end of the democratic side of the senate. Smoot is long of arm and violent of gesture, and after ducking for safety from Smoot's wildly sweeping arms, as he led a hot debate, Brandegee decided his safety was in giving Smoot more elbow room. So he sat out the debate on the democratic side of the chamber, in the very midst of those who were walloping his side both in open discussion and by exceedingly uncomplimentary whispered personal comments.

Someone remarked the other day how much future presidents would miss the Mayflower, as for the past 30 years or more each successive chief executive has made it the principal source of his summer pleasure trips. And presidential wives have likewise used it to entertain their women friends.

But it occurred to me, that if the story is true, that is told about that distinguished member of the house from Massachusetts, the Hon. A. Piatt Andrew, he will regret the scrapping of the Mayflower fully as much as any one else. He has good reason to, for the Mayflower is held responsible for one of the thrilling and surprising moments of his life.

Way back, so they say, when Harding was president, Secretary of the Navy Denby was taking an official party down the Potomac to Quantico, to inspect 8,000 marines in camp there. Mr. Andrew was an invited guest, but he was just a lap too late to board the Mayflower via the regulation gang-plank.

The great yacht had pulled off, when Andrew reached the wharf, anxiously waving a signal that he wanted to get aboard. It happened that a derrick was dredging near the pier, so the Mayflower slowed up its speed, backed a bit, and stood by while workmen slipped Andrew into the bucket of the dredge and hoisted him across the intervening water, and he was landed on the deck of the Mayflower. The Navy band struck up a noisy jazz welcome in his honor.

Col. Andrew is the last man in the world a distinguished company would expect to see land at their feet in a mud-bucket. He was director of the mint; assistant secretary of the treasury; a colonel overseas in the World war, cited by both American and French armies; and moreover is very generally regarded as one of the best dressed, best poised and most punctilliously polite men in congress. But he is born to command, and they say he ordered those workmen to "put me in that bucket and hoist me on board," as if in command of a regiment, and didn't blink an eye-lid, when they lifted him up and thrust him over the side of the bucket, while the secretary of the navy and a most distinguished company cheered his approach to the yacht. Andrew could grin his appreciation but couldn't wave back, as it took both hands to hold on to the chains of the swaying bucket.

A ring lost five years ago was recently found securely imbedded in a magpie's nest at Great Falls, Mont. Roy Johnson lost the ring in 1924 while feeding cattle on a ranch twelve miles south of Belt. The ring was found the other day by Norman Johnson, ten, when the boy tore down a magpie's nest, built in the willow roof of an old cow shed. Twigs and grass were so closely woven around and through the ring that the lad had difficulty extricating the shining piece of gold.

CUPID'S INCONSISTENCY

Betty Bell sat with dainty aloofness behind a typewriter in the outer office of J. Woodard Carlson. Her hair was arranged in the mode of the moment; her dress was of exquisite texture and style; her hose were sheer and lovely, and the visibility of her tiny feet was very nearly lost in shoes with outrageously high heels.

Betty Bell's thoughts were filmy, gossamer creations that usually drifted dreamily at the slightest provocation, but today they fairly sailed because she was going out to dinner with Morgan Hargrave. And was not that enough to make almost any girl's sail?

Peck, peck, peck went trim little fingers on pert little keys and all the while Betty visioned a scene where bungalows spring in mushroom sprightliness along a row of vacant lots. How adorable it would be to be a bride and have one of those elf-like structures for one's own, to weave one's days between snug little rooms just large enough for two.

She even dreamed of cotton house dresses, the kind with gay little nosegays of flowers embroidered at the throat and on the pockets. But who said anything about being a bride?

And then she was sitting opposite to Morgan Hargrave. Yes, Morgan certainly knew how to treat a girl. They feasted on rare food, each other's eyes and soulful revelations.

"What's your idea of a husband, Betty?" Morgan purred the words above his salad. Betty's heart went thump. "A man you would want to marry," Morgan endeavored to be more explicit. "What must he do and be?" Betty floundered for words, the right words, the correct thing to say upon this most unusual occasion.

"Of course he must love me," she faltered, "but love is not enough—"

"He must be rich?" questioned Morgan and frowned.

"Oh, no, not rich," stammered Betty, and hesitated, then added brightly, "but he must save his money; he must economize. I'd never think of marrying a spendthrift. They don't get anywhere." Her look was puritanical, adorable.

"That's right," agreed Morgan solemnly and went on with his salad.

"Turn about's fair play," suggested Betty archly. "Suppose you describe the girl of your dreams."

"Well, I'd like her to be as pretty as you are," Morgan began. Betty's cheeks burned. "And I'd like her to know how to cook." Betty's heart quaked. "And I'd like her to be sweet and unsophisticated and sensible, just as you are."

"For instance," he went on to explain, "some girls are so silly, just use poor judgment, I guess, and go out in any kind of weather with abominably high heels, shadow hose and the like, and are never out of reach of their makeup box." Betty drew her spikes together beneath the table, and with one hand clutched tightly the little bag that concealed her compact. A small silence fell between them.

"I wonder if he meant all that," Betty thought anxiously.

Presently Morgan's countenance brightened. He drew a small envelope from his vest pocket.

"I got two theater tickets for this evening," he announced. Betty beamed.

And on their way from the restaurant to the theater Morgan insisted on stopping at an exclusive little flower shop and buying the prettiest corsage bouquet that he could find.

Very late that night the dovelike pair paused for a moment on Betty's doorstep.

"You're the dearest girl in the whole wide world," whispered Morgan, "and I'm as poor as can be, but will you marry me?"

Betty sang out a little half-audible "Yes," completely forgot her spikes and shadow hose and vanity case and nestled happily and securely in a pair of encompassing arms.—Chicago News

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10—Back in the days of the three-power naval conference at Geneva—the conference that brought about the Anglo-American cruiser deadlock—virtually every move of the conference or its committees got into print with no delay.

The press was full of discussion of technical details of various proposals and counter proposals. There seemed to be a notion on the part of both the American and British delegations that extreme frankness and wide publicity might be helpful.

It was not, as it proved, and the Bystander has long been of the notion that it was harmful instead.

Where nations meet in conference on any subject, a willingness to make sacrifices is essential to successful outcome of the deliberations.

What is being sought is a middle-of-the-road understanding. Presumably all parties must yield something to reach it, just as all parties must feel that they have gained something in exchange.

Hampered

And where intensive press discussion of details has set up in each country a weight of popular opinion which makes it impossible for any delegation to yield a point without subjecting itself to severe criticism at home, this give-and-take method of arriving at a mutually acceptable compromise would seem to be seriously hampered.

Woodrow Wilson's doctrine of open international covenants, openly arrived at, could not have assumed that every step of treaty negotiations was to be carried on in public. It merely meant that all treaty commitments should be made public when arrived at, and no secret understandings lie behind any covenant.

However this may be, it was obvious from the start of the new Anglo-American naval conversations that a wholly different publicity policy was to be the order of the day.

In Washington the rule of secrecy was so strictly enforced that it seemed certain that only President Hoover, Secretary Stimson and Under Secretary Cotton of the state department, and possibly Secretary Adams and Rear Admiral Hughes, naval chief of operations, had full information as to proceedings from day to day.

As a matter of fact, Mr. Hoover, Mr. Stimson and Mr. Cotton, the last named being in a way the administration's executive officer in charge of the conversations with London, seemed to have access to all the messages exchanged. Certainly state department and navy officials generally got no sight of them.

London More Open

There were some signs that London was not quite so reticent. In late August a number of dispatches from London indicated that somebody might be talking in more or less concrete terms.

Anyone versed in the cruiser debate as it figured in the news during the three-power conference, or again during passage of the 15-cruiser bill by the last congress, could figure out from these reports a more or less complete picture of an accord in terms of ships, guns, tonnage, etc.

The trouble was to know whether there was actual basis of authority behind the terms outlined, or whether they merely represented suggestions of the writers or their friends in London official circles as to what logically might be the basis of such an understanding.

What was strongly implied, however, was that when the accord was arrived at and its terms made known, it would be found to be based on no technical application of a yardstick of relative naval power, but rather on a broad understanding as to what use each government would make of its navy in any future war.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Sands Of Time

Mr. Editor:—Do you ever stop to think this old world is not so large after all? No matter where you wander, you will always run up against someone who like yourself has wandered away from the old home town, and is out in the world trying to make good. And it has been my experience that the boys who call Norwich their home have made good and have left an impression upon any community where they have located. 'Tis said that no man is a prophet in his own country. Construe the meaning of that as you may the concrete fact remains that the one who does get away from a certain environment creates efficiency and makes his presence felt in other places. If we study and grope around and ask the why of this we soon find the answer, for it can be said it is the something that is beaind the education that they have secured through study, and through the teachers in the public schools of their home town, Norwich.

Only the other day I ran across a Norwich boy, one who had lived the greater part of his life in the "Rose of New England" and today he holds a responsible position with the Mohican company, as a buyer. At one time he lived on North Main street, two or three doors below the old St. Mary's church. I am many years ahead of him on the trail and he too loves to come back and give the old home town the once over. Yet, go where we may, we may be successful in the business world. Perhaps we may have laid aside a little for a rainy day, but still there is an eternal wage in our lives that compels us to go back to return to the scenes of our boyhood, to see once again the loved spots we knew so well, to our old home. To us there is no spot on God's green earth that holds us and brings us memories as does a man's home, where we have spent our boyhood days, where we played our games with the old gang, and without a thought of the years to come, no worry, no care. As we talked I told him I have had at times an attack of the wanderlust and I had to go back even if it was only for an hour and then I was satisfied. Explain it as you may there comes at times an irresistable wish to get back and see someone you have known. Then you bring up some of the things that happened when you were a "kid" and you feel well paid for the time and money spent. This same urge will come on again and try as you will, you cannot resist it and you return as before.

Ofttimes, when we have been away for some time we could fancy that things would be about as we can remember them. But the reality is so different, for where there were many places that were dear to us, as our playgrounds, we find they have vanished and in its place we find some building.

I wonder as I think of it how many can recall an old barn at the head of Ninth street. In there we used to rehearse our amateur theatricals. This was before the Union hall was built which stands on North Main street. Previous to its erection the only hall in that section of Norwich was Carpenters hall and here was held all the old time dances, church festivals and it may interest your readers to know here was the inception of what is today St. Andrews' church that stands at the intersection of 11th street and Central avenue, and this was in succession "Daddy" Ford's old farm and later the baseball ground of the "Young Americas," and finally the church property that you see today. How the world does move?

Time, that old bogey man, is ever moving on and though we look forward to familiar scenes, they are gone, and will never return. And just a word of advice, you all will grow old in time, and maybe move on to other places and mingle with other people, but some time as you sit down and review this panorama of life, there will pass before your eyes some of the scenes and incidents of your younger days. Then you, too, will look forward with an intense longing for the friends of your youth, your pals. These are the blessed memories of your lives that you are bound to recall and remember. And as you bring all these thoughts into a tangible form, you will think, even as I, what wouldn't I give to turn time in its flight and let me be just a boy again, an irresponsible carefree "kid," as you perhaps laid down somewhere on the sunny side of a brook and dreamed of the days to come, but with little thought of the worries that go with mature years. And there we dream and drift along the stream of fancy, like gleams of sunlight, that move on through the mist of years, and finally disappear.

Yours very truly,
C. H. "DAD" SHAW.

CHILD TRAINING

PLAY IS LIFE

Edith L. Reid

"Mollie won't keep her doll buggy off my train track," shouted Dave from the back-yard.

"Dave ran his train over the nice castle I built in the sand pile," defended Mollie.

Mother was baking cookies and trying to wash up a lot of dishes, and the disturbance in the yard was annoying, of course. First she called out, "Stop your noise, and play nicely."

Then Mollie came clear into the kitchen and complained, "Dave stepped on my mud pies," and Dave shouted in anger, "Well, I didn't mean to."

"Stop your fussing about little things like that," said Mother impatiently. But when a few minutes later Dave reported that Mollie had stood on his red bridge and smashed it, mother met the crisis by sending Dave to the basement for an hour and Mollie to the sleeping porch.

"You two ought to be ashamed to quarrel about nothing," was mother's final reproof, as she rescued a pan of cookies from the oven just about one minute too late.

Probably there is no mother of a small son and daughter who has not struggled with the same problem in terms of different playthings or the same ones. But the truth is that these back-yard incidents are of supreme importance in the eyes of the children. They are not something to be swept aside and settled by a wave of the hand. What mother calls quarreling children regard as a settlement of affairs in their world.

If the activities and complications of the playground are not the practicing of life principles, then neither are our relations with the grocer or dressmaker.

Mollie and Dave would have been fortunate if mother had stopped to talk with them about some simple rules of play and some ideals of conduct. They might have remembered the day with greater happiness had they lunched on graham crackers instead of home-made cookies, because mother believed play contacts were important enough to be discussed seriously.

Play is the child's life. There is no dividing line over which he steps from the experiences of play into the field of living. Play is living. Play affairs are world affairs.

Sometimes what seem like quarrels and fights may be only a healthy exercise of moral principles. It may be that mothers would witness less physical combat if they took more time to help even small children settle things with reason and intelligence.

Children do not necessarily have to slap and push and shriek in making their adjustments to life. In truth, it is likely that there has been a serious fault in training if the normal child feels that he must tattle or kick things over or grab in order to hold his own.

Many a parent has never taken time to consider that there is a reason behind every scrap on the playground, and many a child has never been taught that there is a law to govern such incidents and a sane way to react. The sooner all children are taught this at home and in kindergarten the sooner will poise and self-control begin to dominate play affairs in the back-yard.

Eye Operation Painless

By GEORGE A. MOORE, M. D.
Palmer, Massachusetts
(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

A lively sense of the tenderness and the sensitiveness of the eye exists in everyone. The exquisite small-tortures of a cinder in the eye or the smarting of a vagrant soap-bubble have contributed to this state of mind.

Also, it is quite human to speak of operations one my have undergone, and some persons, in recounting experiences upon the table, permit their fancies to roam a bit. To them it may seem an innocent enough diversion to watch the mouth-opening credulity with which their hair-raising tales are received. The absorbed interest of the listener stimluates to a greater effort to entertain, and it is nothing at all to hear of eyes "removed entirely from the sockets" in order to undergo a beneficial scraping before being restored to their proper places, etc. etc. Of course, these tales are untrue, but people accept them, and the pleasant horror they feel is enough to stamp into their memory cells something that may trouble them when the time comes that they must endure an eye operation. Then, they dwell upon the sensitiveness of the eye and recall these tales, and regardless of personal courage, they may feel a disturbing apprehensive fear.

Each day of the year sees thousands of persons facing eye operations. Inasmuch as the worst part of such an operation is a baseless fear it seems worth while to state the facts.

Except in inflammatory cases, the only suffering to be experienced in an operation on the eyes, is the suffering of apprehension, of nervousness, of fear. Eye operations are free of pain. For instance a person having a cataract removed feels no pain. He is conscious of the attention and manipulation of the surgeon, but of pain there is none. Probably a permanent wave is more painfully acquired than removal of a cataract. The same is true of operation for noncongestive glaucoma; also in ordinary cases of operation for trabismus (cross eyes); and in numberless other cases.

If only we can remove fear, we then have a comfortable, co-operative, tractable patient and moreover, one who not merely is likely to do well during the operation but as well afterward.

Such work upon the eye is done under local anesthesia, but in the case of children, very nervous individuals, or when there is likely to be pain, a general anesthetic is used; but one last word, eye operations need not be feared because of pain.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

A Sorely Puzzled Flip

Be very slow in making haste
Lest time and effort you may waste.
—Old Mother Nature.

Bowser the Hound sat on the bank of the Smiling Pool and he was grinning. Coming out from the Laughing Brook was a brown head moving rapidly through the water. A little way back of that was a black and white head following the brown one. That was the head of Flip the Terrier. And Flip was excited. You would have known that just to look at him. He was swimming for all he was worth. Bowser chuckled.

"He thinks that's just a plain, every-day rat," thought Bowser. "He certainly is death on rats at the barn, but he is going to learn something more about rats. There are rats and rats."

The brown head was moving easily through the water. Behind it Flip was making his legs go for all they were worth. He was making hard work of it because he was hurrying so.

"Go it, Flip! Go it!" barked Bowser.

Flip made no reply. He couldn't. He was too busy keeping the water out of his mouth and nose. Beside, he needed all his breath. He was surprised that he wasn't gaining on that rat as he had expected to. He had had no idea that any rat could swim like this one. He did wish the fellow would go ashore.

"If only he would go ashore, I would soon make short work of him," though Flip. "My, but he is a big fellow! On land he would put up a good fight. I think I'm gaining on him. Yes, sir, I think I'm gaining on him."

He was gaining. The distance between them was growing less and less. Bowser's eyes twinkled as he saw this. He knew what Flip didn't know, namely, that that rat wasn't swimming his best. He was letting Flip gain. Flip was getting more and more excited that he tried to bark and as a result swallowed more water than he liked. He was almost to that rat now. In fact, he could see that rat's tail going back and forth in the water very fast just beyond his nose. He did his best to paddle faster. And right then something happened! There was a splash right in front of him. It threw water right in his face. The water got in his eyes. He shook his head. And when he could see again, he was alone. Yes, sir, he was alone!

Flip was a puzzled dog. He swam round and round, but there was no sign of that rat. He was right in the middle of the Smiling Pool. There was no place there for that rat to hide. Flip didn't know what to make of it. Round and round he swam. Finally, he headed for the bank where Bowser the Hound sat. Flip crawled up on the bank and shook himself. Before he could say a word Bowser spoke.

"Did you catch him?" asked Bowser with a twinkle in his eyes.

"No," replied Flip. "But he must have drowned."

"Do you think so?" inquired Bowser.

"Of course!" replied Flip. "He went down and he didn't come up."

"Oh!" said Bowser. "Is that so? Who do you call that over on the other side of the Smiling Pool?"

Flip looked across. There was a brown head moving along through the water close to the other bank. Instantly all of Flip's excitement returned to him. "It's another rat!" he exclaimed. "That's what it is, another rat! Watch me get that fellow!" Into the Smiling Pool Flip plunged once more and started to swim across.

MAKE VEGETABLE FOODS DELICIOUS

Few Things Are More Important Than Balanced Diet in Promoting Health

Cooking experts are using their ingenuity to develop delicious methods of preparing vegetables. A well-known expert furnishes us this recipe for Polish Beets:

Peel 12 small cooked beets and mince fine with a fork. Put in a saucepan and sprinkle with a tablespoon of sugar. Add a tablespoon of vinegar, 1 tablespoon of salt and pepper and heat. Melt 2 tablespoons of butter and blend with it 1 tablespoon of flour. Stir this into the mixture. Add ½ cup sour cream and heat.

Whatever recipe you are using and whatever vegetable you are cooking, try adding a dash of sugar for a new, enjoyable flavor. It is not the purpose of the sugar to make the vegetables taste sweet. Sugar brings out the delicate flavors of the foods and blends these with the seasonings used. Sugar is the master blender and the supreme condiment. It is the right hand of successful cookery.

Serve a varied, balanced diet. Serve at least two cooked vegetables daily. Serve at least two fruits daily. See that each member of your family drinks milk and eats milk desserts. Make meats appetizing by adding a dash of sugar while the meats are cooking. Use a dash of sugar to improve gravy, sauces and soups. Learn the art of serving colorful and satisfying desserts. A bit of sweet makes the meal complete.—The Sugar Institute.

TAXPAYERS' MEETING STRONG AGAINST NEW WEST SIDE FIRE STATION

By rising vote that was unanimous, the Norwich Taxpayers' association on Monday evening recorded its opposition to the sale of the West Side fire station and the erection of another station in a different location, which is a proposition which is to be voted upon at a special city meeting on Wednesday of this week.

The vote was passed at a meeting of the association which was held in Odd Fellows' hall with an attendance of about 100 and was the first meeting which the association has held since spring. The opposition to the proposal to junk the West Side station was on the general ground that the present station is adequate and that too much money is being spent on the fire department without a reduction in fire rates resulting.

D. T. Shea, president of the association opened the meeting with an outline of what might generally be considered and after the minutes of Secretary James F. Fleming had been accepted, it was voted to have the nominating committee report at the next meeting the names of two directors who might be considered representative of the police and the public works departments of the city.

It was stated that the membership is now 344 and President Shea urged that each one do his best to increase the membership.

It was voted to have the nominating committee name a committee of three on by-laws and the matter of compensation to the janitor of the Odd Fellows' building in consideration of the use of the room was referred to the directors of the association.

West Side Fire Station

Coming to the discussion on the West Side fire station, which is on West Main street, H. M. Lerou, a former mayor and a former resident of the West Side section said he was opposed to the proposed change. He said that those advocating the change wanted to sell the West Main street station and build another one elsewhere. He felt the present station is adequate and the city is spending enough on the fire department. When he was mayor, he said, we spent $40,000 for apparatus for the fire department on the representation that a reduction in rates was to come, but the reduction didn't come. He said he saw no reason for the proposed change and that the city had built other stations that were not needed. It is all right if you have the money, said Mr. Lerou, but if they don't see fit to reduce rates why do we keep on spending money? We've spent enough until we get a change of rates.

Herbert Willey said he understood the neighbors all said the present station is just where it is needed and where the fire hazard is greatest in that district. He declared it would be ridiculous to move it out near Pierson's barn, there was hardly ever a fire near there.

James P. Sheridan presented a motion to dispose of the present station and build another one in another location to be decided later.

Albert Boardman remarked that there were a lot of people out of work and if we should build a $50,000 station it might be a good thing. If we built it out far enough on the West Side perhaps the city would grow out to it. Perhaps we could put baths in it. I don't know when the firemen have had a bath. We haven't had a good fire lately. It seems as if something ought to be done about it.

Myer Blumenthal spoke at some length, saying that many tenements were empty and stores were idle yet some people want to spend money. The present location is proper, he said, and we have the Thamesville company that can get there in a few minutes.

Mr. Blumenthal then digressed from the fire station subject to say that he would like to know if the assessors can put in a piece of property at three or four times the taxpayers' figure. Have they full authority to do as they see fit?

In response to an inquiry from Edward Kelly of Taftville the answer was made that the proposition about the West Side station arose in a petition which was presented to the mayor to call a city meeting. The petition was headed by a West Side man and was backed by the West End Community association.

Mr. Boardman asked if the strong advocate for this wasn't our former fire chief who had been working this up for years.

Mr. Sheridan, who had made the motion, said he wasn't in favor of it, but had brought it forward to get a rise out of the meeting, but the results had been small so far. The only thing about the West Side station that is decayed, said Mr. Sheridan, is the bell tower, and we don't need that anyway. If they take the tower off, dispense with the bell alarm and spend a few thousand dollars on paint and other repairs the station will be all right. We swallowed the bait at the Falls once, said Mr. Sheridan, and then we had to build another building. Now it is the same thing. If a fire station is needed on the West Side I'll vote for it as soon as any one, but they've got to show me.

On a motion made by Mr. Lerou, after Mr. Sheridan had withdrawn his motion, the meeting went unanimously that the association go on record as disapproving the sale of the present station and the building of a new one.

Mr. Willey reminded those present that this doesn't settle the matter, but they should be on hand at the city meeting to carry out their vote.

The Tax Question.

The meeting next took up the question of taxation and the revaluation done in property on the grand list.

Mr. Sheridan said he thought this ought to be a subject for a future meeting when there would be more information on the subject. He thought the association had no right to try to influence the assessors' office. That is almost a sacred precinct, according to law.

John Nolan of Taftville declared that we spent $48,000 to help the assessors and they did nothing. If we have a board of relief who do nothing, he said, I think we ought to get some one who does something.

In answer to Mr. Blumenthal's question, Mr. Boardman said the assessors don't have to accept the owner's valuation. You can appeal to the board of relief. There is a great deal of property unfairly assessed yet, but not nearly so much as before. If the board of relief doesn't give relief you can resort to the courts.

Edward Kirby, a member of the board of relief, was invited to speak and he responded by saying that he believed conditions were better than they have been and they would be better in the future. He was going to pass the buck, he said, to the Manufacturers Appraisal company. They were the ones that cast the die. There were from 1,300 to 1,400 appeals and one of the members of the board of relief was sick. Only two of the members of the board were working and "we couldn't agree most of the time, all of the time, and that settled it." It will probably take a few years to straighten it out, said Mr. Kirby. Land values are too high on Main street. Perhaps you'll have a new board of relief.

President Shea said he thought the work done by the appraisal company was no credit to the town of Norwich which would be facing 750 law suits if people had the money. There are more and worse inequalities than ever. Mr. Shea spoke of one piece of property worth $12,000 which is in the list for $5,000, of another for which the owner refused $10,000 which is in the list for $5,000, and of a third on which the owner makes a standing offer of $25,000 to any real estate agent who can dispose of it for the price which the Manufacturers Appraisal company put on it.

Tax Collector Harold T. Robinson informed the meeting that he had been told there was a clause in the town's contract with the appraisal company requiring it to return in two years to make a review of the work.

Mr. Kirby spoke briefly again and said that the fact was that the board of relief wasn't supposed to do anything and they didn't do anything.

Mr. Boardman criticized the assessors, saying that they didn't do anything and didn't try to do anything and that it had been a foolish thing to raise their pay. The town hired the appraisal company to make the valuations and the assessors took their word for it.

Mr. Sheridan told the meeting that the town started its own troubles and they had accumulated and we are now trying to load them onto the assessors and the board of relief. There had been no revaluation for 60 years. At one time the assessors' office was looked upon as a home for old men because no one expected them to do anything. Twenty years ago the pay was $300 and nobody expected there would be any work on that job. Mr. Sheridan said he favored hiring the Manufacturers' Appraisal company. The job was too big for the assessors. Now we've got a better job than we could have had in any other way. If you had given the job to the assessors you would have needed three traffic cops at the assessors' office to keep you from getting in and strangling the members of the board. Give it a little time and see how it works out. Get a list of those who complain and then we will know what we are talking about. Then go to the assessors some time before October.

Mr. Sheridan declared that he had been satisfied with his old assessment and he was satisfied with his present one.

In reply to a question from Mr. Shea as to whether the assessors would hear a committee, Fred G. Prothero, one of the assessors, who was present, said they would hear only individual petitions. He said he wished Mr. Boardman would follow them around for a day to see if they did anything and also any one who thought the office was an old men's home. We believe this was a good job, said Mr. Prothero, and we are going to stand back of it.

Mr. Kelly told the meeting that it was his ten ear old son who answered the questions when the appraisal company's men came around to his house and Mr. Prothero said that this way of securing information was the fault of local people who were hired by the appraisal company to the canvassing.

Ex-Mayor Lerou spoke again, saying this entire matter rests with the board of relief, who meet for only 30 days. They can't do their work in that time. They ought to meet for six months. Mr. Lerou declared that all he was ever asked about his building was how many toilets were in it, and he got a reduction in his assessment when he threatened to take the matter to court.

Mr. Boardman disagreed with Mr. Lerou about the board of relief serving for six months and said this was not needed ordinarily. Mr. Prothero discussed several points about the work of the assessors and said they were finding there were many changes to be made and W. E. Shanley suggested that a photostatic copy of the cards might be sent to each property owner.

On motion of Mr. Kelly it was voted to name from the floor a committee of three to advise with property owners complaining of their assessments and tell them whether they had good cause for complaint. The committee consists of John Nolan, Daniel T. Shea and Herbert Willey.

Shortly after 10 o'clock adjournment was taken to meet again at the call of the chair.

PUBLIC HEALTH NURSES ADDRESS CONTACT CLUB

Miss Kate M. McKenzie, superintendent of the United Workers public nursing department, and Miss May M. Maher, assistant superintendent, were the speakers Monday before the Contact club when it resumed its luncheon meetings at the Wauregan hotel after the summer recess.

President E. O. Rodier presided, although his arm was in a sling because of injury in an automobile accident. Joseph S. Adams was song leader and Frederick Geer was at the piano.

President Rodier spoke of the attendance prize of a gold fountain pen and pencil offered by John P. Lyston for the month of September and of the prize of a Dobbs hat offered by Francis T. Diggins of Porteous & Mitchell company to the one bringing in the most new members in the month. James Crawford was welcomed as a new member.

Miss McKenzie described the beginning of the United Workers 53 years ago and the growth of one important branch of its work, the public health nursing department, which now has seven nurses, each one taking care of a district, particularly as to the care of health of children and the giving of hygienic advice to those in need of it.

The nurses also take care of maternity cases and Miss McKenzie expressed her delight of the modern tendency of mothers to avail themselves of hospital care during maternity.

Miss McKenzie stated that although the United Workers take care of a great number of various cases they do not receive any monetary help from the city authorities for their work. The organization also conducts the Rock Nook Home clinic in cooperation with the Rock Nook Home. One of the important branches of the work of the United Workers is a clinic for chest examination, which is conducted in collaboration with tuberculosis hospitals with the assistance of Dr. O'Brien. There is also a clinic for mental hygiene which is one of the most important clinics in the city. This is held at the Backus hospital with the assistance of the Backus hospital. A clinic of social hygiene is also conducted under the care of the United Workers towards which the city of Norwich made a contribution for its maintenance. Miss McKenzie was very emphatic in stressing the need of enlarging this clinic which is of great importance for the health of the unfortunates who are afflicted with these diseases. In closing Miss McKenzie implored the members of the Contact club that when the time of the Christmas seals come around they should be liberal in purchasing these seals as this is the only source of revenue which goes toward helping tuberculosis children in our city.

Miss May M. Maher, assistant superintendent of public nurses of the United Workers, among her remarks spoke as follows:

"A most interesting and worth while piece of work is that done on the crippled children of Norwich. We have no difficulty in finding them. The trouble is usually evident. The deformities in infants quickly find their way to Number 9 Washington street for advise of our clinic physician. The runabout or school child is met on the street if not reported through some other sources and there are nurses always on the alert for them. The poor posture in the runabout is helped by exercises in the form of games which are now recommended by the doctor—walking like a duck or crab or an elephant—will eventually give us results. Bow legs can be wonderfully improved with sunshine and proper diet when taken early. For serious abnormalities we are fortunate in procuring the services of specialists. Dr. O'Brien has kindly seen numberless cases and given much of his service free. He has brought four of our children's feet around to normal within the past year through his expert manipulation and plaster cast. These feet were deformed at birth, three of them club feet, and these children would have been badly handicapped in latter years without treatment. We nurses follow up these cases over a long period of time for experiences. We also have access to Dr. Swett's clinic at the Newington home for crippled children. Several Norwich children have been patients there, receiving follow up treatment in regard to some treatment exercises and routine hygienic treatment.

"We have several cases of tuberculosis, osteomyolitis and poliomyolitis, better known as infantile paralysis. These latter cases are all more or less similar in follow up work. Most of them here receive expert treatment with a large degree of improvement. We are confronted with the problem of transportation to and from schools for these children—vocational training and suitable recreation. There are also demands for money toward supplying braces, special shoes, lifts on shoes, crutches, wheelchairs, etc. The Rotary, Tuberculosis Seals, the local order of Elks and other private sources have generously contributed toward these items. A great deal more could be done if the public would be aware of the wonderful work performed by the United Workers and would support it with funds."

Louis Crandall offered to furnish a commercial education free of charge to one of the crippled boys of Norwich and to provide for his transportation to and from school.

A vote of thanks was given to the ladies for their very interesting talks and the meet adjourned.

WOMEN SHOULD LEARN USES OF MAGNESIA

To women who suffer from nauses, or so-called "morning sickness," this simple measure is proving a blessing. Most nurses know it and it is advised by leading specialists.

Prepapre a small quantity of finely cracked ice—about a wineglassful. Pour over it a teaspoonful of Phillips Milk of Magnesia. Sip slowly until the mixture is gone or you are entirely relieved. It is seldom necessary to repeat the dose to end sick stomach or any inclination to vomit.

Its anti-acid properties enable Phillips Milk of Magnesia to give immediate relief in heartburn, sour stomach, gas. Its mild, but effective laxative action assures regular bowel movement. Used as a mouthwash it helps prevent acid erosion and tooth decay during expectancy.

With every bottle of Phillips Milk of Magnesia, come full directions for its many uses. All drug stores have the 25c and 50c sizes. Demand the genuine, endorsed by doctors for over 50 years.

"Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of the Chas. H. Phillips Chemical Co. and its predecessor, Chas. H. Phillips, since 1875.

ACADEMY FACES LACK OF MATERIAL FOR THE BACKFIELD THIS SEASON

Give Coach Courtland C. Whitney about four experienced newcomers, two backs and two linemen, and the Academy will have a mighty good chance for the mythical state championship in football this fall. The local mentor enters the 1929 campaign this week fairly well fortified on the forward wall but with only one letterman to carry the ball. There are four on the squad scheduled to report tomorrow, that wear their football "N's", namely Captain Chet Berghinzo, end, Gordon Cruickshank, center, Hertz, a tackle and Sherry, diminutive but elusive halfback.

From reports that one hears however, there will be a large turnout of enthusiastic boys eager to gain one of the vacant berths. That there may be a Marks or a LaCroix in the back is the earnest plea of "Whit", former all-around athlete at the school, who will be entering his fourth year as coach of the Wildcat pigskin chasers. Among those mentioned as being candidates for football and who have made names in other sports are Bud Fontaine, baseball catcher, who will strive for a backfield position, Flather, speed merchant, for end, Fat Stevens, basketball player for a guard or tackle berth and certain others.

Although the first call is slated for tomorrow after the first session of the school year, little in a football way is expected to be accomplished before the first of next week. There is a little over two weeks for Whitney to get his squad into shape. The first game, a conference affair, brings on Chapman Tech, which already has about two weeks practice under its belt but hasn't proved awfully hard for the Academy as a rule in recent years.

The complete schedule follows:

Saturday, Sept. 28—Chapman Tech at Norwich.

Saturday, Oct. 5—Bulkeley (Hartford) at Norwich.

Saturday, Oct. 12—Warren Harding (Bridgeport) at Norwich.

Saturday, Oct. 19—New Britain at Norwich.

Friday, Oct. 25—Westerly at Norwich.

Saturday, Nov. 2—Windham at Norwich.

Saturday, Nov. 9—West Hartford at Norwich.

Saturday, Nov. 16—Stonington at Stonington.

Saturday, Nov. 23—Bulkeley (N. L.) at New London.

ARMY LACKS LINE MATERIAL FOR GRID TEAMS

(By Brian Bell, Associated Press Sports Writer)

WEST POINT, N. Y., Sept. 9—(AP)—Head Coach Biff Jones grunted when asked if the 1929 Army football team will be as good as that of 1928. There is no indication whether the Biffian grunt was affirmative or negative. It may have suggested uncertainty.

Ed Saurez, from down Mobile way, and Paul Miller, late of the Pennsylvania national guard, are attempting to convince the coach that they can fill a yawning chasm in the middle of the Army line. Saurez, only 20 years old but weighing 190 pounds, is a guard and Miller, another 190 pounder, is a center. Army needs guards and centers.

There are plenty of experienced backs, led by Captain Keener Cagle, a running passing player with the manners of an eel and early training as a cortortionist. The flanks are well protected with half a dozen good ends and adequate tackles are in prospects. The question marks are places squarely in the middle of the line.

Saurez and Miller are great prospects and if they retain their health should fit into any Army scheme. Charley Humber probably will get a guard position. George Washington Perry is a tackle good enough to play on any team and Bill Parkham, Dan Spengler, Conughlin and MacLean are standing by ready to answer a summons.

Two great ends, Ed Messinger and Carl Carlmark are returned from last year's team and there is no lack of material to give them a lift.

Herts Murrell will again be a fullback and bear the principal burden of kicking. Herbert Gibner seems to have the inside track for the quarterback position with Jack O'Keefe occupying the other backfield position. Backs who undoubtedly will see action are Hutchinson, Timberlake, Piper, Golden and others who will identify themselves more prominently later on.

Army has a long season and will need plenty of reinforcements. From September 28, when Boston university starts the ball rolling at the Point until December 28, when the final whistle sounds for the Stanford game at Palto Alto, Calif., the Cadets will make week end appearances against Harvard, Yale, Illinois and Notre Dame.

CUBS RALLY IN 9TH TO NOSE OUT THE BRAVES

CHICAGO, Sept. 9—(AP)—The Cubs moved closer to the National league pennant today by staging a ninth inning rally to beat out the Boston Braves, 4 to 3, in the final game of the series. They remained 13 games ahead of Pittsburgh and need but eight more victories to clinch the flag.

The game, halted twice by showers was a stern chase for Chicago. Hack Wilson gave them a tie at 2-2 in the seventh inning with his 37th home run of the year. The blow gave him a tie with Chuck Klein for the league lead. Root walked in a run for the Braves in the ninth but Stephenson again tied the count with a homer. A single by Tolson and Taylor's double brought in the winning run.

Root gave the Braves 11 hits in gaining his 16th victory of the season while Percy Jones held the Cubs to eight. The score:

GIANTS HANG TWO LOSSES ON TO THE LOWLY REDS

CINCINNATI, Sept. 9—(AP)—The New York Giants battered out a pair of victories over the Reds today winning the first game, 6 to 3, and the five inning second, 10 to 4.

Fred Lindstrom, New York third baseman, sprained a leg in the first game when he slipped in the mud trying to field Swanson's sacrifice bunt. The injury forced him out of the game.

Carl Hubbell and Fred Fitzsimmons, pitched effectively for the Giants in the two games, the former giving only ten hits in the opener. Fitzsimmons scored his sixth victory of the year over the Reds in the second contest. Luque and Ash worked for the Reds in one game and Rixey finished the second game after Kolp had been driven from the mound in the second inning. Terry got three hits, including a homer with two on base, to bring his total for the year to 202 blows. The score:

HOUSE OF DAVID AT MARTIN FIELD ON SUNDAY

Through the efforts of the J. B. Martin baseball manager fans on next Sunday will be treated to the most novel baseball exhibition in the history of the city. On that day the original House of David baseball club of Benton Harbor, Michigan, on a tour of the country will appear here. Besides making up one of the best diamond aggregations on the road as a traveling team, the House of David athletes are an attraction in their personal appearance, their long beards being most unusual on the ball field, and worn after the fashion of their cult. Wherever the diamond aggregation composed of disciples of this religion appear, they draw record breaking crowds, and their exhibitions, besides being nearly flawless from a technical standpoint, are of interest because of their unusual appearance.

I saw the other day where a certain statistician finds that married men live longer than single men and that there are fewer married men in insane asylums than single men.

When I read that I says to myself that us women must keep pretty good care of our men folks at that. But about there being less married men in the booby-hatch I think that there's a lotta these benedicts oughta be there.

As for married men living longer it may be that it only seems longer—to the man, I mean. I'll admit that there ain't a married woman in the world who ain't said to her hubby "Now John, be sure and wear your rubbers, you know how easy you catch cold."

It's a question whether she's thinking so much about John's catching cold and passing out as about what a hell of a time she has with John when he's sick. Then again what chance has a married man of doing things that might lead to an early grave.

He can't own a snappy roadster or go for airplane rides when there's shoes to buy for a half a dozen kids. He can't spend eight bucks for a quart of pre-war stuff when he knows he'll be ducking crockery if he comes home with his sea-legs on.

He can't sit around a poker table until the wee small hours 'cause his buck-a-week allowance don't buy many of them little blue and white disks. And besides if he ain't home who's going to walk the floor with the baby.

Of course married men live the longest. Why shouldn't they? There's some justice in this world and they oughta have a long time to repent in. Anyhow the good die young.

As to the insane asylum business I ain't so sure. It's probably because us women cover up the foolishness of our husbands that they ain't shut up. But what surprises me is that there ain't more married women in them institutions seeing how much we have to put up with.

Well, anyway, I bet that the statistician's findings ain't causing any great rush at the marriage license bureaus and the clergymen ain't overworked marrying young men who want to live longer.

And I'll bet there's a bunch of married men who'd be willing to knock off about ten years of their lives just to be single once more.

That fellow who dug up all those facts is just wasting his time 'cause it ain't going to make a bit of difference one way or the other. Can you imagine a young feller proposing to his girl and saying "Now Mary, I want you to marry me because I'll live longer if you do".

Whatda you think she'd say? Yes, you're right.

PIRATES RALLY IN 7TH TO BEAT OUT ROBINS

PITSBURGH, Sept. 9—(AP)—Led by a recruit outfielder, James Mosolf, the Pirates came from behind in the seventh inning today to score four runs and beat out the Brooklyn Robins by a 9 to 7 score.

Going into the seventh, the Pirates trailed by one run. A hit, a sacrifice and a walk set the stage and Mosolf, recently arrived from Wichita, appeared as a pinch batsman. He drove in the tying run with a single and later scored to add to the lead. A wild pitch by McWeeny gave the Pirates two runs in that inning. Ervin Brame worked the whole game for Pittsburgh though hit hard while Brooklyn called on four pitchers. The score:

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9—(AP)—Chicago drove Sam Jones to cover in the seventh inning of today's game with Washington with a three run barrage and won 6 to 4.

HELEN HICKS HAS FOUR-STROKE LEAD OVER FIELD IN CHICAGO GOLF

CHICAGO, Sept. 9—(AP)—Helen Hicks, sturdy 18-year-old shotmaker from Inwood, Long Island, breezed over the heavily trapped Flossmoore Country club course today with par-shattering golf to gain a four stroke lead at the quarter mark of the derby, a 72 hole medal play event sponsored by the Western Women's Golf association and open to the world.

Playing the same type of golf that made her the sensation of last winter's tournaments in the south, Miss Hicks carded a 38, three under par, going out today and then came home with a 40, one over par, for a 78 total. Her closest rival was Mrs. Austin Pardue of Hibbing, Minn., who had rounds of 40-42-82.

Perfect iron play was responsible for Miss Hicks' score. While some of her drives and fairway wooden shots sailed the pellet into the rough, she consistently retrieved by laying pretty irons within easy putting distance of the green.

A pair of veteran Chicagoans, Mrs. Lee Mida and Mrs. Melvin Jones, tied for third place at the end of the first 18 hole test with 83s. Mrs. Mida is the so-called defending champion of the derby although it has been extended from 54 to 72 holes this year in an attempt to develop a national medal play classic for women golfers.

One stroke behind them was Maureen Orcutt, present metropolitan champion and a big favorite from White Beeches, N. Y. Miss Orcutt couldn't get her putter to work today and three-putted six greens, taking 41 going out and a 43 coming home.

Other leaders at the end of the first included Mrs. Gregg Lifur of Los Angeles, runner-up in the 1929 women's western championship, 42-43—85; Mrs. Leo Federman, Fresh Meadows, N. Y., 43-43—86, and Virginia Van Wie, Chicago, 47-40—87.

Three additional 18 hole rounds will be played during the next three days. A brisk wind swept the course today.

RED SOX BEAT BROWNS IN GAME MARRED BY RAIN

BOSTON, Sept. 9—(AP)—After the Red Sox had defeated St. Louis, 6 to 2 in the first game of a double-header today, rain caused the postponement of the second contest.

Although the rain fell throughout the game, the Red Sox gave an excellent exhibition in the field and the fielding of Todt at first base and Scarritt's catch of Kress' foul in the ninth were outstanding defensive features. Despite the slippery condition of the ball, each pitcher gave only one base on balls.

Rothrock hit a long drive into the right field bleachers for a home run in the sixth. The score:

MERCUR ADVANCES TO THIRD ROUND IN NATIONALS

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Sept. 9—(AP)—While Big Bill Tilden casually looked on from a seat in the officials' stand, two of his leading rivals for the national tennis singles crown were extended to the limit in second round matches this afternoon by the country's fourteenth and fifteenth ranking players.

Having drawn a bye in the first round and reached the third with an easy victory on Saturday, Big Bill was among the 10,000 spectators who saw Fritz Mercur finally nose out Harris Cogeshall, of Des Moines, Iowa, No. 14 in the national rating list, in five hard sets, 7-5, 7-5, 2-6, 5-7, 7-5, and then watched J. Gilbert Hall of South Orange, N. J., ranked No. 15, give George Lott stroke for stroke and ace for ace.

Lott, the blonde young Chicago internationalist who is looked upon as the man Tilden will have to beat to win this title for the seventh time, eventually captured the first set from Hall, but only by the close and attenuated scores of 10-8. The two were even at one-all in the second set when a drenching rain dispersed the gallery and terminated play.

The Lott-Hall match is to be resumed tomorrow at 11 a. m. while the only other unfinished match, in which Edward Feibleman was leading a fellow New Yorker, Dr. George King, at 6-3, 6-4, 7-6, 7-5, is scheduled for 12:30 p. m.

WALKER FINED FOR PART IN BIG WHOOPEE PARTY

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 9—(AP)—Mickey Walker, middleweight boxing champion, after spending several hours in the Hollywood jail after his arrest on charges of being intoxicated and possessing liquor, pleaded guilty to the first charge in municipal court today and paid a fine of $20. He was released after his manager, Jack Kearns, deposited $250 bail pending a hearing on the second charge.

Walker and three companions were arrested before daylight when complaints of the occupants of a Whitney avenue apartment house brought the police to quell an asserted drunken melee. The police reported they found Walker fighting with his three companions in the apartment of Miss Dorothy Davis, in which furniture, doors and windows were found broken.

The trio arrested with Walker were Gordon H. Sweeney, film director; Arthur Housman, film actor, and Ray Hallor, also an actor. Charges similar to those against Walker were brought against the trio. Police allowed Miss Davis to remain in her apartment because of an injured foot, the result of the asserted melee.

POETRY FOR THE WIDE AWAKES

Butterfly Errant.

Beautiful thing,
Over the chilly dark waters so lightly a-wing!
Here in my chair,
At the bow of "the last boat this year," unbelieving I stare
At the jewel-bright fleck
Against the cold blue of the high-lifted sky, crane my neck
As you flutter away,
Far, far from the brightblossomed gardens that love you, astray!

With little heart dwelling.
Did you hark to the tale that the chattering swallows were telling
Of bright summer skies
Where never, through all the bright year, would a winter surprise
Your dallying flight
From blossom to blossom of pure ecstatic delight?

And you rose up to follow,
With swift-thrilling, luminous hope, the far flight of the swallow,
Whose tense onward sweep
Left you lone and unfriended, above the great turbulent deep!

I send up a prayer,
Oh, dauntless small voyager, that kindly winds swiftly may bear
You safe to the land,
Where the gorseous Fall gardens await you, on every hand!

And yet—if the gleam
Of your splendor goes down into night, you have been a bright dream!

—Minnie Leona Upton.

"Where Daffodils Are Found."

There, when the first green shoots of tender corn
Show on the plough; when the first drift of white
Stars the black branches of the spiky thorn,
And afternoons are warm and evenings light,
The shivering daffodils do take delight,
Shaking beside the brook, and grass comes green,
And blue dog-violets come and glistening celandine.
—John Masefield, in "Daffodil Fields."

The Glow-Worm.

Nor crush a worm, whose useful light
Might serve, however small,
To show a stumbling-stone by night,
And save man from a fall.
—William Sowper

UNCLE JED'S TALK TO THE WIDE-AWAKES.

Do dogs understand their human friends and enemies? Yes, they do, at least in part. Every owner and lover of a dog knows that the animal knows when he is ill treated and when he is well treated. The dog certainly knows his enemies and his friends.

One of the curious things about the dog's methods of expression and communication is that while they are quite different from those of men, we can, in part at least, understand them, and he can understand ours. His facial expressions are limited, though he manages to look happy or dejected or fierce. He cannot laugh or weep. He has no articulate language. And yet when he uses his voice or paws or tail to express himself we are seldom in any doubt as to his meaning. He can communicate his desires most subtly and yet unmistakably. Most of these methods of communication have probably been acquired during the ages of the dog's close association with man, though some of them may have been original dog traits which man has come to understand through that same period of association. The dog has taught man some things, too.

Many instances might be cited of one dog going to fetch another for a definite purpose.

In expressing joy, warning, pleading, anger, etc., the dog often varies the tones of his voice. The "Let me in" bark is easily distinguishable from the "Keep away" bark. Other animals do this to some extent, but it seems that the dog talks more like a human being than any other animal does. Or do we merely imagine this? Perhaps imitation enters in.

That dog understand us better than we understand them is fairly obvious though this may not be flattering to human intelligence. We speak to them in human language and they understand human commands with their canine minds. This, when you stop to think of it, is rather remarkable. More than that, they seem to catch some comprehension of our mood and intent from the tones of our voice, or even from facial expression or bodily attitude.

LETTERS FROM THE WIDE-AWAKES.

How I Spent My Vacation.

Dear Uncle Jed: When school days were over I put pencils, books, and papers aside and thought of how to spend my vacation enjoyably.

First of all we gathered up the hay, oats, and barley and stored it in the barn for the cattle in winter. When this was done I didn't have any particular work to do but housework. Seeing this only lasted about one hour each day I decided to go huckleberry picking. When I arrived in the woods I picked two quarts of berries and started to walk homeward.

A few weeks later when the weather was very hot I thought of going swimming. Early the next morning I packed my bathing suit and lunch; then started off with a few friends.

When arriving there we all were so warm that we slipped our suits on quickly and jumped in the cool water. Later more and more folks came and we all had a splendid time. From then on I spent the rest of my vacation swimming.

Foliage On the Trees.

Dear Uncle Jed: I live on a hill and I can look all around and see many kinds of trees. I notice during this month how green the leaves on the trees are. In the morning the leaves look dark green. When the sun is real bright they look light green. Soon the leaves will get ripe and turn all them which will make them turn yellow and drop off the trees. But the cedars and junipers keep their green foliage the year around. I can look down into the valley and see the small bushes and the leaves on them are very dark green and on the shumac I can see red clusters of berries showing themselves among the leaves.

My Vacation.

Dear Uncle Jed: I am writing to tell about my vacation. I enjoyed it very much. I went fishing, picking berries, and worked in the garden. I wish I could start school Tuesday with the other children but I have a broken arm, and the doctor said I can't go to school. RALMOND BUSHEY, Age 11.

A Dream Flight.

Dear Uncle Jed: This is the first time that I have written to the Wide-Awake circle. I hope you will find my story interesting. My imaginary story begins when I was flying across the Pacific ocean on the Graf Zeppelin.

We started from Tokyo, Japan, and were given a great cheer when the dirixible soared into the air. From that moment on we were going to make the longest non-stop flight of about 5,800 miles. We saw many interesting things such as flying over the uninhabited wastes of Siberia and then crossing the Pacific ocean. It was a dangerous flight because on our way to America we had to pass through terrific storms and any moment I thought the Zeppelin would break in half, but through Dr. Eckener's skilful way of handling the Zeppelin we managed to get by the storm and come to the coast of America. In a few days we arrived at San Francisco and circled the city for about ten minutes and then headed for Los Angeles, for our third lap of our flight. There the airship was put in the hangar, and we were greeted by thousands of people. The next day we set out for Lakehurst. Just as we were on the fourth lap of our flight I awoke and found myself on the other side of my bed and kept saying it was only a dream.

At Marlboro Lake.

Dear Uncle Jed: Sunday we had company from New York, and as it was very hot we decided we'd go to Marlboro lake swimming. There were four others besides myself. Before we left, my mother said to be back in time for dinner, as we said we didn't think we'd go to Marlboro.

When we got to the lake we went swimming. The water was very warm, and before we knew it, it was time to get back home. We got out, took pictures, fooled around for a while, and got dressed. By the time we got ready to go home it was 6:30 o'clock, and we were to be home for dinner at 6 o'clock. We hustled home, and found that they had eaten and the dishes all washed. We were all as hungry as bears, and so set to work to prepare something to eat.

Part of our company was going home late that night or early Monday morning, so my aunt and uncle decided to accompany them to New Haven. My cousin and I wanted to go. Of course we wouldn't miss anything, so 3 o'clock Monday morning we got up to go to New Haven. GLADYS GRAUL.

A Fishing Trip.

Dear Uncle Jed: This is the first time I have written to the Wide-Awake circle. I am going to tell you about a time I went fishing. This summer my cousin has been spending a few weeks with me. While he was here he wanted to go fishing, so my brother and I took him fishing. We fished for three hours. My cousin caught eight fish and my brother cauzht six and I caught two small pumpkin seed.

The Cow.

Dear Uncle Jed: It has been a very long time since I have written to you and the Wide-Awakes. But I have not forgotten them, as I read their letters every week. Now I am going to tell you how the cow is a benefit to people. Long before the white people came the Indians never thought of the cow. They provided their clothing from the skins of wild animals. Today I do not think the white people would be very healthy if it wasn't for the cow. The cow supplies the people with milk and cream, from which they can make butter and cheese. Her hide is tanned and used for leather, to make clothing for the people. The people on the large farms would not prosper so well if it were not for the cow.

MARGARET LUCILLE BITGOOD.

Raising Bantams

Dear Uncle Jed: I thought I would write to you and the Wideawakes and tell you about my luck in raising banties.

One day as I was gathering eggs, I saw my banty coming out from under the bushes clucking, but I did not pay any attention to her warning. When she came for her meals each day she still uttered the same warning as before. So I made up my mind she must be setting. I followed her to her destination through which she led the way.

But to my great surprise lo and behold! I found sixteen little banty eggs. I did not harm them until two weeks later. Then I went to her nest and found four little thoroughbred banty chickies. I placed them in a small coop with their mother and was watching them grow, patiently.

When one day I let them out, and at night when I put them up, I found one was not to be found. He was missing for a c[illegible] I was playing in a tub of water when I discovered my lost banty dead.

I now have only three middle-size banties which are gray, white and black.

I hope Uncle Jed and the Wide-awakes will come and see my banties.

PATRICIA McGRATH.

Two Baby Rabbits

Dear Uncle Jed: This is the second time I have written to you. The last time I wrote about Snowball, my rabbit. This time I am going to tell you about him, his wife and children.

About four months after Snowball ran away—about which I told you in my last letter—he and his wife got two baby rabbits. We named them Cottontail and Pinkie.

One was a boy and one a girl.

My sisters and brothers and my mother and father and myself were all glad and we were sure the rabbits were too.

JOHN MORIARTY, Age 9.

My Midnight Scare

Dear Uncle Jed: This is the second or third time I have written to you. This time I am going to tell you about my midnight scare. One night a little after midnight I was awakened, by what, I did not know until afterward.

The sound came from the direction of the window. I was afraid at first, but as the noise continued, I got up and went toward the window.

When I got there, what do you think I saw there on the window sill. I saw my cat, Spottie. She was clawing the woodwork around the window. I felt quite foolish as I went back to bed, foolish for having been afraid.

ELIZABETH MORIARTY.
Norwich.

Thought Cat Was Lost

Dear Uncle Jed: It was a cold night in February. The snow was falling fast. A lonely old lady occupied a cabin which was five miles from the nearest habitation. The cabin consisted of one large room downstairs and an attic upstairs. As usual, she saw to it that every window and door was locked before she retired for the night. She had always been accustomed to sleeping near the fireplace; but this night she set her cot up near the door that led to the attic. Blowing out the half burnt candle she got into bed and had only been asleep a half hour when suddenly she was awakened by a noise in the attic. Getting up she lit the candle and started to see who it was. (For she was a brave old lady.) She got no further than opening the attic door, for there were two eyes staring at her. She held the candle in front of her to see who it was. There stood Tobsy the cat whom she had believed was lost.

MYSTIC

TWO COWS OF A HERD OF 20 KILLED BY LIGHTNING

During the thunder storm Saturday night, Ernest Brown of Old Mystic lost two of his cows. The 20 head were in an open lot with no trees anywhere around, and these two cows evidently standing close together were struck. They were to all appearances, instantly killed, as one of the cows had fallen in such a way that one of her horns was driven into the ground. It has always been understood that the safest place for livestock was in an open field, but this was one of the times that that sign did not work out. The cows were partially covered by insurance.

Mrs. Nicholas Shepler of Greenport, L. I., is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Ingram of Burnet's Corners.

It is expected that a large number will attend from both the Union Baptist church here and the First Groton Baptist church in Old Mystic. The church letters and statistics were made ready and acted upon Sunday at the two churches.

This was the first time that Mr. Park had been back to Old Mystic since leaving there 60 years ago. Mrs. Park, who is engaged in missionary work, in Oklahoma, gave several interesting talks at the Old Mystic Methodist church and addressed a class at the Sunday school of the Baptist church.

POST OFFICE SEASON AN UNUSUALLY BUSY ONE

This has been the busiest season at the post office in a number of years. Postmaster C. M. Chester has been assisted in his work by Mrs. Gladys Doyle and Miss Ada Davis. Noank post office is rated as a third class office. During the summer the money orders have been exceptionally heavy. There has been no exact record kept of the coming and going of the mails, but during July there were 212 pouches handled 1st class mail, 951 sacks of second, third and fourth class mail, 34 outside packages, 191 bundles of newspapers outside of the pouches, 23 shipments of empty sacks going and coming. 123 letters were picked up by the messenger from the post office to the station. John Ashbey, of Front street, has been in the service as messenger for 32 years. His route number is 206,064. Under ordinary conditions he makes five round trips each day, but during the past summer he has had to make 6 or 7 round trips daily. The distance from the post office to the depot is 1,369.5 feet or nearly one quarter of a mile. Mr. Ashbey make this trip on foot and carries the mail in an express cart. Many thousands of miles have been covered by this messenger in his 32 years of service.

MARKET OPENED WEAK, REGAINING SOME OF ITS LOSSES IN FINAL HOUR

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—(AP)—The stock market began the new week rather feebly today, apparently weakened by the vigorous recovery from last Thursday's sharp break. The market skidded about dizzily until the last hour, when it regained some of its poise, as bull forces rallied and drove shorts to cover by a sharp run up in a few issues. Losses of 5 to 12 points in several leading stocks were practically cut in half, but closing quotations were for the most part emphatically lower.

There was practically nothing in the news of the day or of the week end to account for the dumping overboard of stocks, but many traders had grown rather nervous over the security of the market's position after the sharp rally late last week, and taking advantage of the prevelent uneasiness, bears were able to send prices rapidly lower. The pace of trading showed but moderate recession from the fast rait se' last week, the day's turnover exceeding 4,860,000 shares.

A factor tending to cause retrenchment of speculative positions was the vagueness of the week end business reviews regarding autumn prospects. While the optimistic tone was maintained, it was generally granted that definite trends will not become apparent much before October. Uncertainty regarding credit was again a factor, also, although nothing new appeared in the situation, save, perhaps, a further decline in sterling exchange, which made the prospect of a higher discount rate at London and the withdrawal of funds from New York more threatening than ever.

Call money renewed at 8 per cent. and held there all day as there was some calling of loans, presumably by banks to pay off federal reserve borrowings. This was in line with expectations, as Friday's drop from 9 to 8 per cent. was regarded as due to temporary conditions.

Bankers do not look for any marked tightening of credit as a result of the midmonth income tax payments and treasury refinancing until late next week. It is expected that funds will accumulate here in preparation for this shifting of balances, and this may ease the situation momentarily. In connection with its refinancing, the treasury is expected to make its customary overdrafts at the reserve banks, which will have a stabilizing influence. As these overdrafts are paid off, however, a tightening of credit is expected.

A drop in the rail shares was rather disappointing, as Wall street has generally regarded this group as among the least exploited. Atchison tumbled more than 12 points, but cut down its loss to about 5 as President Storey made a rather optimistic estimate as to the results of operations durine the second half. New York Central, Chesapeake & Ohio, Delaware & Hudson, Norfolk & Western, and Union Pacific closed from 2 to 6 points lower. Northern Pacific was a strong spot, closing moderately higher.

Such issues as American Telephone, General Electric, and Consolidated Gas were depressed about 7 points, but closed only 2 or 3 points lower. U. S. Steel dropped about 6 points, and Westinghouse Electric dropped about 10, but they reduced their losses to 4 1-2 points each. Radio and General Motors lost 2 or 3 points in heavy turnovers. Auburn Auto tumbled 19 points. Utilities generally were inclined to heaviness, but Standard Gas reached another new high above 200 and American Water Works recorded a new top at 194.

Aviation shares were depressed by news of the Transcontinental Air Transport plane disaster in New Mexico. Curtiss-Wright sagged to 25, a new low since its listing on this market, and United Aircraft lost a few points.

Case Threshing was a high flier, selling up 23 points to a new peak at 415, and several of the food shares were in demand. Fleischman, Standard Brands and Kraft Phenix, reaching new peaks. Sloss Sheffield Steel, which recently reached a new low for the year, rallied 17 points on a better tone in the southern iron market. In the late trading, Packard Motor (old) was rushed up about 10, and Union Carbide more than 7, to record levels. Other shares to reach new high ground included American Rolling Mills, Weston Electrical Instrument, and Worthington Pump.

Cotton was a feature of the commodities jumping about $3 a bale on the smaller-than-expected government crop estimate, but about two-thirds of the gain was lost in selling on bearish weather. Wheat and corn moved in narrow ranges. Wheat was fairly steady on improved flour demand and firm northwest markets, but corn closed 1-2 to nearly 1 cent lower on beneficial rains.

Foreign exchanges were generally under pressure, sterling cables sagging to $4.84 11-16 to equal its previous low for the year. The Jauanese yen dropped 1-5 of a cent to 46.65 cents.

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—(AP)—Selling pressure was quite pronounced in today's curb market. Pools succeeded in marking up a few issues to new high levels, but prices generally lost ground. Uneasiness over the credit situation, fears of adverse legislation and the coming session of congress and a widespread speculative belief that a further correction of the recent top-heavy speculative position was necessary, all contributed to the bearish sentiment.

While most of the public utilities lost ground, Standard Power & Light was whirled up nearly 11 points to another new high record at 181 which contrasts with the year's low of 49 1-2. Lone Star Gas ran up more than 6 points to a new top at 53 1-4. Electric Bond & Share dropped nearly 7 points, but recovered half its loss, and net declines of 3 points or more were recorded by American Commonwealth Power B, Central States convertible preferred, and United Gas Improvement.

International Shoe responded to reports of improved sales by moving up to a new high at 78. Other issues to attain new top prices were City Radio Stores, Corron Reynolds issues, General Realty preferred, Horn & Hard, and Libby McNeil.

Central Atlantic States was heavily bought, reaching a new high on the current movement, in response to the recent enlargement of its chain to 21 plants, the acquisition of a contract to operate the ice and cold storage properties of the Inland Utilities, Inc., and a change in management. American Cyanamid B also was active on the up-side.

Aviation shares were under rather steady pressure on selling inspired by the recent Transcontinental Air Transport fatalities and speculative disappointment over the sale of planes this year which has fallen well below earlier estimates. Aeronautical Industries, Curtis Flying Service, National Aviation, New York, Rio & Buenos Aires and Universal Aviation fell back 1 to 2 1-2 points.

Oils also drifted lower but with the exception of Cosden, Gulf and Humble, which lost 1 1-2 to 3 points, the declines were held to fractions.

Investment trust and holding company stocks were mixed. Third National Investors and Intercoastal Trading moved into new high ground but Electric Investors dropped 6 points and Goldman Sachs Trading and several others yielded a point or more.

ONLY DR. J. M. GANEY WON OUT MONDAY IN NEW LONDON'S CITY ELECTION

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 9.—New London had an election today, but of the six candidates for the office of member of city council not a single nominee was elected, since none of the office seekers obtained a majority of the number of votes cast. Cornelius D. Twomey was high man with 1650 votes, while former Mayor E. Frank Morgan was next with 1420 and James A. May was third with 1419. Dr. Joseph M. Ganey, republican, was the only member of the board of school visitors to be elected. The candidate received 1779 votes. Because of the failure of a member of the city council to be elected there will be four candidates to run at the election to be held two weeks from today and three of these will be elected.

There were 3422 votes cast today and the result follows:

UNCASVILLE DRIVER BROUGHT BACK TO EXPLAIN

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 9.—Leonardo Minucci, 474 Ocean avenue, reported to the police this evening that the driver of an automobile carrying Connecticut registration L-5473 was guilty of evasion of responsibility. The state police ascertained that John A. McInnis, Uncasville, was the owner of the colliding auto and he was arrested by State Police Officer Murphy and delivered at police headquarters. McInnis was held in bail of $150 for his appearance in the police court tomorrow. Minucci's auto was parked on State street and was hit by McInnis' car when the latter machine was being guided to a location of parking in advance of the New London car. Minucci claimed that McInnis drove away without stopping to ascertain the extent of damaged occasioned. When arrested, McInnis admitted hitting the Minucci auto, but said he did not consider that he had caused damage.

Edward Rothen, 3 Jennie street, was arrested this afternoon by Patrolman Cornelius Moriarty charged with blocking traffic on Golden street and will be in court tomorrow.

Leroy Burns, Old Lyme, was arrested by Patrolman John Sullivan this afternoon charged with failing to stop at an automatic danger signal on Bank street, corner of Montauk avenue. He will explain in court tomorrow.

Edward J. Shea, 25 Main street, Northampton, Mass., was arrested today charged with parking overtime on State street. He put up the usual cash bond of $2.

Five cases of intoxication await trial in the police court tomorrow. Three were arrested on the municipal pier by Patrolman Edward Skoczylas and Sergeant John McGrath and Officer Harold Swanson of the New Haven railroad police. The trio had been loitering about the pier the greater part of the afternoon. The two other men were arrested on North Bank street.

Peter Mros, 111 North Bank street, was arrested this afternoon charged with driving while under the influence of liquor. He was locked up and will be in court tomorrow. Mros had been drinking freely and decided to go for a ride. While driving on Main street, between Mill and Williams streets, Mros encountered an automobile operated by Timothy Driscoll, Colman street. Try as he would to get out of the course of Mros' car, Driscoll could not, with the result that his car was struck and damaged. After hitting Driscoll's auto, Mros continued to drive on Main street. The children of the Winthrop school were leaving the grounds at the time and several of the youngsters barely escaped being struck. Patrolman Patrick Sheehan who was on duty nearby, observed the zig-zag driving and ordered Mros to stop. When the driver alighted from the auto his condition was not to be disputed and he was arrested. Mros is on probation at present for a breach of the peace charge, which consisted of beating his wife. He has been arrested many times and has served two terms in jail for violation of the liquor law and judging from his offense today he is destined for another jail sentence.

Norwich Passengers Transfer

Due to the work of widening Main street, between State and Hallam streets, the Norwich trolley cars conclude their trips into the city at Main and Williams streets. Passengers to and from this point are handled by the main line city cars over the Post Hill route. This schedule will prevail for the greater part of a month.

Clinton Dudley, U. S. Coast Guard, is a patient at Lawrence Memorial hospital, apparently suffering from a heart attack. Saturday night, during a pouring rain, he was found unconscious beside the highway approaching the Thames river bridge. After being in the hospital several hours Dudley regained consciousness and today he was exercising in the corridors. Judging from Dudley's condition today he will be discharged tomorrow or Wednesday.

Property of Mrs. Fannie Persky, Midway place, Ocean beach, has been attached by the Hoffman Wall Paper company, that claim $650 damages because of failure of the defendant to pay for merchandise furnished her.

Patrolman Harry Watterson was unable to perform duty last night, being confined to his home on Summer street because of illness.

APANASCHIK WOMAN PAYS $325 FOR BOOZE SELLING

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 9—Mrs. Sophie Apanaschik, 185 North Bank street, was presented in the police court today charged with violation of the liquor law on two counts, reputation and possession. She pleaded guilty to both counts and was fined $150 and costs on each. Altogether Mrs. Apanaschik paid $325 into the court treasury. Mrs. Apanaschik was arrested Saturday afternoon when a raiding force descended upon her home as a result of a woman making complaint that her husband spent both his time and money at the liquor resort of North Bank street. When the raiders entered the house, the woman's husband attempted to destroy the alcohol and hooch that was found there, but he was not successful for most of the supply of alcoholic beverages was seized as evidence as to the nature of the business being conducted by Mrs. Apanaschik.

Case Continued

Abalan Khoury, 149 North Bank street, one of the promoters of the Oriental club, Inc., 12 Methodist street, which was raided early Sunday morning when a force of bluecoats entered the house after obtaining evidence as to the nature of the revenue of the club, was charged with violation of the liquor law and conducting a gambling house. The case was continued until tomorrow morning as were the cases of Albert Sanalin, Louis E. Lawson, Francis Leo Thomas, Price Kelley, Fred Shaia and Thomas Duffy charged with frequenting. All of the men accused furnished sureties on their respective bonds for their appearance tomorrow.

CHARGE AGAINST SLOAN NOLLED IN CITY COURT

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 9—Bruce Sloan, 333 West Main street, Norwich, was presented on a charge of breach of the peace, but the charge was nolled. He was arrested Sunday afternoon, when he went to police headquarters to file a report of an accident in which the machine he was driving in this city Saturday night collided with an auto driven by James W. Miner, 113 Fourth street, Norwich. The cars collided on Main street, near Pierce street. During an altercation in which the two men engaged and in which each tried to place the responsibility on the other for the crash, Sloan struck Miner a blow on the mouth which broke off a part of the latter's teeth. Sloan then disappeared and Miner requested his arrest.

TUCKER FURNISHES BOND— CASE CONTINUED A WEEK

Walter Tucker, 492 Vauxhall street, was charged with manslaughter in causing the death of Mrs. Isabel MacKenzie Douglass, of 40 Mountain avenue, Mrs. Douglass, who was 74 years of age, died of her injuries at Lawrence Memorial hospital, received last Thursday night when Tucker's automobile knocked her down on Bank street. The case was continued until Monday next and Tucker furnished a surety on his bond of $1,000.

Raymond Davis, a sailor, residing with his wife at 238 Huntington street, was charged with breach of the peace upon complaint of the wife. The case was continued a month in order that the court could learn as to Davis' conduct toward his wife during that time.

SAILOR DECLARES GIRL FOLLOWED FROM HOBOKEN

John V. McCauley, United States coast guard, was charged with lascivious carriage, as was a Hoboken, N. J., girl of 14, the pair having been arrested Sunday night. The charge against McCauley was nolled and the girl will be presented in the juvenile court within a day or two, because she is a minor. The girl was arrested by Motorcycle Officer Augustus Ray, who believed that she was a runaway. When arrested the girl declared that she was 17 and gave a fictitious name and address. When this was revealed, it became known that the girl resided in Hoboken and when her father appeared at the police station her age also became known. McCauley, upon ascertaining that the girl had been arrested, went to police headquarters to learn the nature of the charge against her. He did, also was informed of a charge against him for he was arrested. It was believed that McCauley had enticed the girl away from home, but this he denied, claiming that he had become acquainted with her in Hoboken and that she came to New London upon her own volition.

Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Robbins B. Stoeckel has ordered the suspension of the driver's license of Ameda Caquette, 14 Ash

FIVE PERMITS GRANTED BY FIRE MARSHAL FOR NEW BUILDINGS DURING PAST WEEK

Five building permits were granted by Fire Marshal Henry R. Taft during the first week in September for new construction work in the city. With the exception of one new bungalow to be built on Boswell avenue by Edward Neiderman the permits are for garages and alterations to present buildings.

The Southern New England Telephone company is to erect a large metal building on West Main street for the storage of stock and tools. The building is to be 18x40 feet and will be placed on the land of Belt Brothers near the present building leased by the telephone company.

Considerable progress has been made on local buildings in the city. The house being built by Edward Neiderman at the corner of Rockwell street and McKinley avenue is practically completed. Two other houses have been started on McKinley avenue extension and work is progressing rapidly on them. This section of the city has built up rapidly during the past year and it is expected that the section will be completely built up within another year.

The work on the remodeling of the front of the Land building on lower Broadway has been almost completed by Contractor W. S. Spencer. Some interior work remains to be completed.

The permits issued by Fire Marshal Taft are as follows:

To Thomas Kilbosa to build an addition to the present building at the corner of Roath and Cliff streets. The addition will be 3½x8 feet and will be of frame construction. The interior will be finished in plaster and hardwood. The estimated cost is $75.

To Frank Comstock of Nelson place to build a two-car frame garage. The garage will have a concrete foundation and will be 18x20 feet. The garage will be finished in novelty siding with asphalt shingles on the roof. The work is to be done by a local builder. The estimated cost is $350.

To the Southern New England Telephone Co., to build a wood and metal storage house on the land of Belt brothers on West Main street. The building will be 18x40 feet. The wood frame will be set on cement posts and the side walls will be of metal. There will be only a cinder floor in the building. The estimated cost is $675.

To Mariana Daskiewicz to raise the roof on the present brick house at 125 Talman street. The roof will be raised four feet so as to permit the altering of the house into an apartment house. The estimated cost is $300.

To Edward Neiderman to erect a frame bungalow on the land of Frank Goldsen on Boswell avenue. The bungalow will be 39x28 feet and will contain five rooms and bath. The foundation will be of stone with fir superstructure. The exterior finish will be in clapboards and composition shingles on the roof. The interior will be finished in hardwood and plaster. The plumbing will be brass throughout and the house will be steam-heated. The estimated cost is $5,000.

REAL ESTATE SALES AND MORTGAGE LOANS

In Norwich during the past week there were five sales of real estate as compared to four sales for the corresponding week in 1929. The mortgage loans for the respective weeks were $101,100 and $31,409.

There were six sales of real estate in New London during the past week as compared to 11 sales for the same week a year ago. The mortgage loans for the respective weeks were $89,735 and $104,874.

NEW LONDON

Ten new dwellings, representing an outlay of more than $75,000, are to be built in the immediate future, according to permits granted by the city council at the regular meeting this week. Besides the permits for the houses there were 13 other permits issued which will bring the proposed construction work authorized by the council this week up to nearly $100,000.

Included in the list is a new cement or brick shop, 24 by 70 feet, which L. B. Clinton proposes to erect in Eastern avenue, a new boat building shop, 26 by 40 feet, which Antone G. Aguiar proposes to build in Howard street, 36 bath houses which Gordon & Greenblatt plan to construct in Midway place and the changing of a story and a half building to a two-story building in Shaw street for Antonio Basilica.

Of the new houses which are to be built practically all have already been started. Two are located in Gardner avenue, three in Cedar Grove avenue and one each in Briggs street, Grove street, Parkway, Beckwith street and Rogers street.

The new building being erected for the coast guard near the state pier has been practically completed and will probably be occupied next week. The structure is a large rectangular building, two stories high. It will replace the former building of the coast guard on the same site which was destroyed by fire last winter. When completed the new structure will house the recreational hall of section base No. 4, the dispensary, store rooms, radio shack and quarters for officers and men.

Work was virtually completed this week on the razing of the frame part of the Copp building in State street which was recently badly damaged by fire. The entire front part of the building, which is of frame construction, is being leveled to the first floor. In its place a modern two-story building of brick and steel construction will be erected.

Building Permits

W. H. Lincoln, frame dwelling, Cedar Grove avenue, $6,000.

F. J. O'Connor, et al, frame dwelling, Parkway, $8,000.

A. S. MacFarlane, frame dwelling, Cedar Grove avenue, $5,000.

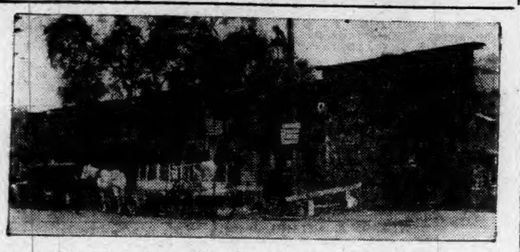
Main Street Property Improved by Oil Company



Among the many improvements made in the city during the past few months is the change at the corner of Main and North Main streets, where once stood the unsightly barn on the Bailey property.

About three months ago the property was acquired by the Standard Oil company of New York for the site for one of their gasoline filling stations. The old barn which for many years had been used as a livery stable was torn down and the plot filled in and an attractive tapestry brick building erected on the site. For many years the old barn was conducted as a livery stable by Casper K. Bailey and a few years ago when Mr. Bailey retired from the livery business the barn was used for a garage and other purposes. It was a very unsightly building at the last of its existence and with the building of the filling station it has improved the corner greatly.

The new building is very attractive. There is a driveway running to the building from the street and the property is kept immaculate and is a decided improvement.

GROTON

Work on the new factory building being erected for the Vanadium Metals Co. in Groton is well along and will soon be closed in. The new structure is 50 by 150 feet, one story high, of brick and steel construction with steel sash. When completed it will house offices and a foundry and equipment of the Vanadium Metals Co., which is now housed in the plant of the Electric Boat Co. in Groton. Included in the plans is a spur track connecting with the New Haven railroad near where the new factory is located.

A new schoolhouse for the second school district of the town of Groton is in process of construction in the Pleasant Valley road. Work on the foundation was started this week. The school will be of single story, two-room frame construction and the general contract is for $7,175. Voters of the school district decided to build the school as a result of an edict of the first school district committee barring second district pupils from the Groton Heights school this year.

WESTERLY

Building Inspector Thomas Wills and Zoning Inspector Louis J. Rossi have issued the following building and zoning permits for the last of August and the first of September:

The Safety of Your Home Is Measured by the Safety of Your Town

Your own carefulness in safeguarding home, factory, store or other property against fire is a solemn duty, but it is not enough.

No matter how careful you may be, a bad condition in adjacent or even distant property may undo all your own efforts. Cities must be made safer. It is a civic as well as a personal obligation.

Here is where the Stock Fire Insurance companies — constituting the National Board of Fire Underwriters—have rendered a conspicuous service. Their skilled engineers work unceasingly to make American cities safer.

Surveying American Cities

These engineers have systematically surveyed more than 400 cities, many of them several times. The improvements in water supply, fire alarm systems, fire departments and safety ordinances made by municipalities upon the recommendations of these engineers have been of great public benefit and a decided factor in the consistent rate reduction shown by Stock Fire Insurance.

Modern Scientific Developments

New hazards, growing out of new inventions and processes, receive prompt engineering treatment. Fortified with far-reaching labozatory tests of materials and devices, Stock Fire Insurance engineers are always alert—up-to-the-minute—to provide the necessary measures and precautions.

This service is free to all cities, as well as to individual property owners, architects, contractors and builders through the National Board or the territorial board or bureau of the Stock Fire Insurance Companies. Your own insurance agent or broker can give you information regarding this service. Inquiries are invited.

PICTURES HOLLYHOCK ISLAND IN MAGAZINE ARTICLE

In the September issue of The American City magazine, appears an article, entitled, The Norwich Athletic Field Transforms "The Filthiest Spot in Town". Accompanying the article are pictures of Hollyhock Island taken before it was cleaned up and after it was transformed into the present recreational field. The article follows:

Norwich, Conn.—The formal opening of Hollyhock Island athletic field with a local league ball game recently drew a record-breaking crowd—a crowd composed not only of athletic fans, but of civic progress fans as well. The occasion marked the achievement of a municipal recreation area that makes possible the staging of league ball games and other athletic events on other than privately-owned grounds. It marked, also the completion of a public enterprise that has triumphantly produced orderliness, attractiveness and a large degree of public usefulness where formerly chaotic disorder, confusion and filth reigned supreme. It marked, in short, the transformation of the city's island garbage dump into a scientifically designed community recreation area, immediately in demand, and destined to be made increasingly more serviceable and attractive with the passing of time.

It was in 1926 that the recreation commission recognized the necessity for an athletic field and, making a survey of the situation, discovered that Hollyhock island presented the only city-owned land appropriate to the purpose, and that this land was being used as a city dump. Arthur Leland, landscape architect and superintendent of recreation of Newport, R. I., was called in as a consultant.

His recommendations were that the area could, with sufficient outlay, be converted into a suitable athletic field. The city therefore appropriated $10,000, and work was begun in 1927. After the grading was completed, in 1928, a fill was made, and a baseball diamond laid out. A backstop was placed, and bleachers with a seating capacity of 1,000. A 6-foot chain-link fence has been erected, with large entrance gates, parking space has been provided, and drinking fountains installed for public comfort. The field today is 750 feet in length and is 360 feet in width at the narrowest point.

The original plan includes provisions for a quarter-mile running track, tennis courts, football field, and skating rink. These will be laid out at a future time. Meantime, citizens in the vicinity of the improvement are eloquent in praise of the venture. Even if the recreation center had not been needed, they say, the recreation commission has done a great work in cleaning up the filthiest spot in the whole city!

GARDNER LAKE OUTING FOR CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

The next meeting of the Norwich chamber of commerce will take the form of an outing at Gardner lake, next Monday evening at 6.30 o'clock. The meeting will be held at Camp Cadaho, at the invitation of Milo Light, proprietor of the camp. Mr. Light some time ago issued an invitation to the chamber members to visit the camp in September.

As business before the meeting will include the election of directors a large attendance is anticipated. Paul H. Wilson, secretary of Grafton & Knight Co., Worcester, Mass., will be the principal speaker and his subject will be Calendar Reforms. Mr. Wilson has been designated by George Eastman of Rochester to cover the local assignment by request of the chamber of commerce. The chamber has before it U. S. Referendum No. 53, on the calendar reform, and it is felt that an address on calendar reform will greatly aid the membership in arriving at a decision on the referendum.

Mr. Light, proprietor of Camp Cadaho, announced Monday afternoon that he will be pleased to have the chamber members visit the camp in the afternoon for swimming or bathing in the lake or for an inspection of the various parts of the camp.

STOMACH TROUBLE?

"DIASTATIC DEFICIENCY" AND "TOO MUCH ACID" CAUSE 9 OUT OF EVERY 10 ATTACKS

"DIASTATIC DEFICIENCY" (failure to digest starches), causes more than one-half the cases of stomach trouble. Because of this deficiency, potatoes, breads, macaroni, rice, breakfast cereals and other starchy foods remain in a semi-solid condition and refuse to move on as they should. This stoppage causes INDIGESTION, GAS, FERMENTATION, SOURNESS, SICK HEADACHE and other common troubles.

"TOO MUCH ACID" is the cause of almost all the remaining half of our stomach troubles. It also is the result of fermentation and excess digestive acids.

ACIDINE, the new discovery, is a perfect anti-acid combined with "Japtase," the most effective known starch digestant, one pound of which will digest more than 800 pounds of starchy foods.

ACIDINE is the FIRST COMPLETE REMEDY for STOMACH TROUBLE—an ANTI-ACID, STARCH DIGESTANT, MEAT DIGESTANT. At the same time it is safe and soothing to the most sensitive stomach. Slightly laxative but not unpleasantly so.

POETRY

By The Fountain

I was passing by a fountain,
I remember it so well,
I saw a sweet face dreaming
Where the waters splashed and fell;
The green leaves hung above her,
The birds sang bright and clear,
And there was one beside her
Who whispered in her ear.

Chorus

While the silver fountain falleth
And the stars are in the sky,
I shall love thee, dear, forever
With a love that shall not die;
I shall love thee, dear, forever
With a love that shall not die.

'Twas after years I saw it,
That same sweet face of yore,
But the fountain it was frozen
And the birds sang there no more,
There was gray among her golden hair,
There were tears within her eyes
As she stretched her hands imploring
Towards the empty skies.

Chorus

Art thou coming, my beloved?
Still I hear her bitter cry,
But the stars give back no answer
And the fountain no reply;
The stars give back no answer
And the fountain no reply.

Then once again I saw it,
That same sweet face of old,
But the waiting all was over
And the bitter tale was told.
He would come no more forever,
Too well she knew it now,
While her heart gave back the echo
Of her lover's broken vow

Home

Sometimes, in dreams, I see a room
With massive walls and fair;
Rose-shaded lights shut out the gloom,
The air is sweet with flowers in bloom,
And you are there.

Sometimes, the room I see in dreams
Is homely, small and bare;
The table waits, the kettle steams
O'er all the cheery firelight streams,
And you are there.

What matter, dear, which dream come true:
The mansion rich and rare,
The little cottage hid from view
In God's own sunshine, wind and dew,
If you are there?

—Alice E. Allen, in Good Housekeeping.

KALEIDOSCOPE

Twenty of the world's greatest inventions were produced by men at an average age of 32.

Sixty years ago aluminum was so rare that it cost about $100 a pound and was used almost solely in the making of jewelry.

One authority computes that authors seem to attain the peak of their creative powers at or about the age of 42. Financiers and business men generally reach their zenith at 53.

New York city, among its other titles, has the honor of being the earliest incorporated city among the large cities of the country, having been incorporated in 1653. Philadelphia is next, incorporated in 1683.

There is a peculiar class of insects which in color and form so closely resemble the leaf that it is difficult to distinguish the one from the other. The genus is entomologically styled Phyllium, and one variety is familiarly known as the "walking leaf."

In North Dakota it is unlawful for children under fifteen years "to approach closer than ten feet to a locomotive unless accompanied by parent or guardian." Georgia had a law which prescribed that a life guard must be stationed at every beach by the owners of the beach, and that he must wear "a bright solid red bathing suit" and walk up and down the beach at all times with a leather harness around his neck to which is to be attached a life line 200 feet long and a quarter of an inch in diameter. In North Carolina a law prescribed that there must be a two-foot space between twin beds.

Emulating Napoleon, who took up a sleeping sentry's musket and walked the post, Mayor Mackey, of Philadelphia, assumed the role of traffic officer when he found the policeman missing from the intersection of Fifteenth and Chestnut streets. He was prompted by an unidentified motorist whose machine narrowly missed the Mackian coat tails. After telephoning police headquarters, Mayor Mackey directed traffic for the minutes between 1:15 and 1:40 p. m. A police inspector reached the scene a moment before the traffic officer, who had "stepped away for a minute to get a drink of water." The mayor spoke to the latter in earnest fashion and then departed.

SENATE TO INVESTIGATE BIG NAVY PROPAGANDISTS

Naval Committee Will Sift to the Bottom Charges of Activities at the 1927 Geneva Naval Limitations Conference—Committee Has Support of President Hoover—Senator Borah Denounced the Methods of Shearer as a "Criminal Conspiracy Against the Interests of the People of the United States and the Government."

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10—(AP)—Supported by President Hoover, the senate naval committee moved today to sift to the bottom reports and charges that propagandists and American ship building corporations had sought to influence the trend of the unsuccessful 1927 Geneva naval limitations conference.

The decision of the committee was unanimous. At the white house subsequently, the president publicly announced that the use of propaganda to obstruct the administration's program for naval limitation was "so obviously evident" as to necessitate an inquiry into the matter.

Senator Borah, republican, Idaho, who first called attention of the senate to a statement by William B. Shearer, self-styled naval expert, that he had represented American ship builders at the Geneva fiasco, took a leading part in bringing about the committee action.

Appearing as a witness, he said the activities of Shearer at Geneva in behalf of the ship builders amounted to a "criminal conspiracy against the interests of the people of the United States and the government".

Later, the Idaho senator introduced a resolution to carry out the committee's decision. This is expected to be approved by the senate prior to another committee meeting called for Monday.

The resolution was prefaced by two declarations. One was that Shearer had filed suit against "certain ship building corporations, alleging services rendering" at Geneva, and the other said that some of the companies "have been seeking, or have secured, contracts with the government of the United States for building certain vessels, or ships, to be used by the American navy."

Chairman Hale and Borah both expressed a belief that Shearer, representatives of the ship builders, and American naval officials would be called for testimony.

At the White House, the president's comment on the situation was made at the customary Tuesday press conference. Later, a transcript of his remarks was issued. It read:

"The disclosure of interference with an propaganda against the efforts of the government in its negotiations of international agreement for reduction of naval armament are already so evident as to require that hese matters should be gone into at the very bottom.'

Earlier the white house made public a letter from E. C. Grace, president of the Bethlehem Steel corporation, saying the company had severed connection with Shearer as soon as it had determined that he was a propagandist.

Grace's communication was in response to a recent statement by Mr. Hoover that although he did not believe directors of ship building corporations had a direct part in Shearer's activities, a statement from them was desired.

Shearer was employed by the Bethlehem company, to act as an observer for a fee of $25,000 of which the Bethlehem company was to pay one third. The connection with Shearer, he added, was severed as soon as he and Charles M. Schwab, on behalf of the company, had ascertained that Shearer for years had been "an active propagandist" regarding American naval and military policies.

Grace explained Shearer had been engaged by S. W. Wakeman, in charge of the Bethlehem's eastern shipbuilding operations, and added Wakeman assured "us that his understanding was that Mr. Shearer was employed only as an observer to furnish information and that his activities as a propagandist were solely on his initiative and were in no way inspired or supported by the shipbuilding industry".

DENIES STATEMENT MADE BY SHEARER

LONDON, Sept. 10.—(AP)—Lord Riddell, British publisher who was a member of the British delegation to the Washington arms conference, in 1928 today denied a statement attributed to William B. Shearer, whose activities as a propagandist are being investigated in Washington.

Lord Riddell denied he "completely dominated publicity at the Washington conference."

He said: "Mr. Shearer's implication that the naval cuts agreed upon at Washington were due to publicity arrangements in which I took part has no justification. The proposals were made at the first meeting by Mr. Charles Evans Hughes, the secretary of state, on behalf of the United States, and they were at once accepted by Mr. Arthur Balfour on behalf of Great Britain. So far as I am aware, publicity had nothing to do with the proposals or their acceptance."

RESOLUTION SENT OUT BY "BIG NAVY" SHEARER

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10—(AP)—The Washington Evening Star said today that William B. Shearer, big navy propagandist, had addressed to patriotic organizations here a resolution asserting that "the British government has set up the most powerful propaganda machine in the world in the United States" and urging that they oppose American adherence to the world court.

The Sons of the American Revolution, the Daughters of the American Revolution and the American Gold Star Mothers were among the group named by the Star as receiving copies of the resolution which was said to have demanded also completion of this country's cruiser building program and the building of a navy second to none.

"In every country in the world," the Star quoted the resolution as reading, "the eternal fight goes on as to who will run the government" and it added that a crisis faces the United States as to whether it will be ruled by Americans, "the block vote of the hyphenated Americans, or the internationalist."

The resolution was quoted further as saying that "the outstanding American issues are national defense and the world court" and that when dealt with by the people and congress "the answer has been for an equal navy to any and an overwhelming opposition to the league of nations and the league court".

"If the United States proposed to demand equality," the resolution was further quoted, "the United States must build ships. The delay is unwarranted, unsafe, and unconstitutional in view of the fact that since 1922, the year of the signing of the Washington treaty, the four other signatory powers have built over 1,250,000 tons of new warships, and there is no evidence that they will scrap one ton or one gun of what they now possess."

"The British government," the resolution was further quoted, "has set up the most powerful propaganda machine in the world in the United States. The press, the pulpit and the politicians have sung the praises of the league of nations and the world court. The international bankers and industrial kings have so created fear in the minds of the people that the whole nation stands lawyer-bound and slave-thinking, other than the impression of the national commander of the American Legion, there has been no protest against the delay in building the cruisers as authorized by congress."

FOREST FIRE SITUATION IN OREGON MORE CRITICAL

PORTLAND, Ore., Sept. 10—(AP)—Drastic action in attempting to cope with the most critical forest fire situation in Oregon in a decade was taken by the federal district forester here today in closing every national forest in Oregon and eight in Washington. Twenty-two reserves are affected.

As this step was being taken to prevent the outbreak of other fires, more than 2,000 men were engaged in Oregon in a battle to subdue 200 or more blazes in the western part of the state.

In the extreme West Coos and Curry counties, eight or ten fires reached the proportions of a general conflagration. Highly valuable and highly inflammable timber was endangered as were logging equipment, [illegible] mills, homesteads and ranch houses.

In Lane county reports from Eugene said a hazardous situation existed. Hundreds of fire fighters were routed out during the night to cope with a fire in timber holdings near Crow Stage. This blaze had broken lines and was threatening small settlements along Wolf creek today. Fire fighting crews were exhausted in their attempt to stem the tide of flame.

Another fire was roaring through timber four miles south of Alma and settlers there had called on all available hands to come to the rescue.

The Triangle lake fire in the Siuslaw National forest aided by a stiff wind that blew up late last night, was on another rampage today traveling almost due west. R. S. Shelley, supervisor of the Siuslaw forest, said fire fighters would direct their efforts toward saving settlers along Deadwood creek.

The district forester announced that the national forests would remain closed until the first general rain. Most of the state was covered by a pall of smoke. Forestry department lookouts found it impossible to see more than three miles. Attempting to work from above, airplane lookouts found themselves unable to take observations.

HADDAM GARAGE OWNER SENTENCED TO PRISON

MIDDLETOWN, Sept. 10—(AP)—Julius Schutte, operator of a garage at Haddam, accused of being the leader of a ring of auto thieves today was sentenced to state's prison to from one to five years by Judge Edwin C. Dickinson, at the opening of the September term of the criminal superior court.

Schutte pleaded guilty to eight counts of auto theft, and was given one to five year sentences on each, the sentences to run concurrently. He was charged with using his garage as a headquarters for the theft ring.

Schutte, in pleading guilty, admitted "doctoring" stolen cars in his garage and selling them to farmers and others. He said he operated in Meriden and Waterbury principally.

FORECAST OF CROPS BY DEPT. OF AGRICULTURE

New Seaplane Speed, 355.8 Miles An Hour

British Entry Exceeded Six Miles a Minute on One Leg of the Four Laps.

CALSHOT, Eng., Sept. 10—(AP)—Not satisfied with the fact that two of their number today flew faster than men ever had before, British seaplane racing pilots tonight had under consideration fresh attempts on Thursday.

Squadron Leaders A. H. Orlebar, captain of the British Schneider cup team, sped over the three kilometer straightaway course twice today at a speed exceeding six miles a minute with a maximum on one leg of 368 miles an hour. The average for the four laps, two in each direction, which constitutes the new world record, was 355.825. He used the blue and silver Super-marine Rolls-Royce S-6 which last Saturday won the second leg on the Schneider trophy for England.

Preceding him over the course to a world record which stood only until Orlebar took the air, Flight Lieut. G. A. Stainforth in a golden Gloster Napier 6, averaged 386.8 miles an hour. Both marks were considerably better than the new record made in the Schneider cup races last week.

MOSCOW REPORTS ATTACKS ALONG MANCHURIAN BORDER

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., Sept. 10—(AP)—Sporadic assaults by Chinese troops and Russian White guards along the Manchurian front were described tonight in messages from Siberian points.

From Vladivostok came word that 200 Chinese invaded soviet territory near Grodekovo, 15 miles northwest of Atamanovka, killing a sentinel and wounding many others of the soviet border guard. They were finally driven off by Red army troops.

On the opposite side of Manchuria, at a point about four miles west of Manchuria station which is the last on the Russian side of the border, a similar assault was made by Chinese soldiers yesterday according to a dispatch from Chita. The Chinese were said to have attacked a Red army detachment which was engaged in haymaking. Vigorous counter measures by soviet guards forced the Chinese to withdraw.

Because of the gap of nearly 3,000 miles between Moscow and the recurring skirmishes between Chinese troops and the Red army the whole military situation around Manchuria remains obscure with communication slow and uncertain.

Senate to Mix Income Tax Data With Tariff

Adopted the Simmons Resolution, 51 to 27—21 Republicans Voted For It

WASHINGTON, SEPT. 10—(AP)—By a vote of almost two to one, the senate today adopted the Simmons resolution directing the finance committee to obtain from the treasury data from income and capital stock tax returns for use in consideration of the tariff bill.

The roll call vote, the first taken on tariff in the senate, revealed a wide split in republican ranks on the principle of publicity involved, 21 republicans joining 30 democrats for the resolution, and 27 republicans casting their ballots against it. The tariff itself was not involved, however.

The resolution, offered by Senator Simmons of North Carolina, ranking democrat on the finance committee, and amended on the floor, calls for presentation of the profits, losses, wages, officers' salaries, cost of production and other related statistics contained in the tax returns of domestic manufacturers and importers.

Existing law already provides that such information may be obtained by the finance committee, but the Simmons proposal would produce the data on vote of the majority or minority members acting as groups, as well as the full committee.

Sponsors of the resolution assured its opponents that no abuse would be made of the privilege thus accorded, such as broadcasting the information to the four corners of the country, but that it would be utilized only when it was deemed necessary to prove the justification of an increase or decrease in a tariff rate.

As originally framed, the resolution would have called for only the profits and losses of taxpayers whose products might benefit by the tariff changes, but Senator Simmons accepted an amendment by Senator Blaine, republican, Wisconsin, to call for additional figures, and another by Senator Couzens, republican, Michigan, providing the financial status of importers as well as domestic manufacturers be produced.

After its adoption, Chairman Smoot, who with Senator Reed, republican, Pennsylvania, were the only speakers against the resolution on the floor, moved that the tariff bill be laid aside temporarily for argument on the priority of the one Norris resolution calling for an immediate showdown in the long pending Vare contest.

Upon the settlement of the precedence of this case seemed to depend the next step in the tariff proceedings.

ADVISES TELETYPE HOOK-UP OF POLICE STATIONS

NEW YORK, Sept. 10—(AP)—A teletype hook-up of all police stations in New York and neighboring states was advocated today in a symposium held at police headquarters and attended by officials from seventy-six towns in this state, New Jersey, Connecticut, Massachusetts, and Pennsylvania.

Such a system, Commissioner Grover A. Whalen pointed out, would aid in the location of missing persons and the apprehension of criminals. It might be possible, he pointed out, to bind the townships into such a network as now holds local precincts together.

MOB RAIDED HEADQUARTERS OF TEXTILE WORKERS' UNION

At Gastonia, N. C., Three Men Were Kidnaped—One of the Three Was Flogged—A Quantity of Communistic Literature Was Destroyed—Police Blotters Failed to Show Any Record of the Disorders—What Started as a Patriotic Demonstration Ended in Outrages.

CHARLOTTE, N. C., Sept. 10—(AP)—One man kidnaped and flogged, two others kidnaped and a quantity of communistic literature destroyed was the net result of a parade of Gastonians starting out as a patriotic demonstration and winding up in raids on National Textile Workers' union headquarters in Gastonia and Bessemer City and the International Labor Defense headquarters in Charlotte.

The kidnapped men were dumped beside a country road 50 miles from the place where they were seized and only made their way back to Charlotte nine hours later. Their appearance in a police station at Concord, N. C., early today and return to Charlotte this morning was the first definite word that any person had been attacked by the crowd.

Today there was no official record in any of the places visited by the mob that here had been any disorders. Police blotters in Charlotte, Gastonia and Bessemer City failed to show any record of there having been any trouble. The only information came from eye-witnesses who saw the mob, although in Charlotte police and deputy sheriffs doubled the guard about the county jail, where the thirteen men accused of the murder of O. F. Aderholt, chief of police of Gastonia, are held.

After J. G. Campbell, a juror, had suddenly become insane, causing a halt in the trial of sixteen Gastonia textile strikers and strike leaders on charges of murder, it was reported that a communistic meeting would be held on a vacant lot in South Gastonia. As a counter-movement a parade was formed with the avowed intention of breaking up the meeting at which Sophie Melvin, Amy Schechter and Vera Buch, New York communists, and defendants in the murder case were reported intending to speak.

The meeting failed to materialize, then the parade turned into a mob and started for Old Boyce Home in Gastonia where the communists and union have their headquarters. Arriving there members of the crowd entered the house and destroyed a quantity of literature. They then went to Bessemer City and ransacked the union headquarters there tearing up literature.

From Bessemer City the procession started for Charlotte, some of the men asserting they intended to "get" Tom F. Jimison, chief attorney for the men and women accused of the Aderholt murder. They came to Charlotte and staged a demonstration in the court arcade in which Jimison's office and that of the International Labor Defense are located.

While part of the crowd was raiding the various communists and union headquarters another section said to number fifteen men kidnaped Ben Wells, union organizer, and C. Bell and C. D. Salyers, union members at Gastonia. The trio was taken to a point five miles north of Concord on a lonely road and there Wells was flogged.

The kidnaping party carried with them a gasoline torch which they set up when the flogging started. But while they were beating Wells, R. B. McDonald, a farmer, and a companion who were possum hunting, came up. Their appearance frightened the party and they fled in three automobiles.

COUNT CLAIMS HE WAS "BLED" WHILE IN PRISON

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—(AP)—Count Sichofsky, Polish adventurer, today obtained a writ of habeas corpus in an effort to get released from Ellis Island where he is held for deportation and go back to California and prosecute claims for more than $200,000 of which he charges he was deprived while under investigation and in prison there for the last nine years.

In support of his application for a writ, the count, through his attorney, made sensational charges against the district attorney's and sheriff's offices in Los Angeles and against one whom he described as a "Mr. Gannon, warden of Folsom prison."

The count charges that on Gannon's advice while in Folsom prison he paid out $16,480, which he was informed was the verdict and costs in a civil action against him, and that subsequently, he found out that $12,680 of it went to Gannon.

Count Sichofsky knew of the plaintiff in the civil action only as a "Mr. Emanuel" and never found out what the suit was all about or why it was brought against him.

Out of more than $300,000 cash, a $23,000 Rolls Royce car, $20,000 worth of jewelry, and 20 wardrobe trunks filled with clothing, which the count claims to have had in his possession when he first became involved in difficulties with federal and California state authorities nine years ago, his attorney says he now has left less than $20,000.

ON BOARD U. S. S. FOX, Off Oyster Bay, N. Y., Sept. 10.—(AP) — The American sloop Gypsy today for the second time defeated the Scottish Challenger Caryl in the contest for the Seaquanhaka challenge cup. The victory gave the American boat two victories to none for the Scottish craft.

The American craft, sailed by Raymond Hunt of Duxbury, Mass., won the first of the series Saturday, Frank Robertson, owner of the Caryl, sailed his boat. The second race was called off yesterday on account of fog.

The American sloop showed surprising form at the outset today, leading its Scottish rival by one minute and 48 second on the first round of the triangular course of seven and one-half miles. Gypsy's elapsed time was 59 minutes and 20 seconds and Caryl's 61 minutes and eight seconds.

The Gypsy can clinch the series by taking tomorrow's race. The course will be windward and leeward three miles to a leg, sailed twice around, a total distance of 12 miles.

ADVOCATES SYSTEM TO OFFSET DOUBLE TAXATION

SARANAC INN, N. Y., Sept. 10—(AP)—A prediction that legislation permitting the United States to conclude reciprocal treaties with foreign nations to terminate conditions of double taxation existing in general business was made tonight before the National Tax association conference here.

The prediction came from Prof. Thomas, A. Adams, Yale university professor, member of the tax committee of the league of nations and tax advisor for the fiscal committees of the house and senate. A steady growth in the number of agreements among European nations was described by the professor, who declared that a few years would see Europe "covered with a network of such treaties".

The states of this nation, the professor believed, should take advantage of this system of offsetting double taxation.

PASSENGER TRAIN JUMPS SWITCH AT HOP RIVER

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Sept. 10.—Some 64 passengers and crew members of passenger train No. 46, of the New Haven railroad, narrowly escaped severe injury at 9:53 o'clock, daylight time, this morning when the train, composed of an engine, baggage coach, Pullman car and three day coaches, took an open switch some 300 feet west of the Hop River station and piled up in a mass of debris.

The train was proceeding at about 40 miles an hour, according to passengers. There was a warning whistle from the engine and sensing danger, the passengers braced themselves or stood up against seats. Then the coaches swayed and bumped as the train left the main line and roared into the siding in front of the station.

The engine, traveling some 150 feet down the siding, struck a gasoline car that had been left by the section gang working along the line under direction of Foreman Jeremiah Connors of this city.

Upon striking the gasoline car the big engine left the rails. The tender was ripped clean of its trucks and the baggage coach, which was next in line, was yanked from its coupling. The coach bounded onto a third side-track leading to the section tool house and in doing so nosed almost directly into a freight shed facing the Hop River station. The shed, 20 by 30 feet, and partially filled with coal, was ripped from its foundation and flattened into a collapsed mass of timbers and boards. The coach from which both trucks were ripped, rested to one side against the debris of the shed. The trucks on the Pullman and three day coaches all left the railing of the siding with the exception of the rear truck on the last car.

Miss Grace Averill, of 136 Capitol avenue, Hartford, a passenger, was taken to St. Joseph's hospital on orders of Dr. Joseph A. Girouard who was summoned to the scene. She was found to have sustained a sprained back. It was stated at the hospital that she will be discharged within 24 hours. Preston Cobb, a mail messenger, was treated at the scene for cuts and abrasions. Other passengers sustained bruises and slight cuts and some of the women became hysterical but were quickly quieted.

Station Agent Boynton of the Hop River station sent out notice of the wreck and Henry A. Blanchette, local agent, rushed to the scene to take charge of the situation until the arrival of other officials. Working with speed and efficiency the passengers were readily placed aboard three passenger coaches of the New England Transportation company at Hop River and brought to this city, leaving here for their respective destinations. There were 40 bound for Boston, five for Providence, five for Blackstone, four for Putnam and ten for this city.

The train had left Hartford at 9:10 d. s. t., with F. C. Wilson of New Haven, engineer, and P. L. Jewell, of Hartford, conductor. The wreckage blocked the main line and trains from Hartford to Boston were detoured via the Air Line division through Middletown and Berlin, the line remaining closed for about 12 hours. While the wrecking crew from East Hartford were occupied removing the coaches from the west end of the wreck the Boston crew with derrick arrived shortly before 4 o'clock this afternoon to lift the engine to one side, allowing clearance on the main line. The section crew, under Foreman James Healy of this city, repaired the roadbed and it was planned to resume traffic by early evening. General Superintendent Edward L. Regan and Superintendent Carl Mitchell, of the Hartford division, were at the scene of the wreck for several hours. Superintendent Mitchell stated that while it was self-evident that the train had taken the open switch he could not give a statement as to the exact cause or responsibility until a thorough investigation had been made. The mail and express shipments on the train were rushed to the local station by motor truck.

JEWETT CITY

GIFT OF PURSE OF GOLD FOR MR. AND MRS E. L. FRENCH

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest L. French celebrated their golden wedding anniversary by keeping open house for relatives and friends from two o'clock until ten Tuesday. Pleasant greetings were exchanged between Mr. French and his bride of fifty years ago, and the many relatives and friends who called to tender congratulations. Time in his flight has touched but lightly, the half century bride and groom.

Among the many gifts received was a substantial purse of gold presented by Rev. G. F. Goodenough as a remembrance from the Congregational Sunday school and friends in that church. Mr. French has been a very faithful superintendent of the Sunday school. Mrs. French is a member of the Ladies' society executive board and both are active in all church affairs.

Mr. French was born in the house at French Crossing, Plainfield, his grandfather having built the house in 1813, his father being born there also. He was the son of John S. and Jane Lathrop French. He lived there until 1893 when he moved to Providence where he was in the grain business for twenty years. He returned to Central Village and has followed the calling of carpenter ever since. He represented the town of Plainfield in the legislature in 1913. Both he and his wife are members of the Central Village church and Mr. French served as superintendent of the Sunday school there. He has served the borough of Jewett City as a burgess.

Mr. and Mrs. French were married in Plainfield fifty years ago by Rev. John Marsland. Twelve years ago Mr. French came to Jewett City to enter the employ of A. D. Tripp and company and two years later moved to Jewett City to live. He purchased the Ann Taylor property which he has greatly beautified. He has made many improvements on one of the loveliest sites in the town. Mrs. French was born in Millbury, Mass., the daughter of Henry and Adelaide Simmons Tripp, and is the oldest of twelve children.

Main, Leonard Main and Malcolm Thompson. Burial was in the family lot in Jewett City cemetery. E. E. Gilbert was the funeral director in charge.

WHEN THE LATE GEO. A. HASKELL HAD A CRANBERRY BOG

One day recently a state road surveyor in looking over the land adjacent to the line for the eastern Quinebaug highway, came upon several specimens of a peculiar red berry growing in the grass. The fruit was later found to be cranberries. The older residents recall that over 40 years ago the late Horace H. Olin set out a cranberry bog near the highway on the Preston road. A dam was built for flowage and operations carried on to considerable extent. Some time later the late George A. Haskell purchased the property. For considerable time it promised to become a paying venture. Many remember how Mr. Haskell hired the harvesting done by local pickers, who, for a fair price per crate, made good pay during several seasons. Competition in the markets, loss by frosts, and other unfavorable conditions made the enterprise short lived. Hardly a trace remains today of the one time dam and Griswold's cranberry bog.

A blossom was sent to the East Bridgewater dahlia king for identification. First Selectman Daniel F. Finn has completed negotiations with the dozen o more property owners that abut the new Norwich-Jewett City-eastern Quinebaug state highway, that is to be completed at record speed. Beginning at Mary Brewster's farm, all the way to Albert Burton's, on the Preston town line, more or less land was taken from the farmers in the state survey. Mr. Finn has secured deeds to the state in each and every case with no land damages which would, if any, have been an expense to the town of Griswold. In an agreement with Road Commissioner John McDonald, wherever the old time boundary walls are removed, the state will erect suitable and satisfactory fences.

At the fall town meeting to be held this month, the town voters will be called upon to make an appropriation to meet Griswold's share of the cost of the building of the new county home at Norwich. This town's quota is $7,787.14 to be paid in two annual installments of $3,893.57.

DANIELSON

OLDEST BUSINESS HOUSE IN DANIELSON INCORPORATED

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Sept. 10—The W. C. Bacon Co., with a capital of $35,000, fully paid in, has been incorporated with Mrs. W. C. Bacon, Charles H. Bacon and Charles S. Francis as incorporators and has taken over the furniture and household equipment business of the W. C. Bacon store. In the deal the corporation acquires title to the large three-story frame building where the concern does business, this structure extending from its frontage on Depot square northward along Mechanic street to Academy street.

The Bacon furniture store is the oldest established merchandising establishment in Danielson, having been founded in 1826, and since continuously in business here. It was founded by W. C. Bacon, father of Charles H. Bacon, who succeeded his father in the ownership, and was himself, a number of years ago, succeeded in the management by his son, W. Clarence Bacon, whose sudden and untimely death occurred the past winter. Since his first connection with the business, well more than half a century ago, C. H. Bacon has been continuously active in it and is at business every day, though he is the senior in years and point of length of time in business of any of Danielson's business men.

Sedan Did Acrobatics.

State Officer Elton Nolan was seeking Harry A. Blanstein, of 11 Brookfield street, Dorchester, Mass., this afternoon, that he might obtain some detailed information relative to the manner in which a Packard sedan did a very unusual stunt when it was wrecked between 12.30 and 1 p. m. today on the Providence road just east of the Gallup farm near the ledges. Blanstein disappeared after the crash and the number plates also were quickly removed from the machine.

The machine went through acrobatics, evidence showed, before it came to a halt, that would appear to require the combined possibilities of a speed car, an airplane and a tractor. Marks show that it went off the left shoulder of the state highway on a right hand curve while leading into Danielson, struck a small embankment just inside the shoulder and then hurtled into the air. About twenty feet farther on it came down astride a ditch after hurdling the first of a series of three state highway fence posts, and with the center one of the three posts coming up into the tonneau of the car just ahead of the gas tank, the top of the post pushing the rear seat cushion out of place. This post had to be sawed off close to the ground and the hurdled post removed before the car could be removed by a wrecker from the New Way garage on Dyer street, where Blanstein is understood to be employed as an automobile painter. The front end of the car tore into an embankment, plowing out rocks and dirt and doing plenty of damage to the machine before it came to a halt. Nothing but the hub of the steering wheel remained after the crash, in which, strange to relate, not a particle of glass in the car was shattered.

State officers were interested this afternoon in finding out where Blanstein went and why he abandoned the car after the accident, and as to why the number plates were removed.

Joy Ride Ends in Arrests.

Walter Gallup, of Norwich; Walter Kirkwood, of Mt. Vernon, N. Y.; Miss Mary Anderson, of Norwich, and Miss Helen Wilson; who claims to hail from Cape Cod, spent this day in contemplation, at the state police barracks on North Main street, while awaiting presentation in a justice's court in Brooklyn this evening. The men were facing charges of intoxication and breach of the peace. Miss Anderson an intoxication charge and Miss Wilson an accusation of driving a car without having an operator's license. All of this came about from a day of partying on Monday. According to information obtained by the state police Monday's journeyings of the four began when the men picked the girls up on the submarine base highway and brought them to Norwich, where they visited several places in search of entertainment, then the party headed into Windham county.

Some time during the day one of the girls had come into possession of Mr. Gallup's wrist watch, a matter that later was to prove contentious. It was night when the quartet had their fill of such amusements as this territory had to offer and the party drifted over into the town of Brooklyn. While the two men were out of the automobile for a minute, the girls drove off, leaving them stranded. The abandoned swains set up such a commotion that residents of the neighborhood telephoned the state police and Officer James Carmody went out and brought in the two men. Their stories of what had happened led later to the arrest of the girls, in Norwich, where the car also was found, and Sergeant G. L. Gardner brought them here and put them into safe keeping at the barracks for the remainder of the night. The four remained there throughout the day, awaiting the services of an available justice in Brooklyn this evening to hear the cases.

It appeared today that Joseph Ware's chief strength as a candidate for one of the republican nominations for selectman Thursday evening will come from the second district of the town, in which he is resident, at Attawaugan. Likewise, Selectman Napoleon P. Gingras, who will be opposed for renomination by Mr. Ware, is a resident of the second district, at Dayville. Last year Mr. Gingras showed greater strength in this, the first district of the town, than did Mr. Ware.

The water of the Quinebaug river has been at such a low level recently that several mills usually deriving part of the power necessary to operate them from the stream, in this territory, have been unable to use the stream, and have been running their machinery with electric power.

Mrs. Clarence A. Potter, a former resident of Brooklyn and Danielson, now of Southbridge, has returned to her home after visiting for a few days with Mrs. Clare N. Turner, of Broad street.

Investigation is continuing in the hope that the remainder of the goods stolen from the Church company store during the Labor day holiday period may be located and recovered. It is regarded as possible that more of the men's suits may be located in Providence, where three stolen from the store here were found yesterday. The owner of one of the stores, where a young man sold a $50 suit for $7, said that it was worn in by the seller, and that the trousers were so long for him that he had the legs turned under and pinned up. In addition to the money, he got a second-hand suit to wear away.

Approval of New Hotel.

Danielson's reaction to this morning's announcement in The Bulletin that E. C. Rogers, of Putnam, had purchased the T. E. Hopkins estate at North Main and Hutchins street and will develop a fine hotel there, was one of unstinted approval and general satisfaction. Mr. Rogers already is working out his plans for the hotel, which, exteriorly, may take on a Spanish type of architecture if ideas that Mr. Rogers has formulated can be worked out satisfactorily. The grounds will lend themselves to extended beautification, giving Danielson, not only a modern, first class hotel, but one in a picturesque setting. It is an alluring prospect to the people hereabouts.

Personal Mention.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Richardson have returned to their home on Broad street after spending the summer in England.

Search is continuing for industries to locate in Danielson, where some small factories are available.

Danielson Malt Store, malt and hop supplies, 22 Main street.—adv.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry H. Davenport, married in Brooklyn last Thursday, have returned from a motor tour through the White mountains. They are to remain in Brooklyn during September and then go to Florida for the winter season.

A rehearsal was held at St. Alban's church for the wedding of Miss Dorothy Hamilton and Chester Erwin, that is to take place at the church Wednesday evening.

Beneficial effects from yesterday's rain were noted today, in wells and springs that have been dry or nearly so for about a month past.

Robert Saunders, who has been seriously ill, is now improved to the extent of being able to get about with crutches and visit about down town.

Continuing its hot weather stunts, September today produced another instance of 90 degree temperature, a mark reached here early this afternoon.

Rumor has it that telephone interests are negotiating for the purchase of two parcels of land not distant from the center of Danielson's business section and that the erection of a new central office building is numbered among the things contemplated.

Mrs. Emma Fowler, of Pawtucket, was a visitor today with friends in Danielson.

George A. LaBlanche, of New Bedford, motored here to visit with relatives and friends for a few days.

CHARLES MOFFETT FINED ON DISORDERLY HOUSE CHARGE

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Sept. 10.— A "whoopee" party staged last evening at a house owned and occupied by Charles Moffett on the North Woodstock-Quinebaug road resulted in a raid by police and arraignment in justice court in Woodstock today for four frequenters. All were charged with intoxication and breach of peace. In two instances charges against the frequenters were nolled upon payment of costs while charges against the other two were nolled. Charles Moffett, proprietor of the house, was arrested by State Officer John Murphy of the Danielson barracks, and was brought before Justice A. C. Scranton on a charge of keeping a disorderly house. A charge of breach of peace was also preferred by the officer. Moffett was found guilty on both counts and was fined $15 and sentenced to 30 days in jail on the first count, and was fined $10 and received a 30 day jail sentence on the second count. In both cases jail sentences were suspended for a period of six months.

PUTNAM

LOCAL AND STATE POLICE INSPECT AUTOS

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Sept. 10—Local police were today cooperating with two inspectors of the state motor vehicle department in a check-up of the safety devices in use on all motor vehicles passing a point midway between the intersections of Providence street and School street and Mechanics street and School street. The state officials together with Captain of Police Jarvis and Officer Edward Benoit stopped all motorists and carefully examined the functioning conditions of brakes, head and tail lights, windshield wipers and rear view mirrors. To each automobile which passed the required test, was affixed a small ticket bearing the inscription, "O. K.," and a stub was retained by Captain Jarvis which will be used as a reference. Several vehicles were taken to task during the few hours the inspectors were in session but no deficiencies in any of the accesseries were found to exist. Captain Jarvis stated that in the event such apparatus on automobiles is found to be functioning improperly an arrest of the driver will be made.

This work is in connection with a recently enacted state law. The representatives of the motor vehicle department will conduct such examinations in this city periodically.

Among the leading politicians present in Washington, Monday, at the meeting and election of officers of the republican national committee, was Miss Katherine Byrne of Seward street, Putnam, a member of the national committee and vice chairwoman of the republican state central committee who with Henry J. Roraback represented Connecticut. As outlined this morning in a special Washington dispatch in the Bulletin, Miss Byrne expressed her pleasure at the election of Mr. Huston. Miss Byrne has become a national republican figure and it was largely through her sincere efforts last fall that the feminine vote in Connecticut was thrown to the support of President Hoover. Miss Byrne's achievements in the republican ranks has not only won for her the high position in the party organization in the state and nation but has brought her the esteem of the republican party.

The hose company at the Central fire station, in response to a four stroke call, went to the Beacon Oil company's property on lower Main street today where they poured hundreds of gallons of water into the company's newly erected gasoline tanks for testing purposes. The outside surface of the cylinders will be carefully scrutenized for several days in search for any possible leaks. Deputy Chief Dumas directed the work of the firemen.

Today was entry day at Woodstock fair grounds. All exhibits and vendors' stands were erected and made ready for the two big days—Wednesday and Thursday. The weather outlook today was that of an exceptionally good fair day. Officials of the Woodstock agricultural society said tonight that capacity crowds are expected to be in attendance during the two day session.

A large truck in the service of a New York firm engaged in tree removing work on the vast estate of Mrs. T. Morris Murray in Abington passed through this city today. The vehicle was specially constructed with hoisting devices and other machinery to enable the operators to raise the full grown trees to the truck, during the process of transplanting to their new positions on the Abington estate.

When all is said and done, there is likely to be little change in the dress of the republican town slate of office seekers. As the date of the caucus draws near perfect harmony continues to reign within the ranks. Two local party leaders forecast today that there are no contests in sight for the nominative offices. Even with this fact in mind and clearly understood by many voters, indications are that the republican gathering will witness an unusually large turnout of citizens enrolled in the party. Some new rumors of prospective candidates who would oppose the present incumbents for nomination sprang up today but authoritative information from the ranks, discounted all true from the current stories.

The democratic voters of the city are to meet in caucus on Monday evening September 16, for the purpose of nominating their candidates. As far as could be learned today the proposed slate has not been perfected.

Forty members of the Putnam high school student body responded to Coach L. F. Noyes' grid call yesterday afternoon and following the issuance of the snick and span new uniforms marched out on the wet soggy campus, which was covered with the season's first rain, that failed to penetrate the hard baked crust, and commenced the first round of the long training grind. Under the direction of Capt. Tourtellotte and the mentor, Coach Noyes, the veterans and the rookies alike began the limbering up exercises that will tend to extract the body kinks—the result of two months of relaxing. The first kickoff will take place at Putnam on Sept. 28—when the East Douglas high eleven invades the cal green and not at Willimantic as previously stated. Athletic relations with Windham high have been severed this year by the local school.

Mrs. Napoleon A. Keroack of Grove street is confined to her home suffering from a slight injury sustained when alighting from an automobile.

Walter P. Cody a member of the graduating class of Putnam high school last June, left today for Danvers, Mass., where he will enter St. John's preparatory school. Cody was accompanied by Frank Donovan of Lyons street, son of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew P. Donovan who will also study this school. Both were "four-letter" men at Putnam high school.

Mrs. W. F. McKenna of Thompson was before Judge P. P. Tourtellotte in town court in North Grosvernadale last evening, charged with a motor vehicle violation. She was found guilty and a fine and costs of $14.35 were imposed. Mrs. McKenna's summons to court took place following an auto accident in Thompson, Monday, in which she is alleged to have failed to grant half of the travelled portion of the road.

State Officer James Carmody of Danielson barracks was in this city today conducting road tests of applicants for motor vehicle licenses.

FEAR JAPANESE BEETLE INFESTS KEEFE'S PLAINS

Several of the lawns as well as the baseball grounds at Keefe's Plains are infested with mysterious insects thought to belong to the Japanese beetle family. Men from Connecticut Agricultural college have been called in to make a study of the situation. The grass on the infested areas has practically been destroyed and it is thought that the lawns will have to be returfed or reseeded. The insects also do damage to the leaves on the trees.

THE New BUICK

New Controlled Servo Enclosed brakes

unrivalled for smooth, sure, silent operation in any weather

To Buick, pioneer of four-wheel brakes, now falls the distinction of another major achievement in this same vital field: the development and introduction of Buick Controlled Servo Enclosed Brakes—the most effective four-wheel braking system ever devised for any automobile!

Buick's new brakes are of the highly efficient internal-expanding type. They are fully enclosed—fully protected against dust, dirt and water—and thus assure maximum braking effectiveness under all weather conditions.

They represent the highest development of the self-energizing principle, which makes the car's own motion provide part of the braking effort. They reveal unmatched responsiveness to the slightest pedal pressure. And they are so perfectly controlled that "grabbing" is entirely unknown! When you apply these brakes, you obtain the most positive, as well as the smoothest and most silent action you have ever experienced in any automobile!

Drive the new Buick! Test not only its matchless new brakes but its brilliant all-round performance, riding comfort and driving ease—all of which combine to establish the new Buick as the greatest value ever offered in the fine car field!

THE WEST SIDE FIRE STATION.

Tonight there is to be a special city meeting for the purpose of acting upon the proposition of selling the present fire station on the West Side and erecting another some distance west, nearer the town line.

It is a meeting which should be attended by a large number inasmuch as it involves a considerable outlay, although it will not be surprising if sentiment is much in keeping with that expressed at the meeting of the Taxpayers' association.

There was much to commend in the statement by ex-Mayor Lerou when he declared that the West Side station is adequate and we should stop spending more money for the fire department until there is a reduction in the insurance rates. He unquestionably voiced the feelings of many citizens.

Herbert Willey likewise hit the nail on the head when he declared that the present fire station is in the very locality where it belongs. It is in the center of a hazardous section, a locality where many fires occur, where there are factories, business blocks, elevators, stores, bakeries and tenement houses. It is within a stone's throw of Box 14 which is sounded more than all the boxes on the West Side combined and if there is an advantage in getting to a fire quickly, the West Side company is so situated as to get it. It is in the center of the region where fires occur and changing the location would simply remove that advantage. Moving the station would take the company from where it is most needed and place it where it is the least needed. Instead of going to the heavy expense of moving it a quarter or a half mile further from where it is most needed, it should be left where it is. That would mean the continuance of good protection and good business.

There may be some congestion in West Main street where the fire station is located, but that can and should be relieved by stopping the parking in that vicinity, a change which is needed for the benefit of ordinary traffic to say nothing of the fire company.

The unanimity of opinion as voiced by the taxpayers expresses, it is believed, the general sentiment, and the correct one. It is, however, at the city meeting that action is to be taken and there should be a large gathering of the taxpayers and voters to pass judgment upon the proposition. On the question of a change it is time for an emphatic No!

DEFECTIVE AUTOS.

From time to time inspections are made in regard to the equipment on automobiles and the results are invariably illuminating. They show that many drivers either have slight knowledge of the conditions of their cars or else they are unconcerned as to the requirements of the law and the dangerous effect of defective equipment.

In view of the fact that the state motor vehicle department has found in tests made by local and state police that 65 per cent. of the cars inspected had defective safety equipment, there can be no surprise that it has decided to continue indefinitely the practical highway tests. It seems to be the only way to get auto owners and drivers to properly protect themselves and others.

Even though these tests are to be made for educational purposes as well as enforcement of the law, it must be evident that there was a disposition to disregard safety and take a chance when it was shown that brakes on 422 cars out of 672 were poor. Furthermore there can be little excuse for the 22 vehicles which had no headlights and the seven which had no markers. Defects included a wide variety. Some of them might never have caused any trouble, but there is no question but what many of them have been the direct cause of accidents.

Even though there appears to be indications of avoiding the correction of defects there is much to commend in the policy that has been followed of warning the auto owners of their failure to comply with the legal requirements and giving them a definite period in which to do so rather than starting prosecutions. There are many instances where tests reveal conditions which are not otherwise discovered. The driver whose tail light has gone out since he started has little chance of knowing the situation and it is entirely possible that lights have gotten out of focus unknowingly.

By the tests which are made auto owners are forced to pay more attention to their cars and their equipment. Where it is apparent there is intentional violations, safety calls for action and not leniency. The devotion of greater attention to defective cars, if continued, should greatly improve the situation.

MAINE STILL BALKS.

Maine has had a long fight over the question of utilizing the water power that is going to waste. It has labored under the impression that if it restricted the sale of its hydro electric current to state use it would bring industries to that commonwealth. It therefore enacted a law preventing the exportation of electric current. The result has been that great quantities of its water power has been going to waste. There is no demand for it within the state and it is impossible to generate electricity therefrom and sell it to those outside the state who need it.

The mistaken policy was recognized by the legislature which voted to change the prohibitive law and make it possible to export electricity in such quantity as is not needed within its bounds. In other words it saw the wisdom of selling that surplus up to such a time as Maine required it. It seemed a sound view to take but it was vetoed by the governor and this week the people of the state were given the chance to express themselves. By the vote the action of the former governor is sustained. Maine has declared for the old restrictive law, and the opportunity for power development and the utilization of waterpower which has been going to waste for an untold period is blocked. Instead of making use of its streams it endorses the policy of waste. It votes to continue to throw away all that it cannot use. It turns a cold shoulder upon economic development because there is the feeling that it is going to benefit others more than it will Maine, although Maine would have the right to shut off such exportation just as soon and as rapidly as it could make use of the power itself. Furthermore the Pine Tree state would be paid a tax on all such current exported.

Maine makes no mistake when it protects itself against such utilization of its water privileges as would handicap its own needs as they develop, but when it refuses to sanction development that will produce revenue without restricting its supply it looks like a short sighted policy. The referendum was decisive, but more reflection and a better understanding of the situation may bring about a change of mind in time.

CHAIRMAN HUSTON.

In the changing of the chairman, the republican national committee has released a pilot who conducted a most successful campaign last year, who has rendered highly valuable service in various capacities and who, in the laudatory statement by the president, has won the retirement which he sought.

On the other hand the choice of Claudius H. Huston as the successor to Dr. Work, brings into that post a man who has been particularly close to President Hoover, one who thoroughly understands his policies, and one who has demonstrated his ability to direct the responsibilities of chairman. The committee, in selecting him, unquestionably did so in the knowledge that he would be satisfactory to the president. As the head of his party, it was to be expected that the president would indicate the one he desired to be chairman of the committee.

The selection directs particular attention to the fact that Mr. Huston is a southerner and that his selection means that there is to be a determined effort to make the most of republican success in the southern states last year. Mr. Huston was instrumental in bringing Tennessee into that republican column again. He is held in high regard throughout the south and under his guidance the work of reorganizing the party in that part of the country should be conspicuous.

This means a new departure, but a logical one in view of the developments. It is clear that there is no disposition to let the southern states sink back into that democratic control that previously existed. There is confidence in the idea that the republican party can be established on a firm footing there and if it is going to be accomplished there was never a more favorable opportunity. Likewise the importance of a southerner to direct such work cannot be overlooked.

THE CAPE COD CANAL.

Conferences have been held by representatives of Massachusetts organizations with the secretary of war for the purpose of having a survey made that will show the need of improvements in the Cape Cod canal.

It was not long ago that the desirability of having the government acquire that waterway was so clearly established that congress approved it and voted the necessary appropriation. At that time it was realized that the canal was suffering from various handicaps, that there was need for various outlays in order to improve it so that greater aid would be given to shipping. It was known then that sooner or later there would be appeals for appropriations to deal with this situation.

The conferences at Washington are preliminary to such appeals. First there must be a survey, the authority for which may rest with the department or may have to be authorized by congress. Because there would be less delay in the former course it is being urged, but it is inevitable that the time will come following a survey when funds will be asked for the deepening and widening of this canal.

If there was need for showing that the acquisition of the canal was a good thing it could be furnished by the extensive use which is made of the waterway by all types of vessels that are able to use it. The fact is that there would be many more vessels taking advantage of the short cut if they could do so. They are prevented because the canal cannot accommodate them, which justifies such efforts as are now being made to get the improvements which will permit them to do so. It may not be accomplished immediately and not all at once, but the need would quickly be demonstrated by a survey. Now the government has it it should make the most of it.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The man on the corner says: Those who insist upon the big bills may like dirty money.

Don't forget the special city meeting tonight. There's a chance to prevent a needless expense.

Even though they have returned the weatherman has made it too hot to hear much from the oysters.

Motorists should bear in mind that the signs "Schoolhouse Ahead" mean something once more.

Even though the debate on the tariff has begun in the senate that, it should be remembered is decidedly different than ending it.

The suggestion is made that there be a course in "How to Behave Abroad". It is all very well but why not include "At Home" also?

A MAN'S WORD.

Mr. Crane buzzed for his secretary. A trim young miss of 20 entered the office immediately.

"Miss Long," said the boss, rather sharply, "ask Billy and Ragen to come in here a minute. And come along yourself. I wish to speak to all three of you."

"Yes, sir," nodded the girl. A moment later the trio appeared—Billy, the office boy—Ragen, the bookkeeper, and Miss Long, the secretary-stenographer to Crane.

"Now, then," began the broker, abruptly, "sit down if you please." The three found chairs and occupied them rather gingerly, wondering what was coming next from the always uncertain man, who paid them large enough salaries to allow his browbeating them a bit now and then.

"This morning, a few minutes after 10 o'clock," continued Crane, "I walked into this office right from the bank. I had $500 in an envelope. I put the envelope in my top drawer, here." He stopped to open and shut the top drawer, showing it held nothing but pencils, two fountain pens and a few loose stamps.

"At 12 I went out, returning at 2. It is exactly," he consulted his watch, "exactly 2.20 at this moment. I don't want to accuse anybody, but the money is gone, and money doesn't fly out the window when the window is shut."

Miss Long flushed, as did the man. Billy, remaining quite calm, giggled and pulled out a handkerchief to cover his mouth.

"You've all been here some time," sighed Crane.

"Six years," coughed Ragen, "in my case, and I've handled many times $500 on several occasion. I—I don't say I'm flush with money—I really need it—but I didn't touch it. No, sir, I wouldn't touch it if I were starving, sir."

"Any old time I'd take $500 from my boss!" exclaimed Miss Long. "Anyhow, my boy friend has a half million. Why should I sneak off with $500? Are you sure it's really missing, Mr. Crane?"

Crane pulled out the top drawer again. Then he opened all the other drawers in his desk, shrugging as he showed the nature of the contents of each. Finally, with a wry smile he pulled various papers and odds and ends from his pockets.

"I'm not dreaming," he said, "and I am decidedly not absent-minded. The money is gone. I hate to call in the police—but it's the idea of having a dishonest employe more than losing my paltry five hundred. Still, something must be done. I hope I'm wrong. What do you suggest, Billy?"

The office boy started violently.

"W—what did you s-say, sir?"

"I asked what you would suggest doing next? Calling in the police?"

"No, sir, oh, no, sir, I wouldn't call the police."

"You wouldn't? Would you call anybody at all?"

"Yes, sir, I would. If it was me, I mean."

"A private detective, I suppose?" sneered Crane.

"No, sir, I wouldn't call any outsider—I mean, I don't know, sir—I promised——" The telephone jangled insistently, cutting off the lad's nervous replies. Crane took the receiver off the hook.

"Yes, this is—oh, Dorothy—you what? Why, yes, I took it out of the bank this morning—of course it was for you—what—oh, you got it already—well, isn't that sweet! Here I am having an inquest, or whatever you call it—but please, please don't do that again, dear—ummmhuh, yeh, I know—good-by."

Crane sighed and blew his nose. "I apologize all around. My daughter came in at 1 o'clock, walked into my office and found the cash. It was for her. But say—didn't any one see her?"

"I did, sir," confessed Billy, a bit embarrassed. "But—but she made me promise not to tell—and—and you know a man's word to a lady, sir—besides, she gimme 50 cents." Crane scratched his chin.

"Well," he concluded, "I'll have to apologize some more and—and give everybody a raise, I guess. Yes, I'll give you all a raise. That ought to fix it. That's all."

The trio filed out as their boss began shaking his fist at a bewitching photograph in a silver frame on his mahogany desk.—Chicago News.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10 — When the seventy first congress assembled in special session, senate press gallery observers could not fail to note that senate proceedings seemed to have particular interest for two of the "three Ruths" added to the feminine membership of the house in the November elections.

While both houses were in session, hardly a day passed that did not see Ruth Bryan Owen of Florida or Ruth Hanna McCormick of Illinois visiting in the senate chamber.

Both spent a lot of time perched on the slippery red leather covering of the huge settees that line the back wall of the senate meeting place. As a rule they held sort of court back there, with two or three senators gathered about and others stopping to exchange greetings.

Obviously that was a situation that could not escape the eagle eye of any political reporter. Murmurs as to possible significance of these visitations began to circulate in the press gallery.

Did it mean that the two Ruths were contemplating a jump to the senate themselves as their next political adventures? Nobody seemed to know definitely, yet now it is apparently a settled fact as to Mrs. McCormick's plans and a more or less accepted circumstance as to Mrs. Owen.

Race Indicated

The senators involved are Fletcher, Florida's veteran, whose present term ends in 1933, and Deneen of Illinois, who sits only until 1931.

A more or less authenticated announcement of Mrs. McCormick's determination to run against Deneen has been published.

So far as Mrs. Owen is concerned, her prompt return to a speech-making campaign at home when the house recessed for mid-summer and the nature of her remarks have satisfied most Florida residents of her intentions.

There is little doubt that Fletcher has so interpreted her maneuvers and made preparations accordingly.

Possibly that underlay Fletcher's tariff statement in late August. He and his colleague had been generally expected to line up in favor of the Smoot-Hawley bill on the showdown.

The very experienced dean of the Florida delegation, however, took issue with the senate tariff committee republican majority on the treatment accorded California products in their draft as compared with what they had in mind for Florida.

He did not say what he was going to do about it, but political commentators construed his remarks as indicating he was preparing to keep in line with the democrats in the tariff fight.

Danger of Dwindling

It so happened that Fletcher's statement came out just at a time when many Washington newswriters were declaring that President Hoover looked on the tariff bill with a lukewarm glance, to say the least, and would exert no presidential pressure in its behalf.

It was argued that this made it possible that the whole tariff revision project might more or less dwindle away, particularly as both Borah of Idaho and Brookhart of Iowa were out in renewal of open opposition to their party leadership on what should be done.

And Mrs. Owen voted for the Hawley bill in the house. That fact conceivably could have been in Fletcher's mind when he prepared his August tariff statement.

Whatever may be the upshot of the political plans and hopes of the Florida and Illinois Ruths, probably Deneen and Fletcher wonder if that name isn't really just a contraction for "ruthless."

Neither lady had sat in a regular session of the house when gossip of senatorial ambitions began to circulate.

YOUR HEALTH

Use and Abuse of Cathartics

By A. C. STOKES, M. D.,
Omaha, Nebraska
(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

Do not use cathartics without the advice of a competent physician. The health of many people is injured annually in this country by dope of one kind or another, the basic principle of which is some cathartic. Keep away from constant stimulation of the normal bowel action by use of cathartics. A whip to a tired horse may at some critical moment be valuable. But, if it is used, it must be used with caution and judgment for fear of injury to the horse, and if the horse is whipped to a point where he exerts himself beyond his ordinary strength following this excessive exertion, he must be allowed to rest for a time sufficient to recuperate and build up the torn down tissues of the body caused by this excessive exertion. So with cathartics. If a cathartic is used and causes the bowels to move, it simply means that the action of the bowels has been stimulated by this cathartic beyond their normal activity. Following this catharsis it is necessary for them to rest. It may be justifiable in some cases to give the first cathartic, but never without the advice of a careful physician. Cathartics not only increase the action of the bowels, but stimulate the heart action and, during the period of whipping the patient feels better and says, "this is a good thing." However, the day after the cathartic the bowels do not move and then they feel worse, and instead of allowing the intestines to rest, they taken another cathartic and the same results follow, until after a little time nature, in order to protect the person from killing himself, accommodates itself to this particular kind of cathartic and the bowel responds no longer. These people then resort to another form of catharsis which repeats the history of the first one. This vicious cycle is so common that a physician's tact, diplomacy and knowledge is often strained to the utmost to combat this artificial constipation and reconstruct the gastro-intestinal tract to normal peristaltic action. It is particularly true of women. To them the stimulus of a cathartic is pleasing and its constant repetition leads them into a physical plight from which to extricate them often takes months and sometimes years of careful attention to the physiology of feeding and bowel action. The change from one cathartic to another becomes a habit and an injurious one.

Actual cases of constipation occur. These cases have some basis in disease, either local or general. In such cases cathartics cannot cure them. The disease itself must be eradicated. True chronic constipation of diseased origin is difficult to treat and cure. It can never be cured by giving cathartics which cause stimulation of the bowels. The general use of drugs of this kind should be frowned upon by every intelligent citizen. Leave all the drug prescribing to your physician, and you will live longer and be happier.

Another phase of this subject is the use of cathartics in acute abdominal pains. How often you hear the statement, "I had a little pain in my abdomen so I took a cathartic," and how often this is followed by gangrenous appendicitis, perforated gall-bladder, or perforated gastric ulcer, no one but a surgeon can tell. If you have a pain in your abdomen, do not take a cathartic. Bear the pain and call a physician at once. This physician, if he is a wise man, will not give a cathartic to relieve the pain. He may give an enema, but will not give a cathartic until he knows that there is no appendicitis, gall-bladder disease or gastric ulcer. In our judgment, cathartics should only be taken on physician's prescriptions and prescribed very sparingly.

Bowser the Hound Enjoys a Joke

A joke is largely point of view—
If seen by me, or seen by you.
—Old Mother Nature.

It was a long time since Bowser the Hound had had so much fun as he was having now. He sat on the bank of the Smiling Pool and watched Flip swim across. On the farther side a brown head had been swimming along. Now, with Flip about halfway across, a brown coated, chunky little fellow climbed out on the end of a log and sat there. He was a rat. There was no doubt about that. He was an old acquaintance of Bowser's. But he was a stranger to Flip.

"I wonder if he has noticed that tail," thought Bowser. "He has caught many a rat in Farmer Brown's barn, but never one with a tail like that one."

But Flip hadn't noticed that tail. He was straining every muscle to get over to that rock as soon as possible. It did occur to him that that rat was about twice as big as any rat he had ever killed. But this fact didn't bother him any. He hadn't the least doubt that he would be able to shake this rat to death, just as he had so many others. He had almost reached that rat now. Splash! The rat had dived into the water! Flip stopped swimming to look for that rat to come up again. He expected to see him swim away. But he didn't see any rat. All he saw was the widening circles in the water where the rat had dived. Flip swam ashore where he could stand and watch.

"That's queer," thought Flip. "I don't see that fellow anywhere. I wonder if he is drowned like that other rat."

Just then a brown head popped up right in the middle of the Smiling Pool. Flip blinked and blinked. Could this be the same rat, or was it another rat? He began to think that the Smiling Pool must be full of rats. He ran along the bank barking. The rat paid no attention to him, but swam over to the Big Rock and climbed out on it. This was more than Flip could stand. Once more he plunged into the water and swam straight for the Big Rock. Just as he reached it the rat dived from the other side. You should have seen Flip struggle to get around that rock! He was tired. He had done so much swimming that he was tired. Of course, it didn't take but half a minute to swim around that rock. But when he got around there no rat was in sight.

Flip swam around for a few minutes and then he swam back to join Bowser on the bank. There never was a more disgusted looking dog than Flip. He climbed upon the bank and shook himself and looked at

He was a Rat. There was no doubt about that.

Bowser. It struck him that Bowser was looking very pleased over something. "What is the joke?" demanded Flip rather crossly.

"Joke?" repeated Bowser, as if he didn't understand. "Joke?"

"Yes," replied Flip. "You seem to be chuckling over something."

"Well, it is rather amusing," replied Bowser.

"What is amusing?" Flip demanded.

"To see you try to catch Jerry Muskrat," replied Bowser.

"Who is Jerry Muskrat?" inquired Flip.

"The fellow you have been chasing all over the Smiling Pool," replied Bowser.

"I haven't been chasing one fellow; I've been chasing three. And they're all drowned!" snapped Flip.

Bowser laughed right out. "No, Flip," said he, "you have been chasing only one, and that one is Jerry Muskrat. And the water is his home. When he disappeared he simply swam under water. You never, never will catch Jerry Muskrat unless you get him out on land. And then, if you take my advice, you will leave him alone."

"Do you mean that that isn't just a common everyday rat?" asked Flip, looking very much crestfallen.

"Jerry is a Rat, but he isn't just a common barn rat," replied Bowser. "Jerry is a gentleman. Some day you'll know him better."

"What did you do with him?"
"I sold him."

Then the usually good natured child burst out in a fury of rage, stamping and kicking, and exclaimed: "Daddy, why did you sell him? Why did you? You know I wanted him."

Has the laxative in your home a family doctor's approval?

MOST of us value our health too much to purposely neglect ourselves when we are warned of constipation by bad breath, feverishness, biliousness, a headache, lack of appetite, or that weak, helpless feeling. The continuation of our trouble is more often due to the things we do rather than the things we leave undone.

Some things people do to help the bowels really weaken these organs. Only a doctor knows what things will cleanse the system without harm. That's why the laxative in your home should have a family doctor's approval.

A wonderful product now known to millions of people as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a family doctor's prescription for sluggish bowels. It never varies from the original prescription which Dr. Caldwell wrote thousands of times in his many years of practice at Monticello, Illinois. He proved it safe and reliable for women and children; thoroughly effective for the most robust men. He showed it actually corrects constipation. It is made from fresh herbs and other pure ingredients.

Since Dr. Caldwell first permitted his prescription to be put up in bottles and sold through drug stores, it has increased steadily in popularity until today it is the largest selling laxative in the world!

OF all the developments which modern science, with its genius for enriching life, has provided, there is none more fascinating than gas refrigeration — the making of ice with heat.

Gas refrigeration is like no other kind. That is because its functioning is not dependent on motors or moving parts. In a gas refrigerator there is nothing to wear out, nothing to vibrate, and — oh, pleasant thought — nothing to make a noise!

Gas refrigeration produces a dry, even cold that keeps food sweet and wholesome until it is used. And of course it makes ice cubes and frozen desserts.

Call on your gas company and see the new refrigerators. They are the newest addition to the familiar appliances through which Gas — The Better Fuel — has been making life easier, safer, fuller in your home.

SMOKE SHOP TEAM GETS CUP AT BANQUET OF CITY INDUSTRIAL LEAGUE

The final gesture of the 1929 Industrial league season was made at the Wauregan hotel, Tuesday evening, when the first annual banquet of the league was held. Nearly 150 officials of the league, members of the recreation commission, city officials and managers of the various league teams and players, were in attendance.

Seated at the head table were Mayor Lee Roy Robbins, William J. Fitzgerald, chairman of the recreation commission, Alfred E. Bliven, president of the Norwich Industrial league, Earle E. Brigham, superintendent of the playgrounds, Mrs. Alexander Pasnik, Mrs. Elizabeth F. Drew and Robert Swanton, members of the recreation commission, Shepard B. Palmer, Milo R. Waters, Herbert B. Cary, H. A. Tirrell, Dr. Clarence Thompson, Charles W. Cassidy, and Mathew Sheridan who acted as toastmaster.

President Bliven opened the ceremonies and after the singing of America and the invocation by Herbert B. Cary the meeting was turned over to Mr. Sheridan as toastmaster. During the serving of the dinner Thumm's orchestra rendered a very pleasing program of dinner music. The following was the menu:

Cream of Celery Soup
Celery Stuffed Olives
Roast Young Chicken, Dressing
Mashed White Potatoes
Buttered Beets Green Peas
Tomato and Cucumber Salad
French Dressing
Dinner Rolls
Home-made Apple Pie
Coffee Cigars

In opening the after dinner festivities President Bliven spoke briefly of the exceptional sportsmanship displayed throughout the league season by each and every player. He also gave credit for the success of the season to the players, the managers and the officials of the recreation commission. He spoke of the splendid co-operation of the board of trustees of the Norwich Free Academy, of which S. B. Palmer is chairman, in giving the league the use of the Academy field. Mr. Bliven said that during the season there had been an attendance of over 70,000 at the games. He expressed the regret of the league at the resignation of William J. Fitzgerald as chairman of the recreation commission.

In closing his talk he read a letter of appreciation from the members of the Taftville American Legion team in which they expressed their gratitude to the league for the benefit games which made their trip to New York possible.

Mayor Robbins Speaks

Toastmaster Sheridan in his opening remarks spoke of the harmony that was in evidence all through the league season and paid compliment to the manner in which the league had been conducted. He humorously touched on the thrifty characteristics of many of the people who attended the games. The first speaker introduced was Mayor Robbins.

The mayor in a brief but emphatic manner paid high tribute to the recreation commission and especially to the chairman, Mr. Fitzgerald. He said that Mr. Fitzgerald had done more than just fill his office but had more than filled it. He had fought hard for the commission and had certainly done a great work. He said that it was with extreme regret that he learned of the resignation of Mr. Fitzgerald and hoped that he would reconsider his resignation. Mayor Robbins said that if he did he was certain of reappointment as no other person in Norwich was more qualified for the position. Mayor Robbins urged that the members of the twilight league insist that Mr. Fitzgerald reconsider his resignation and accept reappointment. This last remark was greeted with a torrent of applause that lasted several minutes and left no doubt in the minds of anyone as to the esteem in which the chairman of the recreation commission was held.

Former Mayor Milo R. Waters was the next speaker, and he in turn told of the excellent work done by Mr. Fitzgerald. He told of the fight that Mr. Fitzgerald had put up to secure recreation centers for the children of Norwich and how through his untiring efforts the commission and the playground work had been brought to a high degree of efficiency. Mr. Waters in closing suggested that the commission now devote some part of their effort toward recreation for the girls of the city.

Mr. Fitzgerald, who was the next speaker, spoke feelingly of his appreciation of the kind things said about him and his work. He said that if ever a man's cup was full of joy his was. He said that he was amply repaid for his seven years of work by the present showing of the commission. He told of the early struggle in selling the recreation idea to the Norwich people and of the opposition that was met and overcome. He asked if the showing of the past season wasn't answer enough as to the success of the work. He said that he hoped his successor would carry the work even farther and have it an all-year round recreation with basketball, indoor baseball and other winter activities. He said he thought it was better to spend the 1-36 of a mill tax for recreation than it was to spend it for jails and reformatories. He concluded by expressing his thanks to the governing board of the league and hoped that the league would continue.

Presentation Of Trophy

The presentation of the league trophy to Manager Bill O'Brien of the Smoke Shop team was made by Chairman by Chairman Fitzgerald. Manager O'Brien thanked the league on behalf of the members of his team. The other prizes were distributed among the various teams.

The address of the evening was given by Henry A. Tirrell who spoke on "The Sphere and its Place in Sports." In a very interesting talk Mr. Tirrell told of how very few games did not contain some element of the sphere. He briefly told of the evolution of baseball and how it had progressed until it was one of the greatest of the world's games. He spoke of sport as a great factor in the development of fair play and the moulding of character.

Annual Report

Earle E. Brigham made his annual report which showed that $2100 had been taken in at the game and that the expenses had been about $1100. He also thanked the doctors, Dr. Agnew, Dr. Thompson and Dr. Suplicki for their services at the games. He also made mention of the fact that Lefty Dugas, one of the Dusty league players, had signed a contract with the Washington American league club. In concluding, Mr. Brigham, as a token of appreciation of the league, presented a Thermos water set to President Bliven and to James Sheridan for their work on the governing board.

Mr. Sheridan and Mr. Bliven responded briefly, expressing their deep appreciation of the gifts.

Other speakers at the banquet were Shepard B. Palmer and the various managers of the clubs. Mr. Palmer told of the willingness of the Academy trustees in allowing the league the use of the Academy diamond and promised that they could use it again next year.

The managers of the teams told of the battles that they had put up and said they would fight just as hard another year. William J. McKnight, umpire in the league, spoke briefly.

Charles Cassidy also spoke briefly complimenting the league and the recreation commission on the exceptionally fine baseball played at the campus this year.

Entertainment Features

Among the entertainment features of the banquet were two delightful solos, "Sweet Mystery of Love," and "Nobody Knows Meself as Well as Me," by Walter LaFontaine. Nicholas J. Spellman also sang two pleasing numbers, "Sweetheart of My Dreams" and "Until."

As a toastmaster Matthew Sheridan was all that could be desired and his humorous remarks with which he introduced each speaker were sparkling gems of wit.

CHILDREN CONTEST WILL OF REUBEN B. S. WASHBURN

Seven children of the late Reuben B. S. Washburn are contesting his will which has been offered for probate in the local probate court. The contest developed Tuesday morning at a hearing before Judge Nelson J. Ayling in the probate court. Mr. Washburn, who was a former president of the Edward Chappel Co., died August 7th, while visiting at Niantic.

Appearing for the seven sons and daughters was Attorney Arthur M. Brown. They are contesting the will principally on the grounds that Mr. Washburn was not mentally capable of executing a will because of the fact that he had suffered a cerebral hemorrhage some time previous to the time the will was drawn.

The three witnesses to the will testified at the hearing, after which Judge Ayling admitted the will to probate, appointed appraisers and allowed the executor and executrix to qualify. It is understood that the contestants will take an appeal to the superior court. The proponents of the will were represented by Attorney Hibberd R. Norman.

Attorney Andrew B. Davies drafted the will which was made December 19, 1927, and the witnesses were Myrtle H. Buteau, Attorney H. H. Pettis and Miss Grace E. Purvis. The widow, Annie Hill Washburn, and Thomas J. Hill, qualified as executrix and executor under the will and Harold T. Hull and Ebenezer S. DeWolfe were named appraisers.

The will contains only personal bequests, as follows: $500 each to John R. Washburn, Plymouth, Mass., Harry C. Washburn, Norwich; Thomas G. Washburn, Norwich; Margaret Tubbs, Waltham, Mass.; Edith Woodworth, New London; Elizabeth H. Hagstrom, Norwich; $100 each to Florence Seng, Hartford and Mrs. Merideth Yerrington, Locust Valley, N. Y. The remainder of the estate is left to the widow, Mrs. Annie Hill Washburn.

FLOCK OF TINY BLUE HERONS DISCOVERED IN SWAMP

Norwich bird-lovers are keenly interested in the discovery by one of them of a number of immature little blue herons in a swamp on the Hartford turnpike, coming from New London. The unusual birds are still white, have long green legs and as many as 14 were counted in the swamp by the Norwich observers. The parent birds nest in the south, so these small strangers must have wandered to their northern location in some unaccountable way. One observe claims to have counted as many as 29 of them. It is hoped that they will be guarded by a game warden, as it would be a crime to wantonly kill the little feathered visitors, whose call is so unexplainable. If they remain, it is going to be interesting to watch their plumage turn from its present pure white.

NORWICH DELEGATES AT G. A. R. CONVENTION

Miss Lola Belle Roath, asst. adjutant Sedgwick Post, No. 1, of Norwich, accompanied by her aunt, Mrs. John Irish, is in Portland Me., attending the national G. A. R. convention. Others from Sedgwick Woman's Relief corps attending are Mrs. Lydia Perkins, Mrs. Lena O'Brien and Mrs. Rose Graham. Of G. A. R. members there are Past Commander Geo. C. Crocker, John Curran and William H. Whiteman. The Connecticut party, 183 strong, arrived Sunday by the Connecticut special and are comfortably quartered at Hotel Lafayette. Over 15,000 visitors are in Portland for the big convention, crowds arriving almost hourly.

With Driving License Suspended

Among the 29 names in the weekly list of automobile drivers having their licenses suspended for one year for driving while under the influence of liquor, there was only one eastern Connecticut name which was that of George J. Parentcau of Plainfield. Other Connecticut places represented in the list were Bridgeport, Bristol, Danbury, East Haven, Greenwich, Hartford, New Britain, New Haven, Norwalk, Salisbury, Sound Beach, Stamford, Torrington, and Waterbury.

A tombstone record has no influence with the recording angel.

TO HAVE FASHION PARADE FOR NORWICH FALL OPENING

The end of the summer season is rapidly approaching. This is evidenced by the hurried preparations being made by Norwich merchants for the official fall opening which will occur Sept. 19, 20, and 21. By that time the schools will all be in full swing, vacationists will have returned from the shore and mountain resorts, and the city will have settled into the routine task of daily bread winning.

An announcement of the Norwich merchants that the fashion parade of the latest fall fashions will be held on the first night of the fall opening programme is convincing, if all else fails, that fall is here. All of the large department stores and a goodly number of the smaller shops and specialty dealers are joining this year to make the fall opening programme the biggest the city has ever known. Already a total of more than 20 entries have been made in the fashion parade. The automobile dealers readily cooperate in furnishing cars for this famous event. Automobiles will appear in the parade all the way from the higher priced model with its comfortable refinements and exquisite beauty to the more modest and moderate priced creation.

Special efforts are being made by the fall opening committee to encourage the participation of every mercantile establishment in the city in the window contest. A great deal of interest has already been shown in this phase of the programme. Grocery stores and meat markets, restaurants, automobile dealers, drug stores, mens' furnishings stores, ladies' ready-to-wear stores, department stores, hardware stores and electrical dealers, jewelers, in fact every merchant who has a window in the business section will be on his toes to create that fall atmosphere, in the minds of the people of Norwich by making the transition from the summer days that are soon to depart into the new fashion season.

Edward Frink of Stegeri's Inc. in Hartford has been asked to take charge of the judging of the windows entered in the contest. He will undoubtedly have the help of other competent local assistants drawn from sources other than mercantile.

The system used last year in rating the windows will be continued. Under this system allowances were made as follows for each of the qualities entered in the decorating of windows: light .10; arrangement .15; color .20; originality .20; selling .15; neatness .10; eye appeal .10. The judges are not allowed to converse with each other and they are required to place their value on the window on all of the above mentioned classifications. There are a total of five judges and when they return to the hotel they compare notes after which the winners are announced.

An attractive award is made in each of the following classifications: A—Hardware and electrical. B—Candy stores and restaurants. C—Shoes. D—Womens wear. E—Mens clothing and furnishings. F—Drugs and toilet goods. G—Groceries and meat markets. H—Jewelry and novelties. I—Furniture and home furnishings. J—Florists. K—General. L—Department stores. M—Auto dealers and accessories.

The committee in charge of the fall opening programme is composed of Willard P. Haugh; John Morley; Charles Jacobson; Fred Fleming; Herbert Cary; John Lyston; Max Hanover; John B. Caron; Earl Taggart; and Cyril E. Fitch.

Another meeting of the committee will be held Thursday morning at 10 o'clock to make final arrangements.

Since commitment at Haddam Meigs has made two attempts at suicide by hanging, but on both occasions has been prevented by jail officials. A week ago Meigs escaped jail and was later arrested in Norwich by Sheriff Thompson and Policeman Hill. Meigs was committed after Lieutenant Governor Ernest E. Rogers had appointed Drs. R. L. WILMER ALLISON SHOWS BRILLIANT FORM IN DEFEATING GEORGE LOTT

(By Ted Vosburgh, Associated Press Sports Writer)

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Sept. 10—(AP)—Wilmer Allison, a whirling, smashing tennis dervish from Fort Worth, Texas, shattered the hopes of George Lott for the national tennis singles championship this afternoon, following him into defeat in the third round of the 48th annual title tournament, 6-2, 6-3, 3-6, 3-6, 7-5.

It took the finest tennis Allison ever produced on the courts of the West Side stadium to upset the young Chicago internationalists who had been expected to oppose Bill Tilden in the final for the title. The dashing, impetuous Texan was not even included in the seeded list while Lott was placed second only to Tilden among the eight leading American contenders. In the national ranking Lott is No. 3 and Allison No. 5.

All the dope called for a speedy Lott victory as Allison, though victorious in the Davis cup challenge round doubles paired with Johnny Van Ryn, has not been playing up to form in the singles.

Tilden Has Anxious Moments

The cherished hopes of Big Bill Tilden for his seventh national singles crown trembled in the balance for a few dramatic moments under the spirited onslaught of 19-year-old Frank Shields, former national junior champion in another third round match.

In the end Tilden's fighting heart and amazing stamina carried him to victory by scores of 2-6, 6-1, 14-12, 6-4. Shields, weary and limping from a painful fall, was hardly able to stand at the end of the two-hour struggle while the 36-year-old Tilden was comparatively fresh.

Among the day's other surprises were the elimination of Berkeley Bell, national intercollegiate champion and thirteenth ranking player, at the hands of Ed Feibleman, former Harvard star, 2-6, 6-1, 6-4, 4-6, 6-2; the defeat of John Olliff, English indoor champion, by Johnny Millen, New York youngster, 6-0, 9-7, 7-3; the downfall of another seeded Englishman, Edward Avory, in his match with Elmer Griffin, of New York, 2-6, 8-6, 6-1, 6-4; and the difficulties of "Bunny" Austin, top seeded English entrant in winning from Harold MacGuffin, Philadelphia, at 6-2, 6-8, 2-6, 6-2, 6-3, despite the persistent activities of a foot-fault judge.

The only third round match not concluded was that between Arnold Jones, Providence, R. I., and Dr. Carl Fischer, Philadelphia. This was called on account of rain with the score at three-all in the fifth set and will be finished tomorrow. The program of stadium matches is:

1 p. m.—Tamo Abe, Japan, vs. John Vandyn, East Orange, N. J.

2 p. m.—Wilmer Allison, Fort Worth Texas, vs. Ed Feibleman, New York.

3 p. m.—Richard N. Williams, 2nd., Phila., vs. winner of Jones-Fischer match.

4 p. m.—Francis T. Hunter, New Rochelle, N. Y., vs. Wilbur F. Coen, Jr., Kas. City.

BOBBY ANDREW, PRO AT NEW HAVEN CLUB, DIES

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 10—(AP)—Bobby Andrew, professional golfer at New Haven Country club, died at his home in Whitneyville, today of blood poisoning. He was 56 years old.

Born in Prestwick, Scotland, the home of golf, "Bobby" Andrew, as he was known, achieved a reputation on the links at an early age, his reputation spreading through the British Isles and Europe. He once held the St. Nicholas course record, with a 69.

He set a record for the Prestwick course, famous Scotch schooling grounds for internationally known golfers, by playing more than 18 holes in 63 strokes.

Jerome D. Travers, one time American golf champion, who had played with "Bobby" in Scotland, brought him to the New Haven Country club.

"Bobby" played such noted golfers as Harry Vardon, Chick Evans, Travis and James Hobb. He won many trophies in Scotland, the first having been the Hillhouse cup, and among them was the Arrol cup, which he captured five times.

In Scotch-English matches, he shared with J. Gordon Simpson the honor of being the only representative of either country who never caused his side to lose a match. In 1926, he almost won the Scottish amateur golf championship, but was defeated, through what was described by experts as "only ill luck".

Andrew succeeded Robert D. Pryde, now pro at Racebrook, at the New Haven club, where he soon won the course record, with a 67.

He is survived by his widow, a son, James, who is professional at Waterbury Country club and three daughters, Mrs. Nellie Newman, Margaret and Nancy Andrew, all of New Haven.

Funeral services will be held Thursday from his home.

BABE RUTH SMASHES TWO HOMERS AS YANKS SPLIT

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—(AP)— The Yankees got an even break against the Tigers here today by a ninth inning rally which netted four runs and a 10 to 9 decision. Babe Ruth's forty-fourth home run with two on base tied the score, paving the way for the winning marker a moment later. The Babe had hit his forty-third in the opening game, which Detroit won by 8 to 4. The Detroit victory was made possible by a seven-run assault upon Pennock and Rhodes in the first three rounds.

Lou Gehrig hit his 31st homer in the nightcap, and Dale Alexander got his 23rd. Other home run hitters were Whitehill and Graham, the Detroit pitchers, and Gehringer.

ATHLETICS NOW NEED TO WIN BUT SIX GAMES

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 10.—(AP) — Although rain broke up proceedings at Shibe park here today after the Athletics had nosed out the Indians by a 6 to 5 in the first game of a double-header, the pennant-bound Macks stepped three notches nearer mathematical assurance of their first pennant in fifteen years. The Yankees got only an even break against the Tigers in New York. This combination of circumstances reduced the needs of the Athletics from nine victories to six, as the game with Cleveland cannot be played off and is just as valuable to Mr. Mack as a game won.

George Earnshaw started out after his twenty-first victory, but the Indians pounded him from the box in the seventh. Shores and Gommel followed, with the knuckle ball veteran getting credit for two rallies in the eighth and the ninth which pulled the game from Weeley Ferrell's grasp.

Jimmy Foxx hit his 32nd home run of the season. Averill and Hodapp contributed homers to the Cleveland cause.

The second game was halted in the fourth with the Macks ahead by 2 to 1. If the race was close, it could be played off on Monday, September 23, but since the A's will win in a walk, it was decided not to play it off.

GILDA GRAY CAPTURES FEATURE G. C. RACE

AURORA, Ill., Sept. 10—(AP)—Whipping finishes marked three of the four races on the Grand Circuit harness horse card offered here today. Gilda Gray, a rangy mare owned by the McDonald stable of Indianapolis, won the feature race of the day, the 2:15 pace, defeating in the deciding heat, Labrador, one of the stars owned by E. J. Baker of St. Charles.

Gilda Gray's two winning heats were in 2:02 3-4.

Didja have a good time at the baseball banquet?

Sure I did, but I sure had a terrible time trying to drag the meat off the chicken without getting the darned thing in my lap. And I guess I wasn't the only one either.

Didja ever put your fork in a half a broiled chicken and try to pry loose a forkful of meat and have the said carcass suddenly shoot halfway across the table? Of course you have, whether you admit it or not.

And that salad with the French dressing. I know now why they call it French dressing—it's because these's so little of it. Well, anyway, it was a good banquet after you got that chicken thrown for a loss.

As I was coming out I heard one feller say to another "What didja have at the banquet?" The other feller says, "Baloney and applesauce". I wonder what that guy meant, I didn't see or eat any.

But all joking aside, it was one nice time and if you fans had seen those ball players making base hits and put outs with the chicken you'd have said the same thing.

And say, you wouldn't have known those boys when they were all dressed up. I tell you they was a nice bunch of boys and every one as clean cut as a diamond.

I should think Billy Fitz would be all puffed up over the nice things that were said about him. But believe me, Billy deserved every bit of praise that was given him and then some.

He sure has given the younger generation of Norwich an outlook on life that they never had before. He has stimulated interest in good clean recreation and in so doing has provided plenty of amusement for the older generation.

His has been a work well done and the announcement of his resignation is indeed received with regret. It was the unanimous desire last night that he reconsider.

Here's hoping you do, Billy.

PAUL WANER'S TRIPLE WINS FOR PIRATES IN 9TH

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 10.—(AP)—Paul Waner's triple with a recruit named Moslof and the other Waner on base in the ninth inning here today gave Pittsburgh a 7 to 6 victory over Brooklyn in the last game the two teams will play against each other this year. The Buccaneers won the season's series, thirteen games to nine.

The clash today was reeled off as a pitchers' battle between Watson Clark and Jess Petty for seven innings, but both weakened and heavy hitting was in order the rest of the way.

WORLD SERIES TO OPEN TUESDAY OCT. 8 ON NAT'L LEAGUE GROUNDS

By Charles W. Dunkley
Associated Press Sports Writer

CHICAGO, Sept. 10—(AP)—The world series of 1929 will open in the park of the club winning the National league pennant—undoubtedly Wrigley field, the home of the Chicago Cubs, on Tuesday, October 8.

This decision was reached today at a conference presided over by Kenesaw Mountain Landis, baseball commissioner.

May Extend To Oct. 17.

Based on the assumption that the Cubs and the Philadelphia Athletics will win the National and American league flags, respectively, this schedule for the world series games was drafted:

October 8—At Chicago.
October 9—At Chicago.
October 10—Traveling.
October 11—At Philadelphia.
October 12—At Philadelphia.
October 13—Open date (Sunday).
October 14—At Philadelphia.
October 15—Traveling.
October 16—At Chicago.
October 17—At Chicago.

In addition to the dates, prices of admission, eligibility of players, other details were settled at the meeting. Those in attendance were Ernest S. Barnard, president of the American league; John A. Heydler, president of the National league; William Wrigley, Jr., owner of the Cubs; William L. Veeck, president of the Bruins; Thomas Shibe, president of the Athletics, and Robert Schroeder, secretary of the Philadelphia club.

Five Clubs Represented.

Representatives of five other clubs—the New York Giants and Pittsburgh Pirates of the National league; and New York, Cleveland and St. Louis, in the American, which teams were regarded as having a mathematical chance of winning the pennant in their respective leagues, were invited to attend, but failed to show up.

It was agreed to charge $6.60 for boxes and $5.50 for grandstand seats, all of which will be reserved. Bleacher seats will be sold at $1, with no tax. These prices will prevail at both Chicago and Philadelphia. In addition any standing room in the grandstand at Wrigley field will be sold at $3.

The open date on the schedule, October 13, comes because of the law prohibiting Sunday baseball in Pennsylvania.

Games Start at 1.30

All games, both at Shibe park in Philadelphia, and Wrigley field, will start at 1.30 p. m. In the event of rain causing a postponement, the game will be played the following day, regardless of the schedule.

With these details ironed out, Commissioner Landis passed on the eligibility of the players, naming 25 for the Cubs, and a like number of the Athletics.

All that remains is the assigning of the umpires by the presidents of the American and National leagues, each of whom will name two men.

BROWNS TAKE BOTH GAMES FROM RED SOX

BOSTON, Sept. 10—(AP)—The St. Louis Browns took both ends of a doubleheader from the Boston Red Sox here today, 6-1 and 1-0, behind the air-tight pitching of Collins and Coffman.

Collins held the Red Sox to four hits in the first game, forcing in their only run with a pass in the ninth inning. His mates fell on Russell for four runs in the opening frame and Ray Dobens, former Holy Cross star, finished.

Russell attempted a comeback in the second game and held the Browns to six hits and a single run, scored on successive errors by Rhyne and Regan, Sox infielders. Those fielding lapses cost Russell the game for Coffman scattered Boston's six hits to gain a shut-out.

HELEN HICKS HOLDS WIDE LEAD IN WESTERN TOURNEY

CHICAGO, Sept. 10—(AP)—Burning up the Flosshoor Country club course with her second par-breaking 78 in two days, 18-year old Helen Hicks, of Inwood, Long Island, N. Y., gained a strangle hold on the Derby, a 72-hole medal play championship for women, today.

Her two spectacular rounds on the par 80 course gave her a 10-stroke margin over her closest rival, Mrs. Lee Mida, of Chicago, whose total for the first 36 holes is 166. And for a player of Miss Hicks' caliber such a lead should be sufficient for an easy romp to the title even though 36 holes remain.

A cold, raw, cross wind swept over the course today, handicapping all the players and scores were unusually high. Mrs. Dorothy Kotz Pardue, of Hibbing, Minn., who was second with an 82 yesterday, required 90 strokes today and dropped into a tie for fourth place with Mrs. Melvin Jones, of Chicago, each having 172 totals. Maureen Orcutt, of White Beeches, N. Y., ranked third with a 171 total although she scored a mediocre 37 today. Three were tied at 173—Helen MacMorran, of Chicago, Mrs. Gregg Lifur, of Los Angeles and Frances Hadfield, of Milwaukee, Virginia Van Wie, Chicago's first ranking star, was far out of the championship picture with 176 as were Mrs. Leo Federman, of New York, with 178, and Gertrude Boothby, of Rochester, Minn., whose total is 179.

GIANTS LOSE, FAREWELL APPEARANCE IN CINCY

CINCINNATI, Sept. 10.—(AP)— New York lost the last game it will play in Cincinnati this year by 7 to 5 here today. The Giants could do little with Jakie May and got but three hits in the six innings that the portly southpaw was on the mound. He wrenched his throwing arm in the early part of the game but pitched a couple of innings after that only to give way to Pete Donohue.

CUBS WILL TELL ALL ABOUT TICKETS THURSDAY

CHICAGO, Sept. 10—(AP)—So convinced is William L. Veeck, president of the Chicago Cubs, that Joe McCarthy's players will win the National league pennant race that he decided tonight to issue a bulletin Thursday, giving full details of the sale of tickets for the world series games to be played at Wrigley field.

President Veeck faces the problem of squeezing 400,000 fans into the park which will have a seating capacity of less than 47,000.

Veeck will ask the city council tomorrow for permission to close one-half of a street adjacent to the park so 8,000 additional bleacher seats may be erected. He said William Wrigley, Jr., owner of the Cubs, wishes to erect the additional seats, despite the fact that it will involve a loss of several thousand dollars to his personal bank roll, merely to accommodate the loyal Cub fans.

The bleacher seats will sell for $1 apiece, but will cost Owner Wrigley $4 to $5 to build each one.

Prosecutor Henry P. Hammacher stated that in the accident occurring on a straight-a-way there was little criminal liability and only matters for a civil suit.

In the case of State vs. William M. Kelleher. Attorney B. H. Hewitt asked for two weeks' continuance. Continued to Sept. 24th.

Joseph Patti, 18, of Pawcatuck, pleaded guilty to the operation of an automobile without a driver's license. Dr. James H. Weeks has appointed guardian, ad litem. Patti was fined $10 and costs.

William Sickenwer, 59 Truman street, New London, charged with reckless driving, whose case was investigated by Officer Whitmarsh with little evidence obtainable, also had an absolute nolle returned.

Charged With Gaming

A number of Stonington men were arraigned individually, each charged with gaming on Sunday with cards and dice on the old steamboat wharf in Stonington. The party, surrounding an iron tank on which was spread a table cloth, arrested by a raiding party of New Haven railroad, Stonington town and Connecticut state police and taken to Stonington lockup.

McColl, 19 Liberty street, Pawcatuck. A physician is to be agreed upon by Attorneys Hammacher for the wife and Dunn for the defendant; after a lengthy hearing the case continued one week.

Delay In Cable Delivery

The first of the uprights in the new ornamental electric light poles was secured to the recently installed bases on Broad street Tuesday morning by workmen in the employ of the Narragansett Electric Lighting Co., of Providence. Employes of the South County Public Service company of Westerly are to install the 15-inch globes which will contain 1,000 candle-power lights. The installation of the iron poles will do away with the unsightly wooden ones and all overhead wiring will be taken down when the new equipment is placed in use. The secondary cables connecting the new pole bases through the conduits have nearly all been drawn in and the work of making the pole connections is in progress. Some delay has been caused by the late delivery of the main service line cable and when this is hooked up with the secondary cables the lights will be turned on.

TENDENCY OF MARKET WAS DOWNWARD NOTWITHSTANDING BULLISH ASSAULT

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—(AP)—A pronounced tendency to shorten speculative sail was evident in the stock market today. Although aggressive bullish operations in a few rather mercurial issues sent them higher, the general tendency was emphatically downward, scores of leading stocks ending the day 2 to 12 points lower. The pace of trading slackened considerably, little more than 4,500,000 shares changing hands.

An unexpected pinch in the call money market, carrying the rate up to 10 per cent, announcement of a drop of nearly 430,000 tons in U. S. Steel's unfilled tonnage during August, private advices to Wall street from Washington that the rapid increases in brokers loans are being viewed with some concern in administration circles, renewed uneasiness over the Bank of England's discount rate with further takings of gold from London, and commission house advices to lighten commitments, were among factor tending to unsettle the market.

The 10 per cent rate for call loans resulted from withdrawals of about $40,000,000, presumably to pay off federal reserve borrowings, and for commercial requirements in the interior. Bankers felt, however, that the 10 per cent rate would result in an influx of funds tomorrow, and that the situation may be momentarily eased as funds pile up at this center against mid month settlements. But with announcement that the Commercial National bank is receiving $1,000,000 in gold from London, and reports that of Transvaal gold offered in the London market today, more than half, or approximately $2,500,000 was taken from New York, to see how a higher discount rate at London could much longer be postponed, and it is taken for granted that it would cause withdrawal of funds from New York.

There is a growing feeling in Wall street that the huge total of brokerage loans had best be reduced, moderately at least, with the increasing autumn commercial requirements and congress about to convene, and likely to order an investigation of credit and speculation. It is hoped, and generally believed, however, that liquidation can be accomplished in an orderly manner, particularly with the stabilizing influences of the large group of powerful investment trust exerting an influence over the market.

The drop of nearly 430,000 tons in U. S. Steel's unfilled tonnage was much larger than had been anticipated, most estimates having placed the decline under 300,000 tons. This decline carried the corporations backlog of unfilled orders close to the level of a year ago. It is felt that definite trends as to the autumn and early winter steel demand will not become apparent until October. An important announcement was made by Bethlehem Steel after the close, in the form of the granting of rights, worth about $4.25 per share on today's closing quotation, to purchase 800,000 shares of stock at $100, most of the proceeds to be used to retire part of the company's funded debt.

The utilities were particularly hard hit by the selling, American Water Works dropping more than 12 points, and such issues as North American, Consolidated Gas and Public Service of New Jersey losing from about 4 to 6 points. Columbia Gas, however, was firm.

U. S. Steel dropped about 5 points on the unfilled tonnage report, and closed at 238 1-2, off 4 1-2. General Electric and Westinghouse Manufacturing lost about 11 and 12 points, respectively. Du Pont, Commercial Solvents, Union Carbide, Packard, Johns Manville, and Norfolk and Western 8 to 10; U. S. Industrial Alcohol, and Air Reduction 6 or 7; and such issues as American Telephone, American Can, Atchison, Eastman Kodak, Anaconda, International Telephone, Montgomery Ward, New York Central, and Pennsylvania, from 3 to 5.

Among the few issues to be hurled higher, mostly those with a small floating supply, were Case Threshing, making an extreme gain of 25 points, American Machine and Foundry, about 10, all to record levels. Republic Iron and Steel sold up about 6 points to a new peak on optimistic predictions of the results of its new welding process and Kraft Phoenix and Fleischmann reached to tops.

A conspicuous strong spot was Standard of New Jersey, which mounted about 3 points to a new high record price at 75, despite announcement of a cut of one cent a gallon in gasoline prices by Standard of New York. Bullish enthusiasm over New Jersey has arisen from the prospects for its new hydrogenat on gasoline manufacturing process, and its wide range of products in addition to gasoline.

In the commodities, cotton tumbled about $2 a bale, evidently in disappointed selling over the failure of yesterday's crop report to create a sustained demand. Grains were easy, wheat losing 1-2 a cent a bushel or more on bearish Kansas crop estimates, and corn also sagging fractionally.

Foreign exchanges showed an improved tone, Sterling rallying slightly to $4.84 3-4.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, Sept. 10—(AP)—Dwindling of transatlantic demand for breadstuffs went to almost a hunger-strike basis today, and wheat prices here suffered a new downturn, how much longer European abstinence from buying will continue is becoming a prize puzzle but resultant setbacks in quotations are limited owing to apparent likelihood that some improvement of export call for wheat from North America would of necessity appear to be now not far off. The United States government crop estimate this evening as to wheat was slightly in excess of trade expectation, whereas the corn forecast showed the biggest curtailment ever met with in August barring only two other instances.

Closing prices on wheat today were unsettled 1-2c to 3-4c under yesterday's finish. Corn closed 3-8c off to 1-8c up, and oats unchanged to 3-8c with provisions varying from 7c decline to an equal advance.

At first, the wheat market today showed itself responsive to rain reports from Argentina, but later advices said moisture was inconsequential where most needed. The course of prices then showed dependence mostly on evident dearth of export business. By far the bulk of transactions seemed to be in the nature of evening up of accounts so as to prepare for the government crop report from Washington due after the day's trading was ended. Meanwhile some transient rallying power developed owing more or less to the fact that a prominent Chicago expert telegraphed from Canada reiterating an estimate of 400,000,000 bushels, 1929 yield of wheat in the prairie provinces, an amount decidedly under latest previous figures from Canadian crop authorities.

Advices at hand indicated that for at least the time being Europe is obtaining sufficient supplies because of liberal offerings of wheat from Argentina at relatively cheap prices, export demand at the North American seaboard today was described as "very slow," with practically no interest whatever shown regarding domestic hard winter wheat, and with Canadian exporters also admitting that over-seas trade was virtually at a halt. Furthermore, domestic receipts of wheat continued fairly liberal although arrivals at winter crop terminals were decidedly smaller than was the case a year ago.

Frost reports from Iowa and Nebraska with more frost looked for gave firmness to the corn market.

Tonight northwest gave firmness to the corn market. No serious damage, however, by last night's frost was asserted. Oats trade was slow.

Provisions were steadied by indications that foreign interests were becoming interested on the buying side.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—(AP)— The bond market was in an unsettled state today and with the exception of the convertibles, which slumped one to 5 points on the weakness of stocks, prices showed few important changes.

United States government treasuries and liberties made small declines, reaching about the levels that prevailed before the small improvement which followed announcement of the new treasury financing. Advances in any group on the current bond market are of short duration and gains on two successive days are almost invariably followed by reactions that erase them. Nevertheless, some dealers report the development of a better undertone for fixed-charge obligations so that customers are making inquiry for bonds of the highest grades.

Foreign issues remain almost entirely stagnant. Wall street received word today that the city of Dresden was coming into the market soon with a $30,000,000 loan which would bear an 8 per cent coupon and be priced a few points below par. This was received as a good illustration of the market's present condition, which has discouraged foreign financing here. Several sizeable issues in that field are understood to be ready for flotation when the chances for a favorable reception on terms reasonably favorable to the borrower improve.

Another item in the day's new was Bethlehem Steel Corporation's decision to retire its 30-year sinking fund 6 per cent mortgage bonds, series A, outstanding to the extent of $50,166,000, on February 1 next at 105 and interest. The bonds today moved up 1-4 to their call price.

Building construction in 15 of the largest cities in the country showed a decided slump during August from the same month last year. The figures as reported by S. W. Straus & Co., were: August 1929, $114,838,387; August 1928, $160,093,416. Boston, Baltimore, San Francisco and Newark, N. J., showed gains. Figures for New York city were 42 per cent lower than those for August 1928.

William G. Durant, automobile manufacturer, announced today the formation of the American Cotton Picker Corp., which will manufacture a machine, which was demonstrated here in connection with the announcement, to pick cotton. The financial structure and directorate of the company will be announced later. Mr. Durant estimated that the machine would save the south more than $100,000,000 annually. C. O. Mosher, president of American Cotton Growers Exchange, said that the machine picks cleaner than hand pickers, and that the quality of cotton picked by it is better than that picked by hand.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

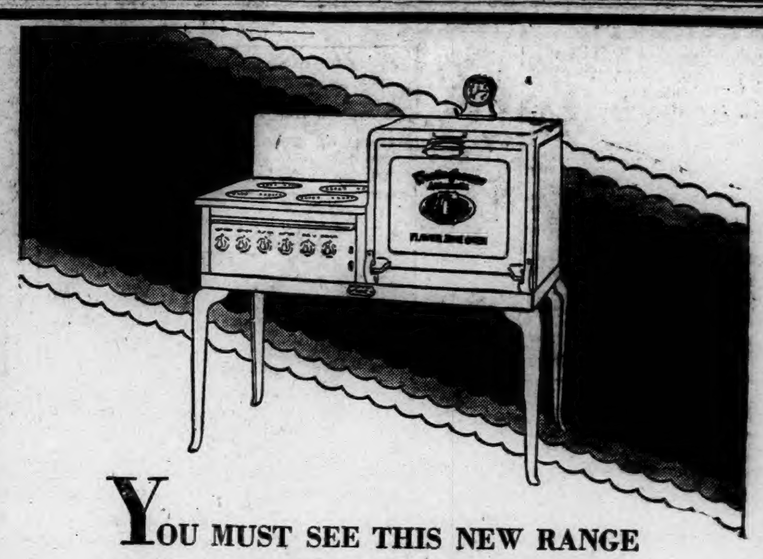
Breed Theatre

The Grand Canal of Venice, one of the most famous streets in the world which isn't a street at all, was reproduced faithfully on the First National lot when "Love and the Devil," shown today and Thursday at the Breed theatre with Milton Sills starred, was filmed. This scene is perhaps the high spot in an unusually elaborate production.

The story takes Sills as an English baron, titled explorer and European "man about town," into Africa, England and Venice, giving him the kind of role that his constantly growing ranks of admirers will probably think his very greatest.

A mad automobile ride across roads imperilled by storm and flood provides a thrilling sequence in "Voice of the Storm," FBO's melodrama of the telephone service which is the added feature on the program at the Breed theatre for today and Thursday.

The scenes were filmed during an actual storm near Hollywood and the danger to the three occupants of the machine—Martha Sleeper, Karl Dane and Hugh Allan—was as real as it appears on the screen.



YOU MUST SEE THIS NEW RANGE THAT "GETS MEALS" ALL BY ITSELF

Can you imagine anything more desirable than to be able to walk out of your kitchen in the early morning and return at night to find a deliciously cooked dinner waiting to be served?

That's the new freedom you will enjoy with a Westinghouse Electric Range. While you're away, the Westinghouse "Flavor Zone" oven does everything you would do. It automatically turns on the heat when cooking should start. It browns to perfection, turns off the current at the right moment, and finishes cooking by retained heat.

A CLUB PROPRIETOR PAYS FOR BOOZE AND GAMBLING

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 10—Abalon Khoury, one of the proprietors of the Oriental club, 12 Methodist street, was in the police court this morning charged with conducting a gaming house and with violation of the liquor law. He pleaded guilty and was fined $200 and costs on the first count and on the second count a fine of $100 and costs was meted out. Albert Sandlin, Louis E. Lawson, Francis L. Thomas, Price Kelley, Fred Shaia and Thomas Duffy, charged with frequenting, escaped punishment, for their cases were nolled. The club, which had occupied the Methodist street building but a comparatively short time having removed there from Church street, was raided early Sunday morning. Three officers formed the raiding squad and they seized a considerable quantity of liquor and home brew beer and about a dozen packages of playing cards.

Fined For Wild Ride.

Peter Mros, 111 North Bank street, charged with driving while under the influence of liquor, pleaded guilty and was fined $100 and costs.

Judge Wanted More Time.

The continued case of Clarence W. Thompson and Richard C. Davidson was again continued. They are charged with violation of the city's building code in starting the construction of a pier for the purpose of using it for the sale of gasoline to boat owners on waterfront property of Thompson, on Pequot avenue, opposite Keeney lane, without permission for the work having been granted by the building inspector. The case came up from adjournment yesterday when all testimony was concluded. The latest continuance is until tomorrow when, it is expected, Judge Daniel M. Cronin will render a decision. The continuance today was for the purpose of Judge Cronin being given additional opportunity to decide a point of law, whether Thompson was within his rights to order the work started before he had received a permit, although he had filed his application with Building Inspector William Gunn.

Fine Remitted.

Robert C. Robbins, 23 Marsh street, Wethersfield, charged with speeding, was fined $10 and costs, but the fine was ordered remitted. Robbins was arrested last night on Broad street when he drove at a speed of 40 miles an hour until held up by Motorcycle Officer Elwood Bailey.

Five cases of intoxication were tried. Three of the men, who were arrested on the municipal pier were fined $5 and costs each. In the other cases judgment was suspended.

ELECTION DISAPPOINTS VOTERS AND CANDIDATES

Yesterday's election was a big disappointment, not only to the candidates who sought office, but to the voters as well. Hundreds of voters went to the polls anticipating that at least one of the candidates for the office of member of council would be elected, or rather obtain the necessary majority of the votes cast that would assure election of that candidate. The voters, many of them making their way through a real downpour, went to the polls and cast their vote, only to find that not a single candidate had obtained a majority vote and for that reason all of the candidates must run again. The candidates, themselves, were disappointed for they entertained the same opinion as did the voters, that at least one of their number would receive a majority vote and had this been the case, but four instead of six candidates would seek office when the next election is held, a week from next Monday.

Bathers at Ocean beach are nearly as numerous as they were during the final days of the season there, for the water is of a temperature much warmer than has heretofore prevailed. Today, hundreds of men and women take advantage of the excellent water conditions and the superb air-temperature. Throughout the month and into October, bathing there will be at its best.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Broadway Theatre.

Hey! hey! the kick-off in the most sizzling football game ever screened follows the referee's whistle at the Broadway tomorrow at the initial showing of "College Love," the first real picture of real college life that has ever been attempted on the talking screen. Fun, fast and furious, with all the intimate sidelights on collegiate co-ed life, cram the picture with campus kisses, bonfires, torchlight parades, roadhouse parties, ukes, tender romance, class jealousy and college loyalty—everything that goes to make up college life, with the daily grind at the books left out, is included in this peppy, jazzy, snappy all-talking picture of life at Caldwell College. The University of California Glee club is featured throughout the picture in their delightful harmonies, and the football game, which is claimed by coaches everywhere as the hottest ever, was filmed in the famous Bowl of Roses, the Caldwell boys having as their opponents the invincible Trojans, the heroes of the University of Southern California. In this game, screen technique was thrown to the winds, and both teams played hard, rugged football, literally a "game for blood." Excitement runs high throughout, and local athletes and their "girl friends" are due for a big treat in this unusual picture. George Lewis is starred, with Dorothy Gulliver, Eddie Phillips, Hayden Stevenson and Churchill Ross in the supporting cast. On the same bill with "College Love" are featured the rotund Pat West and His Middies, Jim and Betty Morgan, vaudeville favorites, and Dave Bernie and his big act "Here Comes the Show Boat," recently featured at the Roxy, New York. The latest Fox movietone news, with timely shots from the headlines completes the program. In preparation for Sunday is another timely all-talking picture, "Fast Company," starring Jack Oakie, the lovable "wise-cracker" of Close Harmony, together with his side-kick Skeets Gallagher and Evelyn Brent, to say nothing of the New York Yankees, who furnish the background and plenty of action in "Fast Company." The film was screened from Ring Lardner's famous story "Hurry Kane," and as Mr. Lardner furnished the dialogue for the entire production, audiences are assured of a red-hot picture with snappy and up-to-the-minute dialogue

ESSEX THE CHALLENGER first prize for reliability

The Grand Prize for reliability in the 15-day running of the famous "Tour de France" was awarded to Essex the Challenger. The two Essex entries finished the race without a single penalty—the only cars with perfect scores—winning by a great margin over the strong field of high-priced American and European cars. . . . ¶ Not only the Grand Prize, but the Ansaldo Cup, for quick getaway; the Lyonnais Cup, the Pyrenees Cup, the Atlantic Cup, the Cup of Brittany, the Cup of Normandy and the Cup of the North were also taken by Essex the Challenger.

Performs Like a Costly Car Because Built Like a Costly Car

Essex the Challenger looks and acts like a costly car because it is built like a costly car. Its enormous success has inspired others to claim qualities "like Essex". Yet everything about it—appearance, performance, comfort and luxurious smoothness—mark it apart and altogether different.

To be like Essex without building like Essex is a goal no car has found possible. More than 200,000 owners know the outright facts. You can know them too in 30 minutes behind the wheel.

You can only find comparison for Essex qualities among costly cars, because in design and construction it stands with the practice of the fine car field.

All These "Extras" at No Extra Cost

Its good size and impressive appearance appeal to those who want comfort, distinction and good looks. Its completeness in the things which contribute to costlier car advantages, is outstanding. Radiator shutters—side lamps—chromium plated bright work—four hydraulic shock absorbers—adult size roominess and adjustable seats are details only costlier cars have provided.

Wide Choice of Color at no extra cost

$695 and up · at factory

Only a few dollars more per month than the lowest-priced cars on the market, to own and enjoy this fine and beautiful "Six."

Your present car will probably cover the entire first payment.

APPLICATIONS FROM 619 WHO WANT TO BE MADE VOTERS IN NORWICH

When the time limit closed Tuesday, the registrars of voters, Tyler D. Guy and Joseph B. Downes, had received 619 applications from those who desire to become voters for the first time in the town of Norwich. This is 165 less than in 1927, when the total was 784, but it will be recalled that that was a presidential year and unusual efforts were put forth by the workers in both political parties to round up every available prospect and see that the name got on the to-be-made list. This is what is called an off year and there has been no such effort to swell the to-be-made list

The total this year is made up of 343 men and 276 women as compared with 401 men and 383 women in 1927. Those who have put in their applications must now appear before the board of registration consisting of the selectmen, the town clerk, and the registrars of voters, in order to be made full-fledged electors. This is the necessary step to get their names regularly enrolled on the voting list in the district in which they live. The sessions of the board of registration are to be held in the court house building on two Saturdays of this month, Sept. 21 and Sept. 28, from 9 a. m., to 8 p. m., standard time.

The following shows the applications received in the six districts of the town this year and two years ago:

HANOVER CONCERT WAS NOTABLE MUSICAL EVENT

Very hearty and appreciative applause greeted Dr. Alwin M. Pappenheimer and his orchestra at the parish house at Hanover, Monday evening, when a concert of chamber music was most delightfully rendered. The artists who provided this rare treat for Hanover come from New York, but are spending the summer in the neighboring town of Scotland. It was an occasion long to be remembered by all, who love real music by skillful musicians, who are Alwin M. Pappenheimer, Jr., first violin; Frieda Clarke, second violin; Dr. Alwin M. Pappenheimer, viola; Percy Such, cello; Dr. Hans Clarke, clarinet; Beatrice Pappenheimer, piano.

The program, which was of excellent quality, was as follows:

Quartette, Op. 96 (Dvorak). 1. Allegro ma non troppo. 2. Lento. 3. Molto vivace. 4. Vivace ma non troppo.

Concerto for clarinet and piano (Handel). 1. Grave. 2. Allegro. 3. Sarabande. 4. Allegro.

Violincello solo.

Quintette for clarinet and strings, No. IX (Mozart). 1. Allegretto. 2. Larghetto. 3. Menuetto. 4. Tema con variazioni.

The arrangements for this unusual evening of music were made by the Misses Caroline and Jennie Gallup, as chairman and assistant chairman of the committee in charge of this quarter of work under the Ladies' guild. It proved to be one of the very best entertainments ever given in the parish house.

At Poquetanuck Church.

The beautiful gladioli used in the floral decorations at St. James' church, at Poquetanuck, on Sunday, were given by the Misses Mabel and Edna Day.

The opening organ voluntaries at the services, played in an accomplished manner by Miss Olive E. McKelvey, the organist, were "Hope (La Speranza)," Rossini and "I Waited for the Lord," Mendelssohn.

The exterior of the church building, painted through the efforts of the Womans' guild, presents a very attractive appearance.

ATTEMPTING TO DISCOVER BANKER WAGGONER'S AIDS

Authorities Discredit Waggoner Statement That He Carried Out His $500,000 Manipulation Alone—Postal Inspectors Will Endeavor to Bring the Banker Back to New York—Several Subpoenas Have Been Issued For Other Persons Suspected of Having Aided Waggoner.

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—(AP)—U. S. Attorney Charles H. Tuttle said today that the grand jury investigation of the scheme used by Charles D. Waggoner in defrauding six New York banks of $500,000, will continue, while postal inspectors attempt to bring Waggoner here from Newcastle, Wyo., on a warrant.

The warrant has been forwarded to Preston MacAvoy, U. S. attorney at Cheyenne, Wyo., who has been instructed to arrest Waggoner on the federal charge at Newcastle, where he is held by local police.

Despite Waggoner's statement that he carried out his manipulations alone, the grand jury is attempting to discover who aided him in the fraud, Tuttle said, as "there is no doubt that he had accomplices."

Several subpoenas were issued by the district attorney's office today, some of them described as for persons who "either wittingly or unwittingly" aided Waggoner.

C. E. Downtain, cashier of the Bank of Telluride, Colo., the institution of which Waggoner is president; Frances Carlson, 18, a clerk in the Telluride bank; Margaret Jones, a niece of Waggoner's, and Grant McFerson, Colorado state banking commissioner, are among those subpoenaed and are expected to appear before the grand jury next Monday.

WAGGONER SAYS THAT HE ALONE IS RESPONSIBLE

NEW CASTLE, Wyo. Sept. 11.—(AP)—C. D. Waggoner, the small town banker who jolted financial powers in New York with execution of his fraudulent scheme to get half a million dollars to protect depositors of his tottering bank in Telluride, Colo., expressed confidence today that he had accomplished his purpose and announced he was ready to face criminal charges, growing out of the transaction.

Held in jail here after his arrest last night, Waggoner freely admitted victimizing the New York banks.

The swindle he perpetrated, he declared, had placed at the disposal of the Bank of Telluride sufficient credit so that if the money were properly handled none of his depositors would lose any money in the crash of the institution.

The Bank of Telluride is in the hands of the Colorado state banking commissioner, having been closed several days ago when Waggoner's manipulations came to light.

Waggoner had just $400 in his possession when he was arrested at a tourist park here after he had registered under the name of H. M. Burnett of Minturn, Colo.

He insisted that he alone was responsible for the deal by which he obtained $500,000 from six New York banks through forged telegrams sent from Denver and purporting to be from six different banks in that city.

The banker refused to reveal who actually filed the fake telegrams which he admitted having prepared in a code used by bankers. Detectives in Denver said five or six persons were implicated in the delivery of the telegrams to Western Union offices in Denver for dispatch to New York. Among them were said to be three women.

With a federal warrant from New York en route by air mail, Waggoner waited in the jail here to begin a journey either to New York or Denver in custody of federal authorities. He indicated that his removal to New York may be questioned on the ground that the offense with which he was charged might legally be determined to have been committed in Denver, whence the telegrams were sent August 30 directing transfer of $500,000 to credit of the Bank of Telluride in the Chase National bank in New York.

Waggoner said today he rested last night following his arrest better than he had for weeks. Prior to the transaction he worried because assets of the Telluride bank had decreased from $1,750,000 to less than $500,000. He said a crash was inevitable and that he took "the only possible method" to protect his depositors. He showed little sympathy for the New York banks he victimized.

BANK EXAMINER HAS $270,000 WORTH SECURITIES

TELLURIDE, Colo., Sept. 11.—(AP)—It was learned today from persons connected with the local post office that securities totaling $270,000 sent from New York as a result of a half million dollar scheme engineered by C. D. Waggoner, president of the Bank of Telluride, have been delivered to the custody of the state bank commissioner, who is in charge of the closed Telluride bank.

While New York banks, which advanced half a million credit to the Bank of Telluride on the strength of unauthorized telegrams sent from Denver, were endeavoring to recover the securities, the prize package arrived here by registered mail and was delivered to John Jetson, bank examiner, representing Grant McFerson, state bank commissioner, who took charge of the Bank of Telluride last week.

FAILED TO RESPOND TO BLOOD TRANSFUSION

ZURICH, Switzerland, Sept. 11.—(AP)—Louis Marshall of New York, noted lawyer and constitutional authority after failing to respond to blood transfusion necessitated by an operation August 23 for an abscess of thepancreas.

Mr. Marshall attended the recent sixteenth Zionist congress in Zurich and was elected chairman of the Jewish agency council for uniting Zionists and non-Zionists in the work of reclaiming Palestine as a Jewish homeland.

He underwent the operation soon after the close of the congress and for a few days he maintained satisfactory progress. He took a turn for the worse on September 4 and his condition was reported grave. He underwent a second operation and received blood transfusions to combat the toxic effects of prolonged necrosis of the pancreas but his condition grew steadily worse.

Mr. Marshall's son, James, and his sister Mrs. Abram Rosenberg, also his brother-in-law, Dr. U. Magnes, were at the bedside when the end came.

From that point it was indicated today that he probably would journey northward to Detroit. As a tentative date for his visit to that city, where he would open the new Edison laboratory at Dearborn, October 21, has been suggested.

NO REAL INCOMPATIBILITY BETWEEN JEW AND ARAB

JERUSALEM, Sept. 11—(AP)—Riots and bloodshed have not shaken the belief of the Jewish that there exists no fundamental incompatibility between Jew and Arab in Palestine and that the development of a Jewish national home will benefit both peoples, said Col. F. H. Kisch, chief of the Palestine zionist executive, today in an interview in which he discussed the beginnings of thethe recent troubles in the Holy land.

"We are convinced that were it not for the circulation of deliberately false reports calculated to stir their feelings in matters of religious sentiment," said Col. Kisch, "the Arabs of Palestine would have continued to live in peaceful relations with their Jewish neighbors as is still the wish of an overwhelming majority of the Arab population."

RAVAGES OF RATS AND ROACHES AT NORWALK

NORWALK, Sept. 11.—(AP)—According to an opinion read at the city council meeting last night ravaging rats and roaches from a nearby dump, closed to refuse for the summer, have forced the flagmen at the important New Canaan avenue railroad crossing to abandon their shanty. Furthermore, all efforts to get rid of the pests have failed. So hungry are the rodents that they have eaten poison placed in the shanty and apparently come back for more. Spray intended for them has been carried away on their backs and they have been seen covered with the solution, a half a mile from the crossing.

Recently traffic in New Canaan avenue was halted when an army of cats flocked the road to do battle with the rat hordes.

TO INVESTIGATE OUTRAGES OF ANTI-COMMUNIST MOB

CHARLOTTE, N. C., Sept. 11.—(AP)—Open investigation into the activities of an anti-communist mob which on Monday night cut a swath of violence through Gaston and Mecklenburg counties got under way today with unexpected suddenness.

Thomas J. Shaw, veteran North Carolina jurist, presiding over the superior courts of Mecklenburg and Gaston counties during the current six months, took hold of the situation in lieu of a grand jury, which could not be summoned for three weeks. He directed Solicitor John G. Carpenter of the local district to summon all available witnesses, examine them in open court and endeavor in every way possible to find out who was in the mob.

The judge will sit as a magistrate setting aside civil cases now being tried in court here to conduct the inquiry.

Solicitor Carpenter had been ordered by Governor G. Max Gardner to spare no efforts to investigate the kidnaping and flogging of Ben Wells, British subject, and organizer for the National Textile Workers' union, and the kidnaping of C. M. Lell and C. D. Saylor as well as raids on union and communist headquarters in Gastonia, Bessemer City and Charlotte.

The judge put a sheriff at the disposal of the solicitor and subpoenaes were issued for Wells, Lell and Saylor, two Charlotte policemen, S. J. Hartis and W. J. QUIET REPORTED ON MANCHURIAN FRONTIER

MUKDEN, Manchuria, Sept. 11.—(AP)—Russian and Chinese troops, after an outbreak of fighting in the vicinity of Pogranichnaya over the week end, tonight apparently had settled down to the task of patrolling the frontier within their respective lines as they have done for the past two months.

The Manchurian government officially announced today that the fighting which had been in progress at both eastern and western frontier points had ceased last night. That in the vicinity of Manchuli, western terminus of the Chinese eastern railway which is the subject of the dispute, seemed to have been indecisive and unimportant.

CALLS FOR A GENERAL DISARMAMENT CONFERENCE

GENEVA, Sept. 11.—(AP)—The Irish Free State through its spokesman, Patrick McGilligan, foreign minister of the Saorstat, today voiced impatience with the slow rate of progress in the movement for reduction of world armaments and called upon the powers to convene a general disarmament conference.

"An improved atmosphere," is virtually the only result claimed for the activities of the preparatory commission for disarmament since last year, said McGilligan, who pointed out that an anti-war pact between nations, such as the Briand-Kellogg pact, should be followed almost automatically by reduction in the weapons of war.

Seizure Of Jewelry To Value Of $230,000

New York Detectives Believe Part of It to Be Loot From Recent Robbery.

NEW YORK, Sept. 11—(AP)—Raiding a jeweler's exchange on the Bowery, police today arrested its two proprietors and seized jewelry valued at more than $230,000, some of which detectives believed was part of $40,000 loot taken Aug. 13 by burglars from the home of Richard Weber, wealthy Queens contractor.

The two jewelers, Louis Steinburg and David Soffer, were charged with receiving stolen goods.

Among the jewels seized were a chain bracelet set with diamonds valued at $30,000 which police believe was part of the Weber loot; uncut diamonds valued at $200,000 and a diamond wrist watch and diamond bracelet, the value of which was undetermined.

Weber's home was robbed by four men, who arrived in an automobile in broad daylight. They pushed past a servant who opened the door, forced her upstairs, and there at revolver point held up Weber, his wife and 10-year old daughter, forcing Mrs. Weber to open a safe and give them the jewels. They then escaped.

BUILDER EXPLAINS WHY SUPER-HYDROPLANE SANK

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—(AP)—Dr. A. K. Rohrback, builder of the super-hydroplane "Romar" which crashed and sank in 60 feet of water at Travemuende, Germany, today, said tonight he had received word that the ship remained afloat 90 minutes after it hit the water, even though all the windows and bulkheads in the hull were wide open.

Dr. Rohrback, who is in New York on a business trip, received a cablegram describing the accident from his brother, Otto Rohrback, a director of the Rohrback plant in Berlin.

News dispatches from Travemuende stated that 13 passengers were aboard the "Romer," and that they and all the crew were saved.

From his brother's telegram, Dr. Rohrback said he believed a pilot of the Lufthansa, big German air transport company which purchased the hydroplane for passenger service, was putting the "Romar" through landing tests when the accident occurred.

Dr. Rohrback said his brother's cablegram stated that "through an error in piloting, the Romar stalled at 100 foot altitude."

"One of the Lufthansa tests consists in determining the minimum speed at which a ship can be landed," Dr. Rohrback said. "The pilot apparently had her throttled down to a very low speed and may have misjudged his altitude.

"My brother's wire states that all her bulkheads were open. Those bulkheads were put in there as a safety precaution, to keep the ship from sinking. If they were open, of course, she would sink. But at that, he says, she stayed afloat 90 minutes."

WHOLESALE ARRESTS FOR BOMB PLOTS IN GERMANY

BERLIN, Sept. 11—(AP)—Wholesale arrests in various parts of Germany and discovery of a bomb in possession of one of the prisoners and the finding of a bomb making laboratory in Berlin led police to declare tonight they had broken up terroristic activities of political extremists who had plotted against the republic.

A nation wide investigation had been carried on for weeks of the series of bomb explosions, the most recent of which damaged the reichstag building here and a government building in Luneberg. The police had no doubt after examining documents in the possession of those arrested that the bombs were placed by members of the notorious "consul" organization which was held responsible for the murder of Foreign Minister Rathenau in 1922.

The greatest find in the chain of evidence so far was the bomb making laboratory here of which Erich Timm, one of those arrested, was said to have been the head. He is known as one of the most radical of the nationalists and has frequently been involved with the authorities because of his political activities.

Heath, Detroit elevator mechanic, was in Wayne county jail tonight awaiting trial on an indictment returned against ham today by the federal grand jury in connection with the death of Richard J. Sandland, federal prohibition agent whose body was found in the Detroit river Aug. 6.

The indictment against Heath charges assaulting a federal officer with a deadly weapon, making off with government property and violating the tariff act by attempting to smuggle liquor into the United States.

Arraigned before Federal Judge Charles C. Simons this afternoon, Heath stood mute and a plea of not guilty was entered for him. His bond was set at $50,000 two sureties. No date was set for his trial.

NEW YORK, Sept. 11—(AP)—Richard E. Enright, former police commissioner, today announced acceptance of the newly formed square deal party's nomination for mayor.

He said the square deal party would rectify these conditions.

THE LINDBERGHS HAVE LANDED AT NORTH HAVEN, ME.

NORTH HAVEN, Me., Sept. 1—(AP)—A red sport monoplane believed to contain Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh landed here at 7.30 p. m. tonight on the private landing field of Ambassador Dwight W. Morrow, father of Mrs. Lindbergh.

ROOSEVELT FIELD, N. Y., Sept. 11—(AP)—Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh left Roosevelt field today for an unannounced destination in a small, red sport monoplane which, it has been persistently rumored about the field, the colonel intends to buy for his wife.

NOTE IN BOTTLE FOUND IN POQUONOCK RIVER AT GROTON PROBABLY A HOAX

HARTFORD, Sept. 11—(AP)—Requisitioning immediate aid, a note purporting to have been written by two castaway flyers, adrift off Cape Hatteras on the coast of the Carolinas, was picked up today at the mouth of the the colonel intends to buy for his wife.

Giving their position by longitude and latitude, which roughtly estimated would place them in the Atlantic somewhere in the vicinity of the Azores, the men write of their predicament—"One and one half minutes northeast of Cape Poquonock river at Groton.

one quart of water. Can only live two days. Need help quick."

The note dated July 30, 1929, bears the lines—"L-391 help in plane—longitude 22, latitude 39—Mechanic, J. Murphy; pilot, P. Putnam"—preceding the message.

A pint whiskey bottle containing the message, fitted with a rubber bathing cap as a stopper tied around the neck with red cord, was found Wednesday morning on the shore of the Poquonock by Mrs. William Smith, of Groton. Her son, John W. Haselden, of Norwich, turned the bottle over to Sergeant George W. Webber, in charge of the Groton barracks, state police.

According to the police, the note written in pencil on a scrap of an old sugar bag, seems to be the work of youngsters. The writing is pinched and the sentences cramped on the piece, leaving much space. Northeast is spelled "norphst," quick, "quik" and need, "ned".

The Groton police notified officials of the state department of aeronautics at Brainard field who were able to find no one of the name of "P. Putnam" listed in the department of commerce directory of licensed pilots. Two "J. Murphys" were listed as mechanics, however.

The police said Wednesday night that although the note had every appearance of a hoax, an attempt will be made to check the affair.

CONGRESSMAN KVALE WAS BURNED TO DEATH IN HOUSE

Was Trapped by Fire While He Slept in His Summer Cottage Near Battle Lake, Minn.—Explosion of a Heater or a Gasoline Lamp Was Blamed For the Fire—Cottage Was Destroyed Without Knowledge of Other Residents—Kvale Was the Man Who Defeated Volstead—Was the Only Farmer Laborite in the House

BATTLE LAKE, Minn., Sept. 11.—(AP)—Trapped by fire while he slept in his summer cottage near here, O. J. Kvale, farmer labor congressman from Minnesota, was burned to death last night when the home was destroyed.

Explosion of a heater, or a gasoline lamp was blamed for the fire which apparently broke out about midnight. The cottage was destroyed without other residents of the vicinity having been aware of the tragedy.

Only a smouldering ruin marked the site of the cottage when the fire was discovered today. So badly charred was the congressman's body that identification was in doubt for a time.

The theory that an exploding stove started the fire was advanced by Dr. I. T. Kvale of Willmar, son of the congressman, while Coroner J. G. Vigen believed a gasoline lamp, may have blown up. Neither theory could be substantiated.

Dr. Kvale declared his father probably was in a deep sleep when the fire started and had little or no chance to escape from the burning building.

Mr. Kvale, his son said, had suffered from insomnia since the death of Mrs. Kvale three years ago, and frequently was forced to take a sleeping potion. He believed his father resorted to this means of obtaining sleep last night and that the fire broke out after he had retired.

Mr. Kvale, who was 60 years old, was the only farmer laborite in the house. He succeeded Andrew J. Volstead as representative from the seventh Minnesota district, defeating the famous prohibition advocate in 1922 with the farmer labor and democratic endorsement.

Retirement of Mr. Volstead, however, gave little satisfaction to wets who had sought his defeat, for Mr. Kvale maintained he was drier than his predecessor.

Mr. Kvale was an ordained Lutheran minister and was in charge of a pastorate at Benson, Minn., his home town, when he was elected to congress. He resigned his pastorate in 1923.

BODY OF SLAIN MAN FOUND IN BACK SEAT OF AUTO IN N. Y.

NEW YORK, Sept. 11—(AP)—The body of James Batto, 47, who was engaged in a vending machine business in New Jersey, was found late today in the back seat of a parked automobile in East 107th street. He had been shot in the head and chest and a physician said he had been dead about nine hours.

Police Commissioner Whalen said he thought it probable that a New Jersey gangster invited Batto into the automobile and shot him as he was stepping in.

The slaying was the second within five days attributed by New York police to New Jersey gangs. Last Saturday James "Buck" Donovan of Union City, N. J., described by police as a Hoboken, N. J., beer runner, was shot to death by two men as he sat in an automobile in 21st street. His assailants escaped.

The identification of Batto's body was made by his brother, William Batto. New York pool room proprietor William Batto told police he did not know where his brother lived. He said that on Monday his brother told him he had had a disagreement with his partner in the vending machines business. He said he did not know the partner's name. Police began an effort to locate him.

900 GRAND ARMY VETS IN PARADE AT PORTLAND

PORTLAND, Me., Sept. 11.—(AP)—Their faltering footsteps stilled by martial airs which they followed into battles more than 60 years ago, 900 "boys in blue" marched for a mile today in the parade opening the 63rd national encampment of the Grand Army of Republic.

The less than a regiment of veterans was but a remnant of the host that rallied to its country's defense in the "60's". Besides the marchers, 500 others, enfeebled by the passing of time rode in automobiles.

Only three of the marchers were forced to give up. The rest stepped sturdily on, some on canes, others on crutchers and some on the arms of younger persons.

Although many appeared weary and tired as they neared the end of the march they all drew erect and snapped to salute to their commander-in-chief, John Reese, of Broken Bow, Neb.

The proposed reunion of the soldiers of the north with those who fought for the Confederacy, will probably probably come before the delegates tomorrow.

Ill in New York, he sent his communication to be read at the presentation by the chemical society of the Priestly medal," the highest honor of chemistry, given him as America's most distinguished "lay chemist."

Garvan also sketched the chemist's power to protect public health, and Dr. Irving Lanazmuir, president of the American chemical society, announced a new research sponsored by the society to search for the cause and cure of cancer.

DEBATE ON THE TARIFF WILL OPEN IN SENATE TODAY

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11—(AP)—The clouds that hung over sensational progress with the tariff bill were swept away today by postponement until December of action on the Vare seat controversy.

The latter issue, injected at the outset of consideration of the tariff, had threatened to delay the bill. Its postponement on motion of Senator Watson of Indiana, the republican leader, cleared the way for a fresh start on the only remaining legislative subject proposed by President Hoover for the special session.

Except for agreement on proposals to consider first the administrative provisions of the republican revision measure, and to dispense with the initial reading to speed up debate, little attention was given to the tariff by the senate during the day.

The motion to make the initial order of business the sections embracing the controversial flexible, tariff commission, and proposed new valuation clauses, was made by Senator Simmons of North Carolina, ranking democrat on the finance committee, who plans to launch the opposition program tomorrow with delivery of a long prepared speech.

CLAIMS OF "GOUGING" BY CUSTOMS OFFICERS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11—(AP)—Reports of "gouging" of American tourists by customs officers requiring payment of duty on imported goods, beyond the $100 exemption allowed by law, based on retail instead of wholesale value were read in the senate today by Senator Walsh, democrat, Massachusetts.

He said this was a discrimination in favor of regular importers because it called for higher duties, but added that the commissioner of customs had promised to correct the situation.

Senator Edge, republican, New Jersey, said he understood a new form of declaration for returning travellers was being prepared providing that the declared price shall be as near as possible what the tourists believe to be the wholesale value of the article.

The wreckage caused by the derailment of passenger train No. 26 on the Hartford division of the New Haven railroad at Hop River station Tuesday morning, was entirely cleared from the roadbed by 10 o'clock today, just 24 hours after the mishap. During yesterday afternoon and part of the night the wrecking crews and section gangs were occupied in placing the engine and coaches back onto the rails for removal to repair shops and in repairing the tracks. Other than to admit that the switch east of the station had been set for the siding, contrary to what should have been done, officials of the railroad made no statement today as to the responsibility for the accident. An investigation is still underway, presumably to determine who was to blame for not throwing the siding switch out, leaving the main line clear. The gasoline car which was on the siding and which was struck by the engine was found badly wrecked in the debris. The striking of the car is given as the immediate cause of the derailment of the engine. The freight house, now a mass of loose boards and timbers, has been piled to one side of the tracks for future disposal. This building was completely demolished when the west side was punctured by the end of the baggage coach which broke the coupling with the engine tender and plunged to the left of the track line into the structure. It was indicated that a similar fate undoubtedly awaited the station proper in the event that this coach had veered to the right instead of the left. Traffic over the line, which was rerouted over the Air Line division following the mishap, returned to normal with the passing of train No. 125 from Boston at 6.20 o'clock.

There were many who retired without the customary night cap of a glass of water Tuesday night when the faucets ejected a liquid that was at times milky white and again rust-colored and filled with dirt particles. The cause of this was a break in a joint of the main line adjacent to the outlet of the pumping station in Mansfield. The break was discovered when water was forced back into the station and began flooding the coal bins in the vicinity of the steam boilers that have been in almost constant use since the drought. Upon being notified of the damage Superintendent Henderson S. Moulton, of the water department, quickly set an emergency repair crew at work and the damage was remedied during the evening. The discoloring of the water and entrance of foreign matter was caused at the break through which water was being forced to maintain the level in the storage reservoir in the city. Despite the dry spell the supply continues to hold a fair level at the Mansfield supply pond, the water being but a few inches below the capstones of the dam today.

Mrs. Prag, wife of the employer of Deschene was learning to drive. She had driven out of Valley street and turned south on Jackson street when the presence of a machine parked in front of the shop confused her and she lost control. The car climbed the sidewalk. Under guidance of Deschene who grabbed the wheel, the machine missed the building, knocked several baskets of fruit and vegetables over and went back into the street where Deschene brought the vehicle to a stop without further damage. In climbing onto and leaving the sidewalk the machine narrowly missed the parked automobile. In reporting the damage to Officer John A. Famous Beauty Expert Tells Secret Of Lovely Hands

MRS. PEARL ECKER HUBBELL.

NEW YORK, N. Y.—Mrs. Pearl Ecker Hubbell, dean of the National School of Cosmeticians, advises women on keeping their hands exquisitely white and smooth.

She says: "For women in their homes I can think of no better aid in protecting their hands than the use of Lux suds in all cleaning and dishwashing.

"In selecting the best soap for use in manicuring we chose Lux as gentlest to the hands. We use just a few of the delicate Lux flakes to make a bowlful of pure, sparkling suds. Lux suds cleanse so gently and soothe the skin, keep the hands beautifully white and smooth.

"Ordinary soaps may roughen and coarsen and age the hands, make them look prematurely old. Lux is so pure, so gentle, that it never irritates or roughens the skin, never dries up its delicate oils.

"Therefore I can't imagine finer beauty care for the hands of the home-maker than Lux suds in the dishpan."

ECONOMICAL TRANSPORTATION for All The People

Twenty-one years ago, when the Model T was first made, and again in December, 1927, when the new Ford was introduced, the policy of the Ford Motor Company was announced in these words—

"We will build a motor car for the great multitude. It will be large enough for the family, but small enough for the individual to run and care for. It will be constructed of the best materials, by the best men to be hired, after the simplest designs that modern engineering can devise. But it will be so low in price that no man making a good wage will be unable to own one."

MORE than seventeen million Ford automobiles have been made since this announcement was first printed. The passing years have brought many changes—in appearance—in performance—in manner of manufacture. But there is one thing that has never changed—the fundamental idea behind the Ford car.

The Ford Motor Company was formed, and exists today, not merely to make automobiles but to provide economical transportation for all the people. Far more important than the car itself is the part it plays in the lives, the happiness, and the prosperity of millions of people.

Before the Ford was introduced the automobile was considered more or less as an expensive toy, for only the wealthy to drive. There was no conception of its uses and possibilities as we know them today. It was accepted in much the same manner that the airplane was accepted five years ago. Great emphasis was placed upon its racing speed and very little upon its practical utility.

With the coming of the Ford, however, it became possible for men in all walks of life to enjoy the benefits of transportation that formerly had been limited to a fortunate few.

A great change came over the country and with it a new prosperity. By freeing the movements of men, the Ford also freed their thoughts and created new opportunities. The barriers of time and distance were broken down. Good roads followed close behind the automobile and the isolation of country districts disappeared. The nation grew as people learned to use this newly developed horse-power and fit it to their needs.

Into the hands of men of moderate means—to the workers in factories—to the toilers on the farm—was given a means to increase their income and enjoy the leisure which that increased income should bring. The working day became shorter because men could do in eight hours the tasks that previously had taken ten or twelve—and do them better.

Always it should be remembered that we do not have automobiles because we are prosperous. We are prosperous because we have them.

Today, with all its improvements—with all its new beauty of line and color—with all the betterments and changes that have been made during the past twenty-one years—the Ford is still a "motor car for the great multitude."

It is not just a new automobile—not just so many mechanical parts carefully put together to run on wheels—but Progress—Achievement—a part of the very life and fabric of the nation.

Business of every kind moves forward at a faster pace because of it. To countless homes it brings the rewards of widening opportunity, happiness, and priceless hours of relaxation in the open air.

All of this not merely because of its safety, its comfort, its reliability, its speed, its acceleration, its ease of control, but because of a fundamental purpose that is greater than all of these. Because, in larger degree than ever, it provides economical transportation for all the people.

STARTING THE PROBE.

In view of the situation brought to light by the revelations concerning the activities of W. B. Shearer, there was nothing else the senate naval committee could do but to favor a thorough probe of the affair. As the president has said there is need of going to the bottom of the whole matter.

This inquiry will produce testimony from many directions for there will be a desire to know just what connection Shearer had with shipbuilding concerns and what he did on his own initiative as the result of being in touch with the limitation conference through his contracts.

It has been stated by one of the shipbuilding concerns that the services of Shearer were dispensed with just as soon as it was discovered that he was a propagandist. This indicates that the man who has precipitated the probe must have gone beyond the bounds of what one employer regarded as legitimate representation. In other words if he was sent as an observer and made use of his position to oppose the government in its negotiations for armament limitation, he was either representing or misrepresenting his employers. Just which that was is desirable to know.

Where he stands on the question of armaments is pretty well indicated. He has a right to his views and it is his privilege to oppose disarmament, but when he does he should come out in the open, put his cards on the table and play the game fairly. When he undertakes to go to a conference as the representative of concerns which are financially interested in the building of ships and works secretly in their behalf for interests which are not disclosed, it is time that the situation was uncovered and the activity and influence of such a propagandist and those who maintained him were revealed.

The senate naval committee is not only anxious to but should succeed in obtaining all the facts concerning Shearer's activities and learn whether his propaganda developed from his own interest or from those who backed him.

POSTAL DEFICITS.

Even though it has been pointed out that there might be an increase in the first class postal rates, Postmaster General Brown has made denial of reports that such a recommendation was going to be made to congress. No doubt such an increase would produce much needed revenue provided it did not cause a reduction in the amount of first class mail, but the folly of trusting to luck along such lines is probably too well known to the department to indulge in any such experiment. It knows what happened when it doubled the price on the picture post cards.

The desire that there should be an end to the department's deficits is not a new one. It is called to attention frequently, but it is to be realized that the fault for the most part probably does not rest with the department. It is required to do so many things by legislative enactment from which it fails to get any or adequate revenue that its hands are tied.

The prospect of a huge and mounting deficit is certainly not pleasing. It is enough to cause the president to urge the operation of it on a better basis, but it should not be overlooked that the department is obliged to stand the expense of transporting the great volume of franked mail. It gets no return for it. It likewise carried without recompense the huge quantities of departmental matter. More recently there has been a boost in the subsidy which is paid for the carrying of ocean mail and the department is obliged to stand that even though it is recognized as a contribution to the steamship lines which cannot get enough revenue otherwise, because of restrictive laws, to keep going. In the handling of the free delivery mail and the air mail the department is rendering service which is important, but it is not able to do enough business to make ends meet. Could the department be relieved of these burdens which are not of its making it would be in a much better position to reduce the deficit. With its hands tied there is more expected of it than it is possible to accomplish. Let subsidies of the several kinds paid by the department come out of the federal treasury instead of the department and there would be a different show. Even then there might be need of greater efficiency and better business methods, but it would be possible to get at them.

CONSOLIDATED CIRCUSES.

With the announcement that John Ringling had bought all the competitors in the circus business it was indicated that the value of consolidation, even in the circus field, was appreciated. With all the big tent shows of the country under one control it presents a decided novelty. Here for instance is a monopoly in this particular line of amusement in decided contrast to the experiences of the past. There is nothing to prevent anyone from starting a big circus of his own if he has the inclination, ability and necessary funds, but the big ring master apparently believes that he is safe in his control of the situation.

It might be inferred that it would be the youngsters who would show the chief interest in this combination, but we shall be greatly mistaken if it does not awaken quite as keen a concern among the adults. Circus lovers are not restricted by age. They start young but they keep it up just as long as they have the opportunity to indulge their wishes.

Just what scheme Mr. Ringling has for operating his combined shows will be awaited with a widespread interest. It has frequently been the case that the big tent shows were playing in one part of the country under particularly adverse conditions while those in other sections would be favored by fine weather and the desirable big crowds. If Mr. Ringling restricts his various shows to particular sections of the country for the season he will have the advantage of being able to better balance accounts weatherwise. With those shows in the east profiting by good weather and those in the west suffering from rain he will be in a much better financial condition than if he controlled simply the company in the rain-soaked belt.

Circus lovers will be justified in wondering whether this change is going to mean that each one of the circuses will put on the same kind of a show in the future, sort of a standard programme, or whether they will preserve their present identity and features with the expanded improvements. Circuses have changed hands before and they will again, but not before has there been such a combination. Mr. Ringling believes he sees possibilities in it and he will have a chance to test out his ideas.

THE HUMAN MENACE.

How desperate the situation is in the timbered regions of the northwest is indicated by the orders which have been issued closing the national parks in the states of Oregon and Washington. The long dry spell has created serious conditions and when they are combined with the failure of people to furnish the needed protection against forest fire there is nothing else to do but to exclude those who are regarded as a menace.

Fighting forest fires in many states has been a long, hard battle this year. Great acreages have been burned over and huge losses sustained. Lack of rain has served to seriously handicap the situation and until there comes a general downpour precautions must be taken. There is need for establishing safeguards as well as for fighting the existing fires. If persons cannot observe the common protective measures they must expect to be excluded from areas where they have been accustomed to go. This will not extinguish existing fires, but the hope is that it will prevent any new ones and so far as the human agent is responsible it should.

Fires which are raging in valuable timber, destroying mills, homesteads and other property are terrorizing. The seriousness of such situations are not overdrawn. They furnish not only a terrific battle for the thousands who are engaged in trying to check them, but they leave devastation in their wake.

These western states are not the only ones where the public has been restrained from going into fields and woodland because of the drought and the danger which the human agent is considered to be under those conditions. The value of such protective measures has been fully established and it would be a happy solution if the forest fires could be disposed of as easily and effectively.

STILL IN THE BALANCE.

What appears to have been an incorrect report, or a report dealing only with possibilities which it was hoped would work out, was that which was given out to the effect that China and Russia had come to an agreement for the arbitration of their differences. Hardly had the world given expression to its gratification over such a decision than reports began to filter through that while terms had been discussed it was impossible to get an agreement. Demands concerning the return of railroad officials preliminary to arbitration were not satisfactory.

Whether the situation is such that there can be no compromise is not disclosed, but it cannot be overlooked that more clashes have been reported along the border and of such a character that they spell trouble instead of peace.

Thus far slight progress has been made in behalf of peace. Perhaps it is fortunate that there has been no worse developments and no more serious outbreaks, but it is a question how long such a hostile attitude can be kept in abeyance.

There has been nothing to indicate that the situation is one which must be decided by bloodshed and not through friendly adjustment. While the two countries have been warned that they have responsibilities under the peace treaty to resort to arbitration they have not gotten far. What has been done has been chiefly among themselves, preceded by ultimatums and a disposition to have others keep their hands off. Outside influence has not been exerted beyond the reminding of the countries of their duties, but it could easily be had if there was an intimation that it would be helpful. On the other hand unless something more tangible develops the importance of exerting that influence will be felt and exercised.

STRICTLY BUSINESS

"Business, please?"

Elsie Smith was the youngest and littlest stenographer in Dine & Dunn's, and today she was watch-dogging in the anteroom to Peter Dine's private office. Unfortunately for the impression upon the caller, her "Business, please?" sounded less like a bark than a chirp.

"I just been in to see Pop," breezily announced the tall young man.

"Pop?"

"The Old Man, the Works."

"Mr. Peter Dine?" asked Elsie in tones which echoed her horror at the use of such flippant and unbusiness-like expressions. "You want to see Mr. Peter Dine?"

"How did you guess?" returned the caller. "You're not psychic, by any chance?"

"Your name, please?" asked Elsie, ignoring the young man's last remark, the more readily as she wasn't quite sure what psychic meant.

"Jack," answered the caller.

"Mr. Jack," repeated Elsie.

"Not Mr. Jack," said the young man, "just Jack. What you'd call me if I were your—"

"Business, please?" interrupted the watchdog.

"My business?" repeated the caller. "Don't you think you're being kind of—well, snoopy? Suppose I asked you what your business is?"

"At present," said Elsie, "my business is keeping pests away from Mr Dine."

"Pests," muttered the young man; "did she say pests? No, my ears must have deceived me. Their reception is poor on music anyway. And now," he continued, "your name, please?"

"My name?"

"Right again. You seemed very keen to know mine, so I'm returning the compliment."

"Compliment!" said Elsie; "that was business."

"Well," said the young man, "this is my business, and why is nobody's business. Name, please?"

"Elsie Follansbee, though I don't see—"

"Don't you ever go out to lunch, Miss Follansbee? It's away after 1."

"How can I, and leave you here to force yourself on Mr. Dine?"

"How can I bear to leave thee?" hummed the caller. "That's easily fixed. I'll go, too. Then you can keep an eye on me, and we'll come back together."

"Dutch treat, then," insisted Elsie, wondering if all pests were as attractive as this one seemed to be.

"You'll never be able to sell anything to Mr. Dine," she confided to him at lunch. "He'll roar at you."

"He's never dared to roar at you?" flared the young man.

"Oh, nobody minds it," said Elsie, "he's really kind-hearted. You should hear the way he talks about his boy."

"Then," said the young man, "when we get back I'll march right in on the old bear. And if you try to stop me I'll pick you up by the elbows—"

"You couldn't," said Elsie. "I'd—I'd kick."

"We'll see when we get back," said the young man, but back in the office he changed his mind and began filling out a blank:

Name—Jack.
Business—Collich.
To see—Pop.
Concerning—$100.

As Elsie glanced at this business-like tabulation the door of the inner office opened.

"Hello, Jack," said Mr. Dine. "Thought you were coming in before lunch."

"Couldn't get in, Pop," said the young man. "Miss Follansbee here barred the way. Know what?" he mischievously added, "She threatened to kick me!"

"Um," said Mr. Dine with a look at his littlest stenographer. "She looks as if she'd like to carry out her threat right now."

But Jack talked her out of that.—Chicago News.

Postnatal Care After the Baby Comes

By M. EDWARD DAVIS, M. D.
Chicago
(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

That period following the birth of the baby, known as the postnatal period, and lasting for six or eight weeks, as assumed the utmost importance in this age of preventive medicine. During this time the organs of reproduction return to normal, and the period of nursing begins. Proper care of the mother may have an important bearing on her future well-being.

During the first two weeks the mother and her baby are under the close supervision of the doctor. At the end of this time she usually begins to assume her household duties and the care of the infant. However, she should not forget that she is still a convalescent and must govern her life accordingly. She should maintain a calm and unperturbed mind. The ordeal of pregnancy and childbirth may have been a considerable strain on her delicate nerves. Now there are added responsibilities and worries of motherhood. The home environment should be such that no petty inconveniences need disturb her.

A few simple suggestions to the young mother may help:

Nurse the baby regularly. The average size baby should nurse every four hours beginning at 6 or 7 a. m., and ending at 10 or 11 p. m.

Guard the breasts against infection, and safeguard your infant's food supply. Before and after each nursing wash the nipples with fresh boric solution, using sterilized cotton pledges on tooth-picks—so-called applicators. After nursing, protect the nipple by covering it with a square of sterile gauze. Cracked or bleeding nipples or painful breasts demand immediate attention; so notify your physician. A loose binder or supporter will aid materially in supporting the breasts.

To be breast-fed is your baby's birthright. We doctors are realizing more and more the importance of mother's milk in the early months of the infant's life. You may help increase the milk by a regular orderly mode of living, a proper, well-balanced diet, plenty of fluids, and sufficient sleep and relaxation.

The diet should consist of the usual variety of food-stuffs, with an abundance of vegetables, fruits, milk, eggs, butter, and sweetbreads—all rich in vitamins. A glass of milk or chocolate may be taken between meals. Drink freely of pure water at all times. Highly spiced foods, heavy sauces, and dressings are to be restricted. They may cause indigestion and work a hardship on the kidneys.

Until the mother regains her normal activity, some attention to her bowels may be necessary. She should have a daily movement. If there is a tendency towards constipation, an abundance of fruits, vegetables, and coarse cereals in her diet will help regulate the bowels. A mild cathartic, such as mineral oil or milk of magnesia, may be taken.

An abdominal support is very useful in supporting the lax abdominal wall until the muscles regain their tone. Tub baths should not be taken until after the fourth week, but a shower or sponge bath may be taken daily. The mother should assume her household duties slowly, adding to them daily as her strength increases.

The return of the menses varies in different individuals. Those who do not nurse their babies may menstruate at the end of six weeks; those who nurse their babies may menstruate any time after the third month. Some women do not menstruate until the baby is weaned. The first period is usually profuse, and the woman should keep off her feet as much as possible. If the flow is too profuse, the physician should be notified.

It is customary for the woman to return to her doctor for an examination six or eight weeks after the birth of the baby. The physician will determine whether the reproductive organs have returned to normal. Occasionally the womb is "tipped backward." This is a common occurrence after childbirth. The physician will correct it so that it will cause no future trouble. If the mother has any doubt concerning herself or the baby, she should consult her physician rather than take the advice of well-meaning but often misinformed friends or relatives.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Flip Is Properly Introduced

E'en humble folk possessing skill,
In showing off get quite a thrill.
—Jerry Muskrat.

Bowser the Hound and Flip the Terrier were paying another visit to the Smiling Pool. Flip felt a little sheepish. Yes, sir, Flip felt a little sheepish. He hadn't forgotten his last visit to the Smiling Pool, when he had chased Jerry Muskrat all over it, not knowing that Jerry could dive and swim almost like a fish. You see, it was the first time he had ever seen Jerry.

"Do you suppose we will see Jerry Muskrat?" asked Flip as they approached the Smiling Pool.

"One never can tell about Jerry Muskrat," replied Bowser. "We may see him and we may not."

"Does he live in the water all the time?" inquired Flip.

"No," replied Bowser, "certainly not. He has to sleep sometimes."

"Well, why can't he sleep in the water?" demanded Flip.

"Because he's an animal, not a fish," retorted Bowser.

"Well, where does he sleep?" Flip inquired.

"Did you see that house among the rushes, where the Laughing Brook comes into the Smiling Pool?" inquired Bowser.

Flip shook his head. "No," said he, "I didn't. What kind of a house?"

"We'll see it when we get over there," said Bowser.

When they reached the Smiling Pool they both looked for Jerry Muskrat, but Jerry was nowhere to be seen. He wasn't on the Big Rock; he wasn't on his favorite log. "Probably he is taking a nap at his house over there," said Bowser.

Flip looked where Bowser was pointing. In among the rushes, but quite surrounded by water, was a big, brown mound that looked as if it had been made of dead rushes; and, indeed, it had. "Is that Jerry Muskrat's house?" inquired Flip.

Bowser nodded. "It certainly is," said he.

"Who built it for him?" Flip wanted to know.

Bowser turned to look at Flip to see if he were joking. "He built it himself," he replied dryly.

"Huh!" exclaimed Flip. "I didn't know there was a Rat in all the Great World who could do that much work."

"You don't know Jerry Muskrat," replied Bowser. "Jerry is the best little worker anywhere about here. I don't know his equal with the exception of Paddy the Beaver, over in the Green Forest. Hello, here comes Jerry!"

Sure enough, a brown head was moving up swiftly through the water from the lower end of the Smiling Pool. Bowser and Flip sat perfectly still. Just as Jerry was passing close to the bank where they sat, Bowser spoke. "Hello, Jerry Muskrat!" said he.

Jerry stopped swimming and looked up at Bowser. "Hello, yourself!" said he in a rather squeaky voice.

"I want you to meet a friend of mine who has come to live at Farmer Brown's," said Bowser. "His name is Flip."

"It seems to me that I have seen him before," replied Jerry, his eyes twinkling. "I believe he is quite a swimmer." Jerry chuckled as he said this. So did Bowser. Flip hesitated and then he chuckled too. They were all thinking of how Flip had tried to catch Jerry in the water and how Jerry had just played with him.

"I hope you'll excuse me for trying to catch you," said Flip politely.

"I hope you'll excuse me for trying to catch you," said Flip quietly.

"Oh, it didn't bother me at all," said Jerry Muskrat. "It just gave me a little exercise."

"You see, I thought you were one of the family of Robber the Rat," explained Flip.

Stories That Recall Others

Her Operation

Seven year old Ned heard his family discussing his Aunt Mary's operation. He heard them say that the doctor had removed two large gallstones. About three weeks later some friends were calling at the house. They asked whether Aunt Mary was able to be up yet.

"Well, don't you think she ought to be?" asked Ned. "They took two tombstones out of her."

Just Picture It

Although he is nearly 40 and an officer he is just a little boy to his mother. So when she heard that he was about to leave for two weeks at camp she called up, having heard that the water supply was limited, and offered to lend him her large thermos bottle in which to carry his extra supply. He declined with as much good grace as possible, but went around chuckling all the rest of the day. "Can't you see a full grown soldier carrying a thermos bottle?" he chortled.

ASTOUNDED BRITONS HEAR OF BEER BRIBERY TRICK

OXFORD, England—(AP)—Bribery of prohibition agents in the United States is a subject that never grows stale in British newspapers, but Englishmen have become so accustomed to reading about it that i tno longer startles them.

Now, however, comes a member of the newly appointed British commission to investigate the liquor traffic and divulges the disquieting news that there is a relation between beer and bribery, even in England.

There are brewery salesmen, B. T. Hall of the commission told an audience here, who do not hesitate to bribe the refreshment committee of a workingmen's club.

The club members want their beer, and they want good beer, and they leave it to the committee to buy good beer. Then enters an unscrupulous brewery salesman and tactfully leaves a one pound note with the committee, confidently expecting it to favor his brand of beer over the output of more upright and probably more capable breweries.

"It is this sort of thing" said Hall "that brings democracy into contempt."

Recovering From Injuries

Walter Sunlicki is recovering from injuries received on August 24 in an automobile accident which occurred when he was returning from Stonington where he is employed. He suffered a dislocated right arm when the car in which he was riding skidded on the wet pavements in Old Mystic, striking a highway fence. The driver was uninjured.

Lots of men would be worse than they are if they knew how to go about it.

The operator of the machine, whose name was not learned but who was said to be a salesman in one of the department stores, had to crank the machine to get it started and evidently had it in reverse when the engine took hold for the automobile shot backwards, crashed the window and then bounced out again as it came to a stop.

Temporary repairs were made to the window shortly after the accident.

CITY MEETING AGAINST CHANGING FIRE STATION ON WEST MAIN ST.

A resolution calling for the sale of the old West Side fire station on West Main street, the purchase of a new site and the erection of a new fire station was voted down, two to one, at a special city meeting Wednesday evening. The vote against was 128 and the vote in favor was 64.

Mayor Lee Roy Robbins called the meeting to order at 8 o'clock in the town hall. This special city meeting has been called, Mayor Robbins said, by virtue of a petition signed by more than 100 persons for the purpose of acting on a proposition for the sale of the old house, purchase of a new site and the erection of a new fire station on the West Side. He then asked City Clerk Weston C. Pullen to read the warning, after which the mayor stated that the meeting was open for action on the fire station proposition. Attorney Maurice Meyer introduced the following resolution:

Resolved—That a sum of money, not to exceed $20,000 be appropriated for the purchase of a site and the erection of a fire station on the West Side of the city, by the direction of the board of fire commissioners and a committee of three, to be appointed by the mayor and on its completion the old station now existing to be sold and the proceeds of the sale to be turned over to the city treasury.

Mr. Meyer, speaking on the resolution, said that the old station was built in 1859, over 70 years ago. At that time, he explained, the station was just outside the business district. Since that time many changes have taken place but the old station still exists. The locality has changed. From a quiet residential district it has become a congested business district. It is a dangerous place for the apparatus to get out. It is on a trolley line. If there were traffic there and the apparatus swung out there would be a jam and there might be accidents.

The building has aged and has decayed, he declared it would cost several thousands of dollars to put it in repair. I have this on good authority, Mr Meyer said, the authority of a man who served as head of your department for over 25 years. I refer you to Chief Stanton. Are you willing to spend several thousands of dollars for repairs to the old building? Is it not a better policy to sell the old building? In the interests of economy and for the protection of life and property vote for the resolution.

Howard L. Stanton, former chief of the fire department, who served as head of the department for over 25 years and who fought fires in Norwich for 50 years, spoke in favor of the resolution. After speaking of his long service with the department, Chief Stanton said he "graduated" from the West Side station. He went on to say that if the department had had the use of money realized from the sale of old apparatus, horses, and real estate, there would have been enough money to build a new station. The money from such sales, he explained, has always been turned over to the city treasury.

The West Side station was built for a hand-drawn, hand-pump engine. In 1872 the tower was built. Horse drawn apparatus came in and then the department graduated from horses to motor apparatus. The former chief said he was offered $10,000 for the old station within 15 years but that he had no authority to sell. He went on to speak of the rapid growth of the West Side district. The $20,000 asked for by the resolution is a mere bagatelle, he said. I believe in holding down the taxes, he said, but there are things we have to have. I think the West Side is entitled to a fire station and I hope this vote will pass.

C. S. Storrs asked if the proceeds of the sale of the West Side station could be used in the erection of a new building.

Mayor Robbins said they could not be used for that purpose directly.

Albert Boardman asked what was done with the proceeds of the sale of the old Falls fire station.

Former Chief Stanton, in answer, said that by vote of a city meeting the money was used to put No. 6 station in repair.

Mayor Robbins asked the clerk to read the resolution again over which he called for a vote by acclamation, announcing the result as against the resolution. Someone doubted the chair's opinion and a motion prevailed that a ballot vote be taken. George Gifford and Daniel T. Shea were appointed tellers and the balloting was started, the voters passing from left to right in front of the mayor's desk. The result of the vote:

Total votes cast	190
Necessary for choice	96
For the resolution	64
Against the resolution	126

Mayor Robbins announced that the resolution was lost. There was one other matter in the warning for the meeting, calling for the approval of a deed executed by the mayor, and to be delivered to Howell S. Bailey, transferring land to fix and determine the southerly line of Main St., near Preston bridge.

Mayor Robbins stated that the matter was not ready to be presented, due to the fact that Mr. Bailey, one of the parties to the deed, was out of town. The meeting then adjourned, having been in session about 40 minutes.

PLAN ANOTHER AUCTION FOR RED ARROW MONEY

The Red Arrow club of Norwich, consisting of the local merchants who organized the Red Arrow game for the purpose of inducing the Norwich public to trade at home, held their regular meeting at the store of Hanover-Curland Co. on Tuesday evening. Red Arrow stores represented were: A. N. Alexander Co.; Diamond Shoe Store; Ferguson's; Hanover-Curland Co.; Ideal Service Stations; Leron Drug store; Reid and Hughes Co.; Powers Bros.; Shetucket Harness; Pollock Mens' Clothing; William Tire and Supply Co.; Silberman's Furniture store. C. E. Fitch presided. The members made individual reports about their experience with Red Arrow money and it was the unanimous opinion that the public was showing great interest in the Red Arrow project.

Arrangements were made for the second Red Arrow auction which will be held at the Palace theatre, now under Warner Bros. management, on Wednesday evening, September 25. The Palace theatre will again issue $5 in Red Arrow money with every adult paid admission. Admission after 9:30 p. m. will be free.

A feature of the Red Arrow game which is attracting considerable interest is the $200 bag of gold which is to be given to the highest bidding organization at the November auction. This was thoroughly discussed and the members were asked to submit names of organizations that might be interested. These names will be tabulated, and the organizations invited to participate in the competition for the $200 bag of gold.

It has been arranged that organizations which intend to compete for this valuable bag of gold shall register at the Reid and Hughes Co. Any member of the organization may register for it, and everyone registering will receive $5 in Red Arrow money, which may be used by the organization in bidding on the bag of gold. The vouchers which were given to the successful bidders at the first Red Arrow auction, and which will be given to the successful bidders at all auctions, may be used to bid on the bag of gold. These vouchers may be turned over to the organization which wants to get the money. The members of the Red Arrow club are sure that a large number of local organizations will enter into the fun and at the same time have a good chance of winning the valuable bag of gold.

HAD BUSY SUMMER SEASON FOR STATE HUMANE SOCIETY

The first fall meeting of the board of directors of the Connecticut Humane society was held Tuesday afternoon at the Hartford headquarters, President Charles A. Goodwin, presiding. Reports from the different departments covering the months of June, July and August revealed a very busy summer.

The family department reports submitted by the supervisor, Mrs. Nellie T. Brent, showed that 359 complaints had been received and that 773 cases were under investigation involving the welfare of 1,200 children. Of this number medical care was secured for 139. Homes with relatives or other agencies found for 118. Fourteen homes were re-established and living conditions improved in 195 homes. Seventy petitions for commitment were filed and 52 children were committed to state care or institutions. It was necessary to conduct 56 prosecutions for crimes, against children. Among the adults 32 sick, neglected or incompetent persons were reported. Necessary care was secured for 20 and aid by town or placed in town institutions were obtained for 20.

Report of the animal department submitted by Walter H. Phelps showed that 1,010 complaints charging abuse and neglect of animals were received. Of this number 548 were for injured, sick or disabled animals, 130 for beating or cruel treatment, 100 for working when lame or unfit, 56 for being without food, shelter or bedding, 12 for abandonment, 99 for being stray animals and the balance of complaints were of a miscellaneous character. Four hundred and twenty-nine injured small animals were cared for. First aid rendered to 90, food and shelter provided for 160, veterinary care secured for 64, taken from work 66. In the patrol work 1,057 horses were examined, 332 stables visited, 26 animal stores inspected, 177 markets visited and 150 slaughter houses inspected, 2,475 crates of poultry examined and 2,300 head of live stock were inspected. In all of this work it was necessary to conduct prosecutions in 16 cases.

STATE HEALTH DEPARTMENT SEEKS LOCAL SUPPORT

The Connecticut state department of health, having recently received an opinion from the attorney-general relative to the powers of agents of the department in inspecting watersheds, has issued a bulletin on sanitary rules and regulations, saying:

"Each health officer is charged with the sanitation of his community, local nuisances that relate to public health being controlled by him. Inasmuch as the county health officer is an attorney-at-law, legal advice is promptly supplied in cases where a forced compliance with the law is required should the local health officer be unable to handle the situation by persuasion. Conditions that constitute public nuisances, are clearly defined in regulation 101. Special conditions such as privies, cesspools and sewage, garbage and refuse, public dumps, camp ground sanitation, school house, sanitation sanitation of watersheds, swimming pools, spitting, the common towel and drinking cup and fair ground sanitation are so explicitly handled in regulation 103 to 122 as to leave no doubt as to the procedure to be followed by the local health officer in maintaining sanitation in his district.

"Chapter III, of the sanitary code deals with regulations for removal and burial of dead bodies, requirements for the maintenance and operation of hospitals, sanitary control of oyster production, handling of shellfish and sanitation of slaughter houses.

"When the public leaves its home to travel it is still protected by sanitary regulations which require isolation of persons, while traveling, with certain diseases, such as diphtheria, measles, scarlet fever, epidemic cerebrospinal meningitis, anterior poliomyelitis, mumps, whooping cough, influenza, pneumonia, epidemic encephalitis, septic sore throat, rubella, or chicken pox, or any person known to be a carrier of these diseases.

There are also regulations for standards for the water and ice supplies on common carriers, for cleanliness of the cars, regulations for dining cars and toilets in cars and waiting stations.

"A local conscience for cleanliness depends upon individual responsibility of neighbor to neighbor, and to the community at large, as well as the support of the local health officer in his effort to secure for his town the sanitary standards of the state sanitary code."

NORWICH ROTARY CLUB INVITED TO WILLIMANTIC

Invitation to next Tuesday's luncheon meeting of the Willimantic club was received by the Norwich Rotary club at its meeting Wednesday at the Wauregan hotel. There will be a golf match in the afternoon. Report was made by Charles Saxton that 25 boys have been chosen for the boys' band and that rehearsals have started.

As the speaker of the afternoon Bill Park introduced Harvey E. Dodge, a Rotarian of Fall River, Mass., who, after 36 years of Y. M. C. A. work, has been retired for the past three years. The subject of his interesting talk was "Why Men Crack after Forty." Men die, he said, in their early sixties, many of them, and for what reason? Because they refuse to play the physical fitness game according to the rules of the game. He pointed to Gene Tunney as an example of perfect fitness, and while holding no briefs for prizefighters in his talk, he said there were several rules any man could follow to play the game. Do what Gene Tunney did, only in a less intense and more moderate way. First in importance is careful attention to food, to be careful of what you eat and how you eat it. It's up to you whether you are fit or fat at forty, he said. According to insurance statistics there are no old fat men, and if you enlarge your capacity, your heart can't stand it. Next, he advised plenty of sleep, with a vacation away from the monotony of work now and then. If you don't let down now and then, he said sometime you'll let down and stay down. To get the best in you, you've got to relax. Systematic exercise, even though you're busy and have no time, and a periodical physical examination were the final points of his advice. You owe it to yourself, your family, your business, and your community, he said, and it's up to you to stop and take inventory of yourself if you expect to give your community the best you've got.

It was announced that Frank Gowdy, captain-elect of the University of Chicago baseball team, would speak at the meeting next week, and that the members of the Academy baseball squad now in school would be invited guests.

THREATS TO WITHDRAW BY CHINESE DELEGATION

GENEVA, Sept. 11—(AP)—The Chinese delegation to the tenth assembly of the league of nations threatened to withdraw tonight following rejection by a committee of a resolution submitted by Dr. C. C. Wu, minister to Washington and leader of the delegation here.

Dr. Wu asked adoption of a resolution for revision of treaties which have become inapplicable. Article of the covenant of the league says the assembly may from time to time advise reconsideration of such treaties. To the dynamic ambassador these treaties are those conferring extraterritorial privileges in China, on foreign powers.

By a vote of three to four the agenda committee of the assembly tonight decided it was unable to transmit the resolution to the judicial committee of the assembly on the ground that it opened up a question of too vast an importance. The Chinese representative thereupon announced that if the committee did not find a way to change its decision his delegation might be obliged to leave the assembly.

LOCAL BOY ONE OF TEN VETERANS TO REPORT FOR AGGIE FOOTBALL SQUAD

STORRS, Sept. 11—(AP)—Thirty candidates will come out for football practice at Connecticut Agricultural college tomorrow afternoon. Among them will be ten lettermen.

For the line there will be Corwin P. Hawkins, of Hartford, tackle for two years who was captain in 1928, and Pheno Tombari, of Norwich, an end for two years. Hawkins and Tombari were on a team, last year, that held opponents scoreless through seven straight games.

Coach Dole said that since he has veteran backfield performers available, he is not worrying about this department, but he must have a forward wall that will give his ball carriers a chance to get started. The backfield veterans are Ray Ryan, of New Haven, half; Gene LaMoureaux, Hartford, quarter; Rhoar Flydal, Hartford, full; Robert Groat, of Niles, Mich., half; Sam Harger, of Hartford, full; William McComb, of Hartford, half, and Herbert French, Milford, quarter.

As a result of a controversy between alumni and undergraduates, the orange jerseys introduced by Coach J. Wilder Tasker, who came here from Syracuse university in 1922, and who left soon afterward, will be discarded and sweaters in the Aggie colors—blue and white—will be worn, for the first time in seven seasons.

SENATORS RALLY IN 8TH TO TAKE GAME FROM INDIANS

WASHINGTON, Sept.11—(AP)—The Washington Senators scored three runs in the eighth inning of today's game to defeat Cleveland, 5 to 2, and slip into a tie with Detroit for fifth place.

Willis Hudlin and Fred Marberry battled on even terms with the score tied at two and two until the eighth when the Senators fell on the Indians for the winning scores.

RED SOX NOSE OUT DETROIT IN FREE-HITTING AFFAIR

BOSTON, Sept. 11—(AP)—The Red Sox game from behind to defeat Detroit 8 to 7 in a ten inning free-hitting game here today. The game was won on Reeves' single, a bad throw by Page, Detroit pitcher, which allowed him to reach second, and Rothrock's single to left centrefield, which scored him.

Stone and Alexander hit home runs during a six run Tiger rally in the seventh inning which gave Detroit a 7 to 2 lead and apparently broke up the game. The Red Sox, who made 17 hits during the game, came back with three runs in the eighth and two in the ninth, however.

Todt hit a home run for the Sox.

ATHLETICS NEED BUT FOUR VICTORIES TO CLINCH FLAG

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 11—(AP)—The Athletics took an odd-scoring game from the White Sox by 7 to 4 here today as the Chicagoans began their last Philadelphia series of the season. By so doing, as the Yanks were succumbing before the Browns, the Macks reduced their pennant requirements to four victories.

All of the runs in the battle at Shibe park were concentrated into the first inning. After the White Sox had baked Bob Grove for five hits and thier four markers, the Athletics turned upon Ted Lyons and McKain for seven blows and seven runs. Bill Shores entered the box for the A's after a pinch batsman was called on for Grove in the big first inning, and with McKain, made a pitchers' battle of the rest of the route.

TAFTVILLE LEGION TO CLOSE SEASON WITH NEW BRITAIN

At a meeting of the Taftville American Legion post Wednesday evening it was decided that the legion's junior baseball team would close its season with a game with the New Britain post team. The game will be played at Taftville and the time will be announced later.

The Taftville legionnaires have had a most successful season winning the Junior Twilight league title without a defeat and defeating the Shyma club of Taftville in a three game series. New Britain is one of the leading post teams in the state and should give the local club a stiff tussle.

Rybert and Levine Draw

NEW YORK, Sept. 11—(AP)—Floyd Hybert, Newark, N. J., and Georgie Levine of Brooklyn battled through ten hard rounds to a draw decision in the main bout of the Dexter Park boxing show here tonight.

Hybert weighed 149 1-2; Levine 151. Kyugeri Kinari of Japan brought his New York debut to a sudden close by knocking out his opponent, Mickey Doyle of New York in the fourth round of their six rounder. Each weighed 121 1-4.

Perseverance is personified in the subscription go-getter for magazines. Am I right?

Didja ever see anybody so darned persistent as those young women and men who solicit for some subscription agency under the plea of trying to secure an education.

Oh yes, they get an education all right, but it's not the kind that you get out of text books, it's the education that is secured only in the school of hard-knocks.

Just when you are the busiest a neat little thing all decked out in the latest abbreviated fashion trips smilingly up to your desk and asks if you are Mr. John. She knows you are 'cause she asked the janitor before she came in.

She asks if she may have just a minute of your time and being a gentleman you unwittingly say yes, just a minute. Then she starts in to tell you what a consuming desire she has to be a nurse and devote her time to suffering humanity.

She says that she is trying to earn enough money to enter a nationally known hospital as a student nurse. Last year she was going to college and probably next year she'll want to go to Europe to study art. And if you'll only subscribe for one or two magazines you'll help her realize her ambition.

You can plead poverty, ignorance of the written page, blindness or anything else but she has an argument and like all women she just dotes on arguments. If you say you can't afford a magazine she'll show you one that costs next to nothing. If you can't read she'll tell you that you can at least look at the pictures. And if you are blind she'll try to get you to subscribe to a magazine printed in raised letters.

If you get hard-boiled and threaten to throw her out of the office she'll just smile regretfully and tell you that you have no heart to try and deprive said suffering humanity of such a splendid nurse as she'd make.

And before she gets through with you you feel like you was ready to be a patient yourself, but you'd be darned if you'd have her for a nurse. If you try to go on with your work as a cue to her to hie herself to other parts she just sticks her list of books right under your nose.

It's only the fact that you are a gentleman that prevents you from taking a swing at her. Yes, sir, she's perseverance, persistency and all other things synonymous, all rolled into one.

Yet, her life is no bed of roses in a land of milk and honey. She takes a whole lot of abuse in a day from the hard-boiled guy and a lotta mushy wise-cracks from the would-be shiek.

But I'll bet she'd get a whole lot more subscriptions if she came right out and said she was trying to earn her living and not try to create sympathy with that college-education-student-nurse-art-school stuff.

DR. GREGG TAKES LEAD IN SENIOR GOLF TOURNEY

RYE, N. Y., Sept. 11—(AP)—Dr. George T. Gregg, of the Oakmont Country club, Oakmont, Pa., took the lead today in the 25th annual national seniors' golf championship, shooting a brilliant 75 over the Apawamis club course. This score with an 81 carded yesterday gave him a total of 156 and a four stroke lead over the second place score of John D. Chapman, of Greenwich, Conn.

Another Greenwich player, Frank C. Newton, took third place with 162 while Hugh Halsell, 66-year old veteran, of Sleepy Hollow, who has held the title three times, finished fourth.

U. S. TENNIS VETERANS STILL REMAIN IN PLAY FOR THE NATIONAL CROWN

By Ted Vosburgh
Associated Press Sports Writer.

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Sept. 11—(AP)—The old guard of American tennis has yet to be stopped in the drive for the national singles championship.

When a thrilling series of fourth round battles had ended at the West Side stadium late this afternoon, those seasoned contenders Bill Tilden, Frank Hunter and Richard N. Williams, shared places in the final round of eight with four young Americans and a youthful invader from England.

Big Bill, now well on the way to his seventh national crown, coasted into the quarter finals, defeating Henry Culiy of Harvard by scores of 6-3, 7-5, 8-6.

It remained for Williams and Hunter to play heroic roles, in beating off the serious challenges of two earnest members of the younger generation.

Arrayed against Arnold W. Jones, of Providence, R. I., the inimitable Williams, holder of this national championship back in 1914 and 1916 came from behind after losing the first two sets and swept the match with an irresistible streak of the inspired tennis that marked his play of 15 years ago.

The scores were 4-6, 3-6, 6-3, 6-3, 6-2.

In the quarter final round tomorrow Willie is meets another member of the old guard—Hunter at 2 p. m.; while Tilden tackles Johnny Van Ryn, youthful member of the American Davis cup team, at 4 p. m.; Bunny Austin, the lone remaining English player, stacks up against Johnny Doeg at 3; and Fritz Mercur takes on Wilmer Allison.

OHIO STATE DENIES CHARGES OF RECRUITING

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 11—(AP)—Athletic officials at Ohio State university charged with attempting to recruit football players from Heidelberg and John Carroll universities within the past three days, were able tonight to laugh at their accusers in the first instance and to deny emphatically the second.

The officials consider that well meaning but ill-guided and uninformed alumni caused the university embarassment by attempting to interview Merle Hutson, Heidelberg's all-Ohio tackle, at Tiffin, last Monday. The officials denied responsibility, however, and pointed out that under rules of the western conference Hutson never could be eligible to play football for Ohio State.

The other accusation came today from Ralph Vince, coach of the John Carroll team in Cleveland. Vince said that Ted Rosequist, one of his best tackles, had been approached by Fred Sweitzer, former Buckeye halfback and now president of the Clevealnd Ohio State Alumni association, and by Hal Ells, of Toledo, an Ohio State student.

Vince charged that Sweitzer and Ells offered Rosequist tuition, board and a job if he would come to Ohio State. Rosequist said he had been told that Sam Willaman, the Buckeye's new coach, had a list of players on other Ohio teams that Willaman wanted on the Ohio State and that he was one of them. Rosequist declined to comment on Vince's charges and said he would remain with John Carroll.

MISS HICKS CONTINUES TO LEAD FIELD AT CHICAGO

CHICAGO, Sept. 11—(AP)—The 72 hole medal play golf derby rounded the three quarter turn today with Helen Hicks, husky Inwood, Long Island, star, coasting along like a certain winner 10 strokes in front of the faltering field.

After two flashy rounds of 78, Miss Hicks loafed in with an 83, three over par, on the Flossmoor Country club course today. Her closest rival, Mrs. Lee Mida, of Chicago, carded the same score so the New York girl's 10 stroke lead of yesterday was kept intact. Her total for the 54 strokes stands at 239 and only the worst game of her great season in tomorrow's 18 hole finale and Mrs. Mida's best game could dislodge her grip on the title.

Two entrants of national fame, Maureen Orcutt, of White Beeches, N. Y., and Virginia Van Wie, of Chicago, were the only ones to gain on Miss Hicks today but they are so far behind they had but an outside chance to win. Miss Van Wie scored 39-40—79 for the best score of today's round for a 255 total, while Miss Orcutt got 42-38—80 for the grand sum of 251, which kept her in third place.

NORWICH GOLFERS IN ONE-DAY TOURNAMENT AT MIDDLETOWN

The Norwich Golf club was represented in the one-day tournament at the Middletown Country club yesterday by five members. They were Dave Morton, Chappie McKay, Earl Mathewson, Dr. V. D. Eldred and M. E. Standish. The quintet had a nice time on a nice course but modestly refrained from turning in their cards. A high wind and hard fairways made low scoring very difficult. Mr. McKay had the honor of executing the most unique shot of the day, that of rolling the ball up to the pin across a wide water hazard. The shot took place on the second hole where the second shot is played over a pond some forty yards across. Mr. McKay topped his second shot the ball literally rolling across the water from ripple to ripple and came to rest less than a

CORONER FINDS LECLAIR GUILT OF CRIMINAL NEGLIGENCE

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Sept. 11.—In a finding made public today Coroner Arthur G. Bill finds that Earl LeClair of Moosup was criminally careless and negligent in operating his car on the night of Sunday, August 25, when Edward K. Ewart, of Wauregan, who was riding with him was hurled out of the machine and killed when the LeClair car collided with another machine operated by Charles Tracy, of Putnam. The accident happened at the southerly border of Attawaugan, where a road leading out from Dayville, joins the trunk line highway from Danielson to Putnam. In his finding the coroner says in part: "From the testimony taken at the inquest I find that Edward K. Ewart and his wife, Rose Ewart, were riding in a Chevrolet roadster driven by Earl LeClair of Moosup along the state highway from Danielson to Putnam about 11 p. m. on the 25th day of August, 1929. As he approached the filling station situated on the left hand side of said highway he suddenly and without any warning whatever turned directly across the highway and collided with a Ford sedan driven by Charles Tracy of Putnam, throwing the said Edward K. Ewart out of the car and fracturing his skull and causing almost instant death. I further find that the said Charles Tracy was driving at a reasonable rate of speed on the right hand side of the highway and that said accident occurred without fault on his part. I therefore find that said Edward K. Ewart died in the town of Killingly on the 25th day of August, 1929, about 11 o'clock p. m., from a fracture of the skull caused by being thrown from a Chevrolet roadster driven by said Earl LeClaire. I further find that said death was caused by the criminal careless and negligence of said Earl LeClair. Being the prosecuting attorney of the town of Killingly I take official notice of such finding."

Up to late this afternoon no action for the prosecution of LeClair had been taken. He has been at liberty under bonds of $3,000 since shortly after the accident occurred.

REYNOLDS EXONERATED FROM BLAME BY CORONER

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Sept. 11.—Insufficient evidence to hold Gilbert Reynolds of Plainfield criminal negligent in causing the death of Fred Raymond Friman, a Plainfield child, was developed at the inquest in the case Coroner Arthur G. Bill sets forth in a finding made public today. In his finding the coroner says in part: The undersigned coroner within and for the county of Windham having received notice that Fred Raymond Friman, of Plainfield had died at the Day Kimball hospital in Putnam on the 23rd day of August 1929, from injuries received when struck by a truck driven by Gilbert Reynolds of Plainfield on the highway leading from Plainfield to Canterbury. I viewed the body of the deceased and on the 26th, 27th and 28th days of August and Sept. 3rd, I held an inquest as to the cause and manner of said death, at my office in Danielson. From the testimony I find that Fred Raymond Friman died of a fractured skull received in the foregoing accident. While there was some evidence showing negligence on the part of the said Gilbert Reynolds, I am unable to find sufficient evidence of such degree of criminal carelessness and negligence as would warrant me in holding him for trial. I therefore find that said death was not caused by the criminal act, carelessness or negligence of said Gilbert Reynolds, or any other person or persons."

A tentative budget of the town of Killingly for the current financial year has been prepared at the office of the selectmen and shows that the estimated gross selectmen's general expense will be $108,005. As an offset there are estimated credits of $19,580, making the estimated net expenses of the selectmen $88,425. In addition, it is estimated that the net cost of schools will be $93,627, or a grand total of $182,052, as against $199,898, last year. The budget has been prepared by the selectmen for inclusion in the forthcoming annual town reports, and relates to money requirements for the year 1929-1930 in as far as it is practicable to forecast the needs. The budget has been set up as the basis for analysis and modification by the annual town meeting, and, as passed upon at that meeting, to become the budget of the townspeople. In all considerations of the budget the slogan "New Money For New Business" is to be kept in mind it was pointed out today. All the money that is due the town for taxes and accounts is "spoken for" by the business that concerns past budgets, so new money must be raised for new business.

A death last night at her home in East Killingly, where she was born and lived her life time, was that of Mrs. Alice C. Greenslit, 73, widow of Frederick A. Greenslit, who died about 30 years ago. Mrs. Greenslit was born July 23rd, 1856, a daughter of Joseph and Cynthia Taft Catley and of a family identified with the activities of East Killinly for a great many years. She leaves one son, Albert C. Greenslit, resident at East Killingly.

This morning Joseph Gaudreau, 77, for years a resident of the West Side, died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Maxime Gaudreau, in Moosup. In addition to Mrs. Gaudreau he leaves two other children, Mrs. Joseph Mazzerelli, resident here, on the West Side, and Paul of Fairfield.

Republican leaders were swinging into action with vigor today rallying their forces for attendance at Thursday evening's caucus, wherein will develop a lively battle for nominations for selectmen. A surprise announcement by John Z. LaBelle, who has a poultry farm at Ballouville, this afternoon is that he is a candidate for a republican nomination for selectman. Mr. LaBelle stated that Joseph Ware, who has been a talked of candidate, has withdrawn in his favor. Close on the heels of this announcement came another from Frederick I. Racine of Danielson, that Mr. LaBelle's name also will be presented to the democratic caucus Saturday afternoon, and that he is about certain to win a nomination for selectman in that gathering. Mr. Racine pointed out that Mr. LaBelle has been endorsed by the French Democratic club, and that with both the republican and democratic nominations he would be certain of election and also likely might be made first selectman.

PUTNAM

LARGE CROWDS ATTEND FAIR AT WOODSTOCK

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Sept. 11—The countryside of Woodstock was alive today with native color that told the story of the 71st annual fair of the Woodstock Agricultural society. The folks made their way to the ancient gathering place in every form of transportation and even old "Dobbin" was represented. While the fair in every respect carried the markings of the old time country affair—much of the color and romance woven into the showings of the past years was absent today—the middle day. The agricultural exhibit hall was the center of attraction and much of the past richness which was always found in that stately old building was gone. The long period of dryness is believed to have caused this. Major exhibits were the modern electrical devices now available to the farmer. These were plentiful and many booths contained miniature displays that attracted wide interest.

The midway had dwindled this year to almost a shadow of the past. With the exception of a refreshment stand where lemonade, hot dogs and soda pop were vended, a stand with its array of many colored blankets and a few other booths, nothing of interest was to be found there. There were no fakirs, the Indian snake medicine vendor with his frozen reptile was absent and even the man with the gay assortment of balloons was not to be seen.

A feature that proved to be of interest was the showing of the freak calf born in Woodstock this summer, possessing the human head. The monstrosity was mounted on a panel, carefully preserved and every freakish part of its body was visible.

The auto display was good. Dealers from cities and towns within a radius of twenty miles were represented at the showing.

Although the crowds were not record-breaking there was a goodly attendance. At three o'clock figures tabulated at the ticket office and released by one of the officials showed there to be 1350 adults who had paid admissions and 250 children who had passed through the main gate.

Weather conditions were ideal. A warm September sun bathed the fair grounds while a refreshing breeze provided the necessary comfort for the crowds.

At two o'clock the interest was drawn to the race track. The racing was under the direction of J. Otis Fox, Putnam business man and race horse enthusiast. The judges were Sam Roberts, Dr. Hutchins of Danielson and Samuel J. Greene. The timers were Thomas F. Ryan and Henry Welsh, of Putnam and Alfred Buggs, of Woodstock.

The results follow:

The final day will be held Thursday with an afternoon feature being a track meet staged under the direction of the Windham county Y. M. C. A., in which both boy and girl athletes of the county will take part.

"All quiet along the Potomac," was the comment made today by a prominent republican on the eve of the party caucus to be held Thursday evening in the municipal building on Church street. The absence of any contests is believed to be credited to the able, efficient and economical manner in which the party in power has carried on the town affairs during the past year.

William P. Warren and Clarence E. Pierce will be candidates for re-nomination. Irving H. Miron, town tax collector and prominent figure in republican town politics will be the party choice again this year. While there have been some rumors to the effect that Town Clerk Henry N. Benoit is to meet with opposition, it is certain that the present incumbent will secure the nomination.

Committees from the Rotary club, common council and others interested met last evening in the chamber of commerce rooms to discuss the plan of organizing and promoting a Boy Scout organization in Putnam. Officials of the Norwich council of boy scouts, under whose direction and supervision scouting is expanding in Windham and New London counties were present and explained the object of the boys work. Walter N. King, president of the chamber of commerce was appointed to investigate conditions and possibilities in this city and to report at a future meeting.

An official of a bank protection company was in this city Tuesday where he visited local bankers relative to the installation of protective measures to prevent robberies. As a token of appreciation for cooperation afforded him by Captain of Police William J. Jarvis, the police official was presented with a small gas gun. The weekly meeting of the Putnam Rotary club was held today at the Putnam inn. Vice President Alexander Gilman presided in the absence of President Nickoloff. Following the executive session and luncheon, H. J. Hyslinger, Thompson resident and traveller, equipped with maps of Europe presented an interesting travelogue of the places he has visited in foreign countries. The speaker spoke of the places in foreign cities where American tourists throng. Because of this the speaker said the resorts patronized by people of the western hemisphere are rapidly becoming Americanized.

George M. Coffin, receiver of the defunct First National bank of Putnam is the author of a recently published book entitled, "The Federal Reserve System and the Interest Rate". The work of Mr. Coffin is a review of American banking and exchange methods compared to the English financial systems. In his first edition the government representative in charge of the affairs of the Putnam bank tells of the activities of stock speculation, reasons for the high interest rates on loans and the cause of criticism in which the federal reserve system has been recently involved. Mr. Coffin has made a careful study of the topic on which he has written and has dedicated his book to "the man on the street, who may be interested to know what it is all about."

AUCTION OF ARTICLES, PURCHASED SIGHT UNSEEN

Dorcas Circle of The King's Daughters was delightfully entertained at a picnic followed by the regular business meeting by Miss M. A. Burdick and Miss Grace Olin, Tuesday afternoon. The picnic was held on the lawn between the two homes, tables being arranged with the traveling hand-box and its contents as the center of attraction. The members were entertained with readings. The new church, The New Church Organ by Mrs. F. E. Robinson and So Did I, by Mrs. Ella Geer, and a game "A Day's Outing," which later proved to be an outing such as never was. An original poem, The Old Purple Band Box, written by Miss Olin was read by Miss Mabel Wilcox, and was acclaimed as being so very apt. During the summer each member has contributed an article which was to be purchased in turn by some other member. The purchase was made "sight unseen" as to the contents of the packages, and a good sum was realized. Sandwiches, cake, fruit punch and ice cream were served by members of the chapter. The business meeting followed, conducted by the leader, Miss Burdick in her home.

Entertained Mission Circle

Mrs. Thomas Brown entertained the Woman's Mission circle of the Baptist church at her home on East Main street Tuesday afternoon. Seventeen were present and enjoyed the excellent program prepared by Mrs. G. H. Prior and her committee. The members were reminded of their obligations and privileges toward the society by the use of cut-outs of a life-sized hand which were distributed. The fingers bore the words Service, Reading, Attendance, Prayer and Hospitality. The leader dwelt on the significance of the words and asked the members to turn down the fingers representing requirements in which they failed last year and let them be an incentive toward improvement in the year just beginning. The program was based on "The One-Mile-High" convention held at Denver by the Northern Baptist convention last June. Mrs. Prior described the city and surrounding country and items of interest relating to the theme "A Christ-like World" were read by a number of those at the meeting. Mrs. Brown served light refreshments, assisted by Mrs. Nathan Babcock.

Few Register To Be Made

The brand of weather Wednesday, and the fact that the town committeemen were around posting notices for the coming caucus furnished plenty of evidence that fall is in the offing. This is the year when there is to be a regular town meeting voting day. All town officers are to be elected this year, and this will include selectmen, clerk and treasurer, assessors and tax collectors. Last fall, since the new order of things became effective, no town officers were elected.

The registrars, who have been completing the list of To-be-Made have declared the time limit closed. The list for the first voting district shows the smallest numbers for many years. There are 12 men and 12 women who desire to become voters. Last fall there were ten times that number.

Agents of a Bay State trucking company were in town Wednesday, and closed a considerable deal of interest locally. This Fall River concern has purchased the trucks, formerly owned by the Ashland Cotton company. The latter company has had an agreement with the Interstate trucking firm, and they in turn with the Hemingway company. These concerns have handled the Ashland business in this line. Now the Fall River company has leased a part of the one-time Ashland Cotton company's warehouse, off Anthony street. This brick building is owned by the A. O. Tripp company. It is the purpose of the lessees to maintain a local depot and storage warehouse.

The borough gallery sat in on a real movie thrill Wednesday afternoon at the new bridge site on the Quinebaug. The state engineers completed the drilling on the Griswold bank Tuesday where bores have been made to ascertain the depth of ledge. By means of a winch on the Lisbon side the big 5-ton engine and drill gear was drawn across 300 feet of rocky river bed, on improvised wooden runners. The teaming job, to maintain the engine on an even keel, kept the three men busy. The uneven rocky bottom, together with the swiftly moving current, suggested some western mining operation. At fourteen feet below the mean low water mark, on the Griswold side there lies a ledge of unusually hard blue rock. Through the hollow drills, six feet of core has been brought up as evidence, which the state will furnish to the construction engineers.

The Missionary society of the Congregational church met Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. F. E. Robinson. The president, Miss S. K. Adams, presided, and prayer was offered by Miss Lucy Baldwin, of Canterbury. Mrs. Robinson, Mrs. C. D. Wolf and Ms. E. A. Faust were appointed to conduct a food sale. Delegates appointed to attend the eastern division council of Congregational women of Connecticut, to be held at the Westfield Congregational church, Danielson, October 3rd are, Mrs. Robinson, Mrs. E. H. Hiscox, Mrs. Abraham Zegeer, Miss M. A. Burdick, Mrs. John Whalley and Mrs. G. T. Goodenough. Mrs. L. E. Kilpatrick, of Canterbury, was the speaker of the afternoon. Her son Norman, a graduate of Norwich Free Academy and of Brown university, went a year ago as a teacher in the American college at Sofia, Bulgaria. Miss Baldwin read a letter from the young man describing the country and some of its customs. Mrs. Kilpatrick read another letter and described most vividly the ways of the people and the work of the schools. She displayed many pictures and needlework done by the people. It was one of the most interesting meetings ever held by the society. The Sunshine bags were brought in at this meeting. Tea and fancy cookies were served by Mrs. Robinson, Mrs. Edith Soule and Miss Jayne Ricketts.

Donald G. Buckingham is to enter Suffield school for boys next week.

Beginning At Jerusalem

The World Wide Guild girls held their first fall meeting Tuesday evening in the Baptist vestry. The vice president, Ruby Gray, presided. The program was in charge of Mrs. R. A. Anagrams were given to solve, the answers being principally Bible cities where important events occurred. Plans were made to hold a food sale soon.

The Gardiner class of the Methodist church met at Mrs. J. Frank Gardiner's home this week, for a program with piano solos by Grace Gardiner, readings by Mrs. Ella Geer, several items of interest given by Mrs. Alice Anthony, and an account by Mrs. A. C. Burdick of her visit at Saranac, N. Y. Refreshments were served by the hostess.

Troubled With Eczema on Arms 14 Years. Cuticura Heals.

"Eczema broke out in pimples and little sore eruptions and spread all over my arms. It itched and sometimes burned, and when I scratched my arms they were worse. My clothing aggravated the breaking out, and some nights I could not sleep on account of the irritation. The trouble lasted about fourteen years.

"I sent for a free sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and after using it a few times the eczema began to get better. I purchased more and in about three weeks I was completely healed." (Signed) Miss Dora Bouthillier, 394 Apponaug Ave., Westcott, R. I., Jan. 10, 1929.

PRICES IN STOCK MARKET REBOUNDED, DUE TO POWERFUL POOL OPERATIONS

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—(AP)— The stock market had one of its "day after" rebounds today, which have become characteristic of late on days succeeding floods of selling. Price indices indicated that more than half of yesterday's losses were regained. Trading was on large volume, nearly 4,800,000 shares changing hands.

Powerful pool operations in selected issues prompted general short covering, which accelerated the rally. Operations for the most part appeared to be professional, and were attributed to powerful banking interests and investment trusts. Commission houses stated that the public was not a large buyer, although western wires brought in a fair amount of business.

The outstanding bullish development of the day was an influx of call money, which carried the rate down to 7 per cent, after renewals at 9, as compared to yesterday's closing rate of 10. The ease in money was attributed by bankers to the piling up of funds here against the mid-month settlements. The market failed to show the Wednesday uneasiness, customary of late, over the prospect of an increase in the Bank of England's discount rate. Private advices to Wall street from London indicated that it was felt such action would be postponed for at least another week.

The announcement that the new treasury offering of about $300,000,000 in certificates brought in subscriptions of nearly $1,500,000,000 was generally construed bullishly, although it was felt that the tax exempt feature, rather than the coupon rate of 4 7-8 per cent, was the principal attraction. Formation of several new investment trusts was interpreting as indicating that important banking interests still regard the stock market situation as holding interesting possibilities. Several conservative commission houses, however, advised their customers to use upturns to lighten accounts, and to prepare for further reactionary tendencies until credit relaxes somewhat and business becomes more clear.

The day's business news included several pleasing earnings and dividend actions. Electric Investors reported net for the 12 months ending July 31 as of about $15,000,000, as compared to about $3,500,000 in the previous twelve months. Air Reduction directors declared an extra dividend of $1.50, and directors of Standard Brands placed the stock on $1.50 annual basis. Crude Oil production was reported as declining but moderately during the previous week, and F. W. Dodge Corp. reported that building contracts let during the first week of the month dropped 16 per cent reported a little better inquiry by railroads, but on the whole little change.

Oils were leaders of the advance, sponsors of the movement asserting that the market was more than discounting the over production problems In view of current earnings, Standard of New Jersey was rushed up nearly 6 points to a record price for the present stock above 80. Royal Dutch was bid up about as much to a new peak above 10.

Several issues said to be in small floating supply were hurled up rapidly, American Machine and Foundry rising 23 points to a record price. Case Threshing jumped about 17 points, then slid off 10 from the top. Commercial Solvents made an extreme gain of 16 points.

Johns Manville was again a strong feature, selling up about 13 points. Simmons climbed 11 to a new top. Food shares displayed group strength, such issues as Corn Products, Kraft Phenix, and Hershey Chocolate reaching new peaks. Standard Brands was in good demand. Utilities likewise were urged forward, American and Foreign Power jumping about 9 points, and such leaders as United Corp., Consolidated Gas and Public Service of New Jersey making substantial gains. The rails were firm, Baltimore and Ohio reaching a new peak.

General Electric mounted about 9 points, then lost half its gain. Radio was traded in heavy volume, mounting about 4 points. U. S. Steel and American Telephone closed a couple of points higher, after making extreme gains of more than 4 points.

The market generally closed a few points below the best levels of the day, and a few stocks closed lower. Pere Marquette dropped 8 points, and Allis Chalmers, Hawaiian Pineapple and G. W. Helm lost about 4. Collins and Aikman sagged 2 points to a new 1929 low at 39.

In the commodity markets, the government crop reports sent wheat up more than 2 cents a bushel, and corn nearly as much, but cotton futures again were under pressure, losing from 65 cents to $1.05 a bale.

Foreign exchanges held barely steady, with Sterling cables still at $4.84 3-4. The Japanese yen was strong, mounting 1-4 of a cent to hear its high for the year.

WESTERLY

LOCAL YOUNG WOMAN ON THE AIR FROM WEAN

Westerly radio fans were surprised Wednesday morning shortly after 10 o'clock to hear the voice of a Westerly young woman soloists in three vocal numbers. The radio was that of Station WEAN, the Shepard stores of Providence, from the Providence-Biltmore hotel roof and in the program of "WEAN Women's Institute, by Jane Abbott." The soloist was Miss Mary M. Lynch, of 13 1-2 West street. There is promise of her being heard again in the same program.

Talking picture goers of Westerly theatres on Wednesday evening also saw and heard a former Westerly girl, "Sylvia Beecher" Miss Thursa Dock, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Dock, who at one time resided in the house on High street where the Colonial club is now located. The picture was "Innocents of Paris," which features Maurice Chevalier.

LSST THEIR SAVINGS OF $300 WHEN MARTELL HOME BURNED

The home of Oscar R. Martell and family on the Pequot trail, the Old Hinckley hill road was consumed by fire late Tuesday afternoon with practically the entire contents. The flames started from a gasoline stove on which Mrs. Martell was preparing the evening meal for her husband and family of three small children. She was using the hand pump to increase the pressure when the handle jumped out of her hands, and gasoline spraying around, quickly became ignited. The flames travelled up her sleeve and she screamed as she dashed to the sink to put out the fire. Her screams awakened her husband who was asleep upstairs and when he came down a tub of water thrown on the blaze only seemed to spread the fire. The weather dried two-story house burned rapidly. Unable to stop the fire, Martell ran to the nearest farmhouse and a telephone call was sent to the Pawcauck Fire department which responded, under Chief Engineer Joseph Purtill, with pumper and hook and ladder truck. The firemen found Mr. and Mrs. Martell before the burning house and only kitchen utensils, two chairs and an ice box salvaged. The booster tanks were quickly emptied to prevent the spread to the nearby small barn and garage with a small auto. A fire hydrant in the district was returned to for more water as the brooks were too low to be of service. Consumed in the fire were some $300 savings, a nearly new piano, and clothes, except the clothing worn to school by the children. The family, who have occupied the place for five years, carried no insurance and they were forced to depend upon the kindness of neighbors for shelter for the night. The place is owned by Joseph Abdalla of Pawcatuck. He is reported as carrying some insurance on the property.

Two 4-ton iron girders, over forty feet in length which will support the front of the new business block being constructed on High street, arrived in Westerly Wednesday afternoon by motor truck. A portable derrick was rigged to hoist the great beams into place in front of the building where they will bear the weight of the tar and gravel roof of the one-story block with a front elevation on High street of twenty feet. Two sets of flashings are to be placed in the wall of the Hinckley-Mitchell block adjoining the new structure to prevent seepage between the two independent side walls.

Two groups of representatives of the State Board of Public roads operated in Westerly in the early hours of Tuesday night stationed on the Nooseneck Hill road and the Boston Post road. Examinations were especially made to see that the motor light laws were being observed. There were no arrests made and minor violators of the laws were given 72 hours to have defects remedied.

A large captive advertising balloon which has been flown for several days at the end of a mooring rope at the Sidner factory on Friendship street extension near the Westerly freight yard parted company with its ground gear in the hard blow of Wednesday morning. When last observed it was floating off in the direction of Quonochontaug with the coast of Spain in its path of travel.

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—(AP)—Net income for the Phelps Dodge Corporation for the current year will exceed $16,000,000 after all charges, but before depletion, it is shown in preliminary estimates by officials of the company, which assume a continuance of the present firm tone in the copper metal market. Last year, the company earned slightly more than $10,000,000 after charges, but before depletion.

Directors of the Ground Gripper Shoe Co., Inc., will meet next week to discuss among other matters the declaration of an extra dividend on the common stock.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO Sept. 11.— (AP)— Foreshadowings of big damage to wheat in Argentine, together with confirmation of unparalleled North American grain shortage, gave all cereal prices a decided upturn today. Wheat traders focused attention especially on 33c a bushel jump in the flaxseed market at uenos Aires, usually the quickest barometer of havoc met with by Argentine wheat. Besides, government crop figures current today were cited as showing 1,251,805,000 bushels total shortage of grain this season in the United States and Canada, with the domestic potato crop 25 per cent below last year.

Closing quotations on wheat were strong 2c to 2 5-8c a bushel higher than yesterday's finish. Corn closed 1-4c to 2c up, oats 1-4c to 3-4 a 7-8c advanced, and provisions unchanged to a setback of 7c.

Latest advices at hand today said prolonged absence of rain where most needed in Argentine has seriously impaired the Argentine wheat crop and that in Santa Fe province alone the damage amounts to all the way from 40 to 50 per cent. However, the Argentine forecast today pointed to a continuance of drought intensified by climbing temperature, and it was asserted that many Argentine farmers were plowing up wheat and flax to replant corn. In addition to the Argentine and to stimulating aspects of the United States and Canadian government crop reports, wheat trade authorities here laid stress on striking similarities between the action of the Liverpool wheat market this year and in 1924, when Liverpool values rose 60c a bushel from mid-September on.

Under such circumstances, wheat toward the last today outdid corn as leader of the general price advance of the entire list of grains, although at first the corn market was the quickest to show an upward trend, the United States government estimate of corn yield this season indicating much more severe losses during the last month than the majority of traders had looked for, whereas domestic wheat production showed something of a gain. Wheat traders practically ignored continued apparent absence of a gain. Wheat traders practically ignored continued apparent absence of export demand today for wheat from North America, and also gave little heed to intelligence that the world's available supply of wheat had increased 10,262,000 bu. for the week, and is now 355,072,000 bu. against 178,467,000 bu. a year ago. On the other hand, primary domestic receipts of wheat today were nearly 1,000,000 bushels less than was the case last year.

Corn owed its advance mainly to the influence of the government crop report and to possible subsequent further reduction of the official crop estimate owing to end-of-the-season frost damage. Oats also responded to the government crop report, and rose to a new high price record for the season.

Provisions tended to sag owing to downturns in the value of hogs.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—(AP)—Moderate pressure exerted against the bond list today caused prices to drift lower. Liquidation was of small proportions, but was sufficiently noticeable in all groups to indicate a lack of favorable sentiment.

In the last hour of trading came the announcement that the new issues of treasury certificates, bearing 4 7-8 per cent interest had been oversubscribed nearly three times. The large inquiry for the tax-exempt securies was about what had been expected, and the news found listed obligations of the United States selling at slight declines which prevailed at the close.

From Chicago came word that a state of Illinois issue of 4 per cent bonds, totaling $11,000,000, had been awarded to a syndicate headed by the Continental Illinois company on a bid of 92.627, the last previous sale of similar obligations—a $10,000,000 loan floated last June—brought 93.775, but since that time the marekt was slumped almost steadily.

Convertibles made a show of strength in the day's dull trading and advances running as high as 5 points had developed by mid-afternoon. The gains were not held in their entirety, however, so that the close found American Telephone 4 1-2, which soared turned over with a flash of their early summer activity, at a net advance of 1 7-8 points against a maximum rise for the session of approximately 5. Atchison 4 1-2s moved within a restricted range, finishing a fraction higher, and International Telephone 4 1-2s behaved similarly, although the last sale was 1 1-2 above the Tuesday close. Railroad bonds of standard types showed general easiness, although the prevailing declines ran to fractions. Larger losses cropped out in a handful of issues, notably Chicago, Great Western 4s, and Pennsylvania Gold 5s, off 1 each. New Haven debenture 4s, off 2, and New Orleans, Texas and Mexico 5s, off 2 1-2 all on small turnovers.

Bethlehem Steel 6s, to be redeemed on February 1 at 105, suffered a net loss of 1-2, dropping to 104 1-2. Certainteed Products debenture 5 1-2s featured the industrial group, however, on a 2 1-2 point rise. Armour 5 1-2s and Armour Real Estate 1-2s gained fractionally. Steels as a whole were mixed.

Utilities yielded a substantial part of Tuesday's advance. New York Edison 6 1-2s went down to equal the year's low of 110 1-2. Foreign sugars were dull and irregular. The most conspicuous was a 3 point rise in Vertientes Sugar 7s.

Foreign obligations drew scant attention and the tone was easy.

MYSTIC

CONTEST IS EXPECTED AT REPUBLICAN CAUCUS

It is expected that there will be a lively contest at the republican caucus, held in the Stonington town hall this evening, when William L. Main, of Mystic, opposes D. Everett Hoxie, of Wequetequock, for the office of tax collector. Mr. Main is not the unanimous choice of the committee, as George R. Swain, committeeman from Old Mystic, stands by Mr. Hoxie and thinks that all taxpayers of the town should do likewise. The latter has a fine record as tax collector. During his five years in that office, he has collected amounts never before secured by a Stonington collector and has established new records. There are 2460 entitled to vote and it is claimed that many democrats will vote republican at this time.

PRESIDENT EIGHT

sets New Stock Car Record in 1929 Pikes Peak Climb!

—Adds famous Penrose Trophy to 11 world and 23 international records

Studebaker's winning President Eight, piloted by Glen Shultz, covered the 12 miles and 2200 feet to the summit of Pikes Peak—in 21 minutes, 43.4 seconds. Average speed was 34.3 miles per hour. 154 breath-taking curves make this course a supreme test of motor car balance and handling ease. That running conditions were not so advantageous this year was emphasized by the running time in the non-stock event, which was approximately 41 seconds slower than last year. Yet, The President's time was the fastest ever made by any stock car over this course!

A strictly stock and fully equipped Studebaker President Eight, driven by Glen Shultz, set the fastest stock car time in history to win the most arduous hill climbing contest known to motoring—the Annual Penrose Trophy Race to the summit of Pikes Peak, 14,109 feet above sea level!

Already holding, undisputed, more official stock car records for speed and endurance than all other makes of American cars combined, Studebaker nows adds another triumph—in climbing Pikes Peak faster than any other stock car, regardless of power or price.

The Pikes Peak Climb was sanctioned, timed and checked by the American Automobile Association. A. A. A. officials followed the same procedure in selecting the winning stock model President Eight as they did previously with the strictly stock President Eight which traveled 30,000 miles in 26,326 consecutive minutes. Picked at random from the Studebaker factory, The President was checked and certified as strictly stock before the race, and again after the run.*

The President Eight's record conquest of Pikes Peak is further proof of eight-cylinder performance supremacy—just as eight-cylinder popularity has been proved by Studebaker's world leadership in the sale of eights! Why wait a year to own an eight when you can own the car of tomorrow today!

You can buy a duplicate of the Pikes Peak President from any Studebaker dealer. See it—drive it—own a Studebaker champion eight at a new, low One-Profit price! And remember, your car will be worth more a year from now—if it is an eight!

*High compression head (6½ to 1) and mountain gear ratio (4.08 to 1) were used—either of which is optional and available to any Studebaker purchaser anywhere.

FIRE IN MODEL LAUNDRY, NEW LONDON, DOES DAMAGE ESTIMATED AT $5,000

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 11.—The fire department was called out at 5:30 o'clock this afternoon for a threatening blaze in the building occupied as the Model laundry, Fred Fabricant, proprietor, and owned by Anthony Piscatella and Joseph Grillo, on Jefferson avenue. While the fire lasted it was a hot one and the damage to the stock, machinery and building is estimated at close to $5000. The laundry was recently opened for business, having been in operation but a few weeks.

The fire was caused by the partitions about the boiler being too close to the power supply, for the flimsy wooden encasements became ignited and paved the way for a fire.

Fabricant and an employe were in the front part of the laundry when the former discovered the fire. The flames were then leaping toward the ceiling and spreading rapidly. The employe ran to Box 41, corner of Bank and Colman streets and pulled in an alarm, while Fabricant played a stream of water on the fire with a garden hose. By the time that the firemen arrived at the building, which is of brick construction, the flames had burst through the roof and through the windows. Ockford Hose company stretched a line of hose to the rear and Niagara Engine company played a stream on the blaze from the front and within 20 minutes the fire had been extinguished. So hot was the blaze that an adjoining building was threatened for the blinds and clapboards were burned and the heat cracked the windows.

Mrs. John Breskovics and infant daughter, of Lyme, patients at Home Memorial hospital, were discharged today.

Deputy Fire Chief Calvin D. Edmunds is having his vacation of two weeks. He left for Atlantic City tonight. During his absence from duty, Alfred Harvey, driver of Konomoc Hose company, will be acting deputy.

WOMAN'S CAR DAMAGED— SHE WANTS GRAIMO IN COURT

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 11—Mrs. Ballestrini, 14 East street, made complaint to the police late this afternoon that the driver of a commercial automobile carrying Connecticut registration, 27,944 was guilty of evasion of responsibility and she requested his arrest. It was found that at the state motor vehicle department the car is registered in the name of Mario Graimo, 39 Shaw street, and he was arrested by Motorcycle Officer George Cockell. He will be in court tomorrow, for Mrs. Ballestrini said that she would appear and testify against Graimo. Mrs. Ballestrini stated that her automobile, which she had purchased but recently, was parked on Pequot avenue and that the auto driven by Graimo backed against it and damaged the pleasure car. Mrs. Ballestrini said that Graimo realized that his car had collided with her auto for after the bump, Graimo peered back at the damaged machine and then drove away. It was because of this that Mrs. Ballestrini lodged complaint and requested Graimo's arrest.

Providence Driver Too Fast

Jose Antunes, 46 Mineral Springs avenue, Providence, R. I., was arrested by Patrolman Ernest Opperman this afternoon charged with failing to stop at an automatic danger signal on Bank street. He will be in court tomorrow.

Five cases of intoxication await trial in the police court tomorrow for that number were arrested this afternoon and this evening. Besides being charged with intoxication, one of the gang is also charged with begging. He was arrested at the corner of State and North Bank streets by Patrolmen Edward Skoczylas and George Bruhns.

Youths playing with matches was the cause of the city's dumping ground, adjoining Calkins park becoming ignited last night. The blazing refuse caused a still alarm to be sent to fire headquarters. Ockford Hose company, which responded, soon had the blaze in the blazing papers and boxes extinguished with chemicals.

Ignored Warning Signal

James Herrick, Watch Hill, was arrested this morning by Captain Andrew McCarthy, of Groton police department, charged with failing to stop at an automatic danger signal on Thames street. Herrick posted a bond of $25 for his appearance in the Groton town court next Monday.

BALINE BURGLAR ALARM SOUNDED WITHOUT CAUSE

The burglar alarm at the store of B. Baline, 33 Main street, sounded at 5:40 o'clock this morning causing several police officers to rush there. When the officers reached the store there was no signs at the entrance or the windows that an attempt had been made to force them and being satisfied that the alarm was sounded through some form of defectiveness, an effort was made to communicate with the proprietor. In his absence, Mrs. Baline went to the store and had the alarm shut off. The police frequently are summoned to various places of business through the burglar alarm sounding when no attempt has been made to rob the business houses.

THOMPSON AND DAVIDSON HAVE THEIR CASES NOLLED

Clarence W. Thompson and Richard C. Davidson were found not guilty, in the police court today, of violation of the city's building code. The charge was causing work to be begun on the construction of a pier on waterfront property owned by Thompson on Pequot avenue, opposite Keeney lane, which, when completed, it was intended to use as a gasoline supply station for boats. The decision was handed down by Judge Daniel M. Cronin after two days' deliberation over a point of law. The decision makes it possible for Thompson to have the building operations continued and carried to early completion.

Thompson gave the contract for the building of the pier, which is in zone A, to Davidson, and work was started. He also left his application upon the desk of Building Inspector Gunn during the latter's absence from duty. When it was ascertained that piles were being driven, complaint was made to Prosecuting Attorney Max Boyer and he issued a warrant for the arrest of Thompson, Davidson and the workers of the latter. Detective Sergeant John Cavanaugh and officers went to Pequot avenue Saturday, rowed to where the building work was in progress and arrested Davidson and three workmen. Thompson was arrested when he appeared in court at the trial of the workers Monday. The trial occupied the greater part of the day and until it was claimed by counsel for the defense that no city law had been violated. It was contended that Thompson made his application in proper form, that it was not uncommon for owners of property to cause building operations to start pending the approval of their application and that was done in this case. Judge Cronin ordered an adjournment of court to decide upon the point of law and today rendered his decision.

HONES WOMAN IS FINED— NARROWLY ESCAPES JAIL

In the police court today, Nellie Hones, colored, residing at 178 Water street, was charged with conducting a house of ill fame. Fannie Evans, colored and Everett Williams, white and a sailor, were charged with being frequenters. The Jones woman pleaded guilty and was fined $150 and costs and sentenced to 30 days in jail, but execution of the jail sentence was suspended. The charge against both the Evans woman and Williams was nolled. The two women and sailor were arrested several nights ago when Patrolman George Perkins, who had been watching the Water street house, observed numerous white men entering and departing from the place. A raiding squad was formed, but when the raiders entered only the Jones woman was in sight. Going to a sleeping room, the officers found Williams in the act of retiring and the Evans woman was secreted in a closet.

Bradford Lake was charged with non-support of his wife and little son. The case was continued a month in order to assure the court that he would keep his promise and properly provide for the comfort and care of his family.

James McTough, 55 Prest street, a truck drvier, charged with overloading the truck, was fined $25 and costs. He was arrested last night by State Police Officer John Smith.

Broadway Theatre

Imagine a football team of movie actors lined up in a gridiron battle against the famed Trojans of the University of California—with the latter on their home grounds in the beautiful Bowl of Roses—and the Trojans instructed to "play football—regardless!"—and you have a faint idea of the speedy, flashy, blood-tingling game which is but one of the many highlights in the all-talking pep-drama of co-ed collegiate life, "College Love," now being shown on the Broadway screen. The "big night" before the "big game," the hot class rivalry, the supreme loyalty to Alma Mater, the stolen kisses beneath the sly campus moon, frat parties, road house festivities—in fact all the routine of a college education (with the books left out) has its part in this peppy film-history of Caldwell college—wherever that is — with George Lewis, Dorothy Gulliver, Eddie Phillips, Hayden Stevenson, Churchill Ross and a score of other film-collegiate favorites in the cast, assuring the audiences of plenty of action and snappy dialogue. The latest issue of Fox Movietone news— the headlines in sight and sound—and selected Vitaphone specialties including Ben Bernie's big act "Here Comes the Showboat," Jim and Betty Morgan, vaudeville favorites, and Pat West with his Middies, complete an interesting program. Sunday, the Broadway screen will show Jack Oakie and Skeets Gallagher with Evelyn Brent in Ring W. Lardner's master classic of baseball and slang, "Fast Company." Oakie is cast as "Hurry Kane," one of Lardner's best loved characters, a small town sandlot player with big league ambitions, and a ready tongue, ever willing to broadcast his own abilities to a more or less willing world. The New York Yanks play a prominent part in the picture, which abounds in action, comedy and thrills, with snappy crackling dialogue throughout.

Announcement.

Announcement is made of a big Ku Klux Klan meeting at the North Stonington fair grounds on Saturday afternoon and evening, Sept. 14, 1929. Grounds open at 10.00 a. m. Addresses will be made by well known speakers of state wide and national reputation. The public is cordially invited to attend.

UNION

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Bradway, their sons, Lawrence and John, and their daughter, Pearl, started Monday on their return to their home in Fertile Valley, Florida. They motored north last June and have spent the summer with relatives in Brimfield, Mass., and in Stafford and Union. They came with tent and camping outfit and have done light housekeeping while making their headquarters in Brimfield. They are returning to Florida in the same way, and expect the "home run" will be covered in about a week. They were some of the first settlers to start a home in Fertile Valley a few years ago. Sebring, their market and post office town, is forty miles distant. The road is good and they usually receive their mail twice a week. Mr. Bradway is a native of Union and went to Florida for his health. He has found the change of climate helpful.

Al Graham, the author, of Newburyport, Mass., and New York city, was the guest of Prof. and Mrs. F. Alexander Magoun at their Mashapaug cottage during last week.

Monday a light but most welcome rain came and everybody is hoping for enough to start wells, springs and brooks. No more fire hazard exists while the dampness and present heavy fog remain.

Schools here opened September 3. The pupils from here who attended Stafford high school last year, returned on the opening day, September 4. There are eight pupils from Union and two others who entered from Union schools, but are now living with their families in Stafford. Some of the pupils from Union have made very good records.

The new supervisor of schools, who succeeds Martin B. Robertson, in charge for four years, is Calvin Stanley, a graduate of the University of Tennessee. He has done graduate work in Columbia university and elsewhere. His headquarters are in Putnam.

Miss Mary E. Agard has resumed teaching in Stratford. The school opened last week.

Fairman Howard returned Friday night from a motor trip through New York state and Canada. Syracuse, Thousand Islands and Montreal were among the places visited. The return trip was through the Adirondacks.

CHAPLIN

Rev. Joseph F. Cobb of South Windham supplied the pulpit Sunday and his thoughtful and inspiring sermon based in Ezkiel 27:8 was much enjoyed.

Rev. Frank A. Fuller, of Putnam, is engaged to supply the pulpit next Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. George E. Snow attended the Sheldon reunion at the Lakeville house in Warren, Saturday and Sunday. About eighty were present.

Mr. and Mrs. Snow spent Sunday night with friends in Hartford and returned home Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Palmer and Miss May Flowery of White Plains, N. Y., and Roy Baker, of Newark, N. J., were week end visitors with Mrs. Harriet Paine who has lived with Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Gallup the past eleven years.

The two schools in town opened the fall term Wednesday. The center school enrolled 32 and the South Chaplin school 28. The registration at the latter school is the smallest in a number of years.

Mrs. W. L. Copeland and daughter Muriel spent the recent holiday with relatives at Eastern Point.

Holiday guests with Mr. and Mrs. George England were Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Shanley and children Jean and Herbert, Jr., of Holyoke, Mass., Rev. and Mrs. David W. Lovett and Mr. and Mrs. William Shippee of Willimantic and Miss Celia England of New York.

Ten students from Chaplin are attending Windham high school, Willimantic: Ethel A. Hall, Josephine Kruglinsky and Arvo Nukala, freshmen; George A. Laudeck, sophomore; Louise E. Laudeck, Merv E. Shuba and Edith M. Welch, juniors; Pauline Laudeck and Walter Phillips, seniors.

Mrs. Wilfred E. Burdick and infant daughter Charlotte Norine and Mrs. Morton Burdick and infant son Richard Morton, have returned to their home from Willimantic.

Mrs. John Matuck, and four children, have moved from their farm in Chewink to Willimantic where Mrs. Matuck has found employment.

54TH ANNUAL

Washington County Fair
IS NOW CARRYING ON

CHILDREN UNDER 12 YEARS ADMITTED FREE EVERY DAY OF FAIR

Do you realize the thousands of employees that there are in the Federal Department of Agriculture, and the thousands more that are in the State Department of Agriculture, and the still larger army connected with the various experiment stations throughout the country, which include the so-called Extension Workers, 4-H Club Leaders, the so-called Home Demonstrators, and County Agents? All of these persons are supposed to be working solely for the benefit of American agriculture. This list comprises more employees supported by the taxpayer's money than there are in the standing army of the nation. Now, right here in Southern New England we have a full-grown agricultural Fair. Here, you just don't hear about it, but for 75c you can come and see what is actually being done by the farmers of Southern New England. Here you can see the results of "practically going out and doing it." Where can one get a larger dividend in agriculture from an investment of 75c.

We want our "brothers and sisters" from the cities and villages to come down to old South County tomorrow and join us and stay the rest of the week. We will show you how we farmers actually "stick our toenails into the soil of Southern New England" and turn the trick.

There is a big display of fruits, flowers, fancy work, art, in fact everything that goes with a big fair.

The bands are playing! Keith-Albee vaudeville circuit is showing in front of the grandstand. The trotting horses are competing for $1000 stakes. One of the largest horse shows ever held in the state of Rhode Island will carry on for two days—Friday and Saturday. Here you will see the old fashioned road hacks in competition and once more four-in-hands will whirl around the half mile track. Saddle horses, ponies, hunters, jumpers from the Blue-Blood stables of America are competing in special events. The fair is open day and night. If you can't come in the day time, come at night and get a seat on the grandstand and eat peanuts and throw the shells on the floor. Enjoy the show and the mammoth display of fireworks.

OLD HOME WEEK IN SOUTHERN RHODE ISLAND IS NOW GOING STRONG AT THE WASHINGTON COUNTY FAIR. THIS IS OUR LAST APPEAL: THIS IS THE LAST TIME THIS YEAR WE ARE GOING TO TELL YOU ABOUT IT. COME BY BUS, TRAIN, AUTOMOBILE, OR "SHANKS MARE," ONLY BE SURE TO GET HERE!

People who had tried everything else in vain write how they gained 5 to 15 pounds in a few weeks. Skinny limbs quickly round into chubby curves. Pimply skin clears up. Tired feeling vanishes.

SCOUTING WINDHAM COUNTY TOWNS TO SAVE WHITE PINES FROM RUST

Woodstock and Eastford are two Windham county towns in which scouts are at work in pine areas are being examined for the presence of wild currants and gooseberries which will be destroyed in order to protect the pines against blister rust. Three crews are now at work in the region around these towns and also around Stafford and Somers in Tolland county.

Today white pine is the most valuable timber tree in Connecticut, but if the blister rust is not prevented from spreading, the state will see the white pine vanish from her hills just as the chestnut tree disappeared a few years ago. It is estimated that the state has 50,000 acres of pure pine stands and 150,000 acres of pine in mixture with other timber. At a low estimate of $10 an acre, this growing timber would be worth $2,000,000.

The white pine blister rust has already infected Connecticut so severely that in certain sections 50 to 60 per cent of the trees are dead or dying. Two agencies, the Connecticut Agricultural Experiment Station and the United States Bureau of Plant Industry, are working in cooperation to protect the historic white pine from the blister rust as judiciously as departments of health seek to prevent the spread of epidemics among human kind.

Control of the white pine blister rust means the destruction of all currant and gooseberry bushes within 900 feet. European black currants are so dangerous that Connecticut law forbids the possession of them. In the summer months, the disease develops on the bushes and in the fall the wind carries it to the pines. The trees do not infect each other and where no currant or gooseberry bushes grow, pines do not die from the blister rust.

That the first state-wide eradication of currants and gooseberries within infecting distance of white pines will be completed by July 1, 1930, is the belief of J. E. Riley, Jr., of the United States Bureau of Plan Industry, who is in charge of the field work in Connecticut. When that is done, the state still will be scouted from year to year. Plants will grow from seed or sprout from roots which are not completely removed.

The northern third of Connecticut is her natural pine area and there the wild currants and gooseberries are abundant. The southern two-thirds and comparatively safe.

SAYS NO "MELONS" FOR A. T. AND T. STOCKHOLDERS

That stockholders of the American Telephone and Telegraph company will not receive at any time extra dividends, or "melons", that if earnings of the company are in excess of a fair financial return to the owners of the property, numbering about 400,000 shareholders, the excess must "either be spent for the enlargement and improvement of the service furnished or the rates charged for the service must be reduced," were interesting statements made by Charles E. Rolfe, assistant to the vice president of the Southern New England Telephone company, in a talk Wednesday at New London at a meeting of the New London district conference boards of the Telephone Employees' association. Mr. Rolfe's statement in this connection was a quotation from an address made by Walter S. Clifford, president of the American Telephone company, and was part of an interesting talk for the employees on the "Philosophy of the Business".

That the employees of the company may be a powerful force in applying the philosophy of the business, which summed up is "the best possible telephone service at the lowest cost consistent with financial safety," was stated by Mr. Rolfe. He referred to the more than a million contacts which telephone operators have every day with patrons of the company, of the other thousands of contacts between users of the telephone and employees in various other branches of the service, and said that in every contact there arises, usually, an opportunity for the telephone worker to help impart an understanding of the company's definite policy toward the public and that through such understanding will come an even more favorable public attitude toward the business and its workers in general.

The meeting here today brought together the representatives of the employees from all the exchanges in the New London district. Business sessions were held by the plant, traffic and commercial groups during the forenoon and following lunch at the Mohican, these groups heard Mr. Rolfe's talk which closed the conference.

TRUCK DRIVER FOUND WITH DEFECTIVE EQUIPMENT

Inspectors of the motor vehicle department of Hartford, assisted by Officer Clifford Crary of the local police department, started Wednesday the inspection of equipment of motor vehicles in this city. Machines were inspected on Broadway, Washington street and in the Greeneville section. As a result of the inspection, Morris Paster, R. F. D. No. 1, was summoned to appear in the city court to answer to charges of not having a reflector on his truck, no tail light, and with having improper brakes.

Many other drivers were warned to have minor defects remedied. Over 100 cars were stopped by the inspecting officers Wednesday.

LITTLE GLIMPSES OF SOME WELL-KNOWN ARTISTS

The inspiration and history of the prize picture at the 25th annual exhibition of the Lyme Art association, at Old Lyme, are unique. "Reflections in a Samovar", painted by Edward F. Rook, was inspired when the artist, by chance, caught his own reflection in a gazing globe one day. His umbrella, head easel, and the landscape in the background were all so oddly distorted that he decided to develop this idea on canvas.

As to its history, the artist has extracted the moral that "art is long and the life of a grape short". Mr. Rook is a fastidious craftsman and he was constantly starting afresh, so that the Belgian and muscat grapes in his painting had to be replaced as often with fresh ones. Since these could be obtained only in New York, it was left to Mrs. Rook to make special trips to buy them and bring them back to Lyme wrapped in wool. As Mr. Rook says, "It is with grapes as it is with human beings; if one man dies, it is of no use to say, 'Well, I can paint him from his brother.' If there are 36 grapes in a bunch, a bunch of 37 won't do, and I had to have a new bunch every time I made a fresh start". But unhappily the season was getting shorter and Mr. Rook hadn't finished his painting. One day Mrs. Rook warned her husband that this was her last trip to New York; he would simply have to paint this bunch to his everlasting satisfaction. With the last grapes of the season, Mr. Rook finished his picture.

The magnificent dogs that Percival Rosseau has imprisoned for life on canvas to be seen at the exhibitions of the Lyme Art association, will never furnish this artist and sportsman subject for controversy over the extent of "canine consciousness", for Mr. Rosseau is one of those who like dogs the more they see men. Apropos of the business of coaxing his setters to pose for his pictures, he says:

"Generally, when a dog is not active, he goes to sleep. He rarely turns around to look at the landscape, like a cow or a horse, unless some peculiar and particularly fine odor tickles his nostrils. He can, however, become a professional model and will take so much pride in his work as to be extremely jealous of any other canine taking away his job. With several dogs in a studio together, I have put one up to pose and had the others jump on him and chase him off. I have often wondered what they thought about it all. A puppy will look at a picture of himself or some other dog and bark at it furiously, but you never can fool him again. Yet, when posing, they seem to realize that you want to look at them, and when spoken to will actually pose, trying to get into an attractive posture."

NAMES WALLINGFORD MAN FOR ELKS DISTRICT DEPUTY

Edward C. Cox, of Wallingford, has been appointed district deputy grand exalted ruler for the eastern district of Connecticut, which includes Norwich, for the grand lodge year of 1929-30. The appointment was received Monday by Mr. Cox in a communication from Walter P. Andrews, grand exalted ruler, of Atlanta, Ga.

Mr. Cox has been actively interested in Elkdom for several years, serving as first exalted ruler of Wallingford lodge when it was instituted in 1919.

During the last year he was honored by the Connecticut Elks State association, elected as president of the organization and, as such, was placed in line for the appointment as district deputy of the eastern section of the state. The lodges that will come under the jurisdiction of Mr. Cox include Wallingford, Meriden, Middletown, Hartford, New Britain, Bristol, Willimantic, Rockville, Norwich New London, Putnam, and all other lodges in the eastern part of the state.

LAW WILL SHUT OUT 14-QUART PEACH BASKET

After the first of November, 1929, the common 14-quart peach basket becomes an outlaw as well as a few other less known containers for fruits and vegetables. The 1928 congress passed the Standard Container act which specifies the only sizes of containers for fruits and vegetables that will be legal. Those who have a supply of 14-quart baskets on hand should make every effort to use them prior to Nov. 1. In the standard hampers authorized by congress there is no size between the quarter bushel and half bushel or eight and 16 quarts respectively. What are you going to use next season?

The various sizes of standard hampers and round stave baskets for fruits and vegetables that will be legal after Nov. 1 are as follows: 1-8 bushel, 1-4 bushel, 1-2 bushel, 5-8 bushel, 3-4 bushel, 1 bushel, 1 1-4 bushel, 1 1-2 bushel and 2 bushels. The standard bushel upon which the various capacities are based shall have a capacity of 2,150.42 cubic inches.

The standard splint basket for fruit and vegetables shall be the four-quart, eight-quart, 12-quart, 16-quart, 24-quart and 32-quart basket, standard dry measure. The basis upon which this capacity is measured shall be 67.2 cubic inches for a quart.

It will be noticed that there is no provision for a two or three-quart splint basket which has been somewhat common in the past for the sale of such products as peaches and tomatoes. The legal branch of the department of agriculture has expressed the opinion that the U. S. Standard Container act of 1928 in establishing the capacity of a bushel as 2150.42 cubic inches makes inoperative all state laws establishing weights per bushel so far as they effect fruits and vegetables packed in containers standardized by that law.

The manufacturers of such containers will manufacture only the standard sizes in the future. In order that a uniform pack, particularly for peaches, may be used in Connecticut markets it will be necessary for the growers of such products to get together and decide on the size package that they will use.

DISSOLVING PARTNERSHIP IN DAWLEY LUMBER FIRM

Notice is given by Herbert F. Dawley and Charles E. Lamb of the dissolution of their partnership in the firm of H. F. and A. J. Dawley, well known lumber dealers of this city, whose business is to be continued by Mr. Lamb. The firm has its offices and lumber yard on Laurel Hill, off the railroad yard, with a lumber mill on the Thames river at Fort Point.

It was at Fort Point that the business was established by Herbert F. Dawley forty years ago when he purchased the property of the old Fort Point stock company which had built a dock there and laid out a tract in building lots with the expectation that a city would grow up around it. But these hopes were not realized and the dock was in a rather dilapidated condition when Mr. Dawley bought the property, made repairs and established his business there. Two years later he secured the site on Laurel Hill and about that time was joined in business by his brother, the late Arthur J. Dawley, and under this partnership the business grew to one of the largest in its line in this part of the state. Mr. Lamb, who has been yard manager, has been with the firm for about 35 years and is recognized as an expert in the lumber trade.

Now at near his 78th birthday, Mr. Dawley is to enjoy a retired life in comfortable circumstances at his home on Laurel Hill road which has been the reward of industry and honesty in the business world since he left his boyhood home, a farm in Ashford, with $4.50 in his pocket to seek his fortune.

POETRY

Why Not Say So!

If your wife cooks a dinner that's fit for a king,
Tell her about it!
A cook such as she is a very rare thing.
Tell her about it!
Use words that mean something, don't just say it's nice.
She's made it for you, man, and not for a price.
So out with your compliment, Life must
If your boy's report card shows marks that are good,
Tell him about it!
He's leading his class, but then you knew he would,
Tell him about it!
He worked while the others yelled: "Go sheepie, go!"
Or skated or footballed or battled in snow—
You're proud and you know it, you're happy, and so
Tell him about it!
If some nice old lady looks pretty today,
Tell her about it!
It will warm her old heart and make her feel gay,
A good word today beats a bouquet tomorrow.
A hearty handclasp helps to turn away sorrow,
Kind words are for trading, to lend or to borrow—
Tell her about it!
If some one is striving and doing his best
Tell him about it!
What looks easy to you may for him be a test,
Tell him about it!
What matter a white lie if joy we unfetter?
Let's stick to the spirit and not to the letter.
Our kind thoughts are splendid, but kind words are better—
Tell him about it!

—Peter A. Lea, in Kansas City Star.

Flail

What do I care for sorrow,
What if my heart is wrung!
There are words that must be written,
Songs that must be sung.

Defoe lay down in Newgate,
Raleigh went to gaol,
Shakespeare, Dante, many yielded
Under sorrow's flail.

How could a little tinker
Ever hope to sing
Without prison, or, at least,
Grief and sorrowing * * *

Travail is a better thing,
Let my heart be wrung—
There are words that must be written
Songs that must be sung.

—Power Dalton.

HUMOR OF THE DAY

Doctor—Did that medicine straighten out your husband all right?

Lady—It certainly did. We buried him yesterday.—Central of Georgia.

"Bobby, why are you so unkind to nurse? Don't you like her?"

"No, I hate her. I'd like to pinch her cheeks like daddy does."—London Opinion.

He—You must economize! Think of the future. If I should die where would you be?

She—I'd be all right. Where would you be?—Boston Transcript.

A possible new ure for electricity in "plant hygiene" was discussed before the American Phytopathological association by Walter Jones and Assistant Professor T. E. Rawlins, of the University of California. Professor Rawlins pointed out that in studying the electrical conductivity of healthy potato tubers and of tubers containing the virus of the disease known as spindle-tuber, it was found that the juice of healthy tubers had a higher resistance than the juice of infected tubers. When the juice of healthy tubers is kept at freezing point for five days, however, its resistance drops to that of the juice from the diseased tubers.

Uncle Sam has one debt that is somewhat embarrassing. He owes 25 goats and can't pay because he can't find the goats. Two years ago an agreement was entered into between the federal government and the state of Washington whereby the state was to ship 25 live elk to Alaska in exchange for a similar number of Alaskan mountain goats for stocking the Olympic range. The northwest elk have been sent to the north as a nucleus to future herds. But to date Uncle Sam has been unable to catch a single goat.

RAMSAY MACDONALD TO SAIL FOR UNITED STATES SEPT. 28

Announcement That the British Prime Minister is to Visit President Hoover Was Made Yesterday—It is Regarded in London as Definite Evidence That the Two Governments Had Virtually Reached an Agreement Upon Naval Armaments—Early Agreement on Limitations is Foreseen in Washington.

LONDON, Sept. 12.—(AP) —Official announcement this evening that Ramsay MacDonald, prime minister of Great Britain, would sail on September 28 for the United States to visit President Hoover, was hailed here as definite evidence that the two governments had virtually reached an agreement upon naval armaments.

Well informed circles indicated that a question involving three cruisers of the eight inch gun class is the only point upon which full accord has not been reached.

The developments came swiftly after a late afternoon conference between Mr. MacDonald and Charles G. Dawes, American ambassador. Just previous to this conference, announcement had been made that the United States answer to the latest British proposals had been received in London. It was assumed that General Dawes carried this answer to "Number 10 Downing street, when he called on the premier."

The two were closeted for an hour. The official date for Mr. MacDonald's sailing was announced immediately after the ambassador had departed.

It was just such "conversations" as this which have marked the discussions since the ambassador dashed from the steamer which carried him to England and had his initial meeting with Mr. MacDonald at Lossiemouth, on June 16.

SEE EARLY AGREEMENT ON NAVAL LIMITATIONS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.— (AP) — Definite progress toward an early Anglo-American agreement on naval limitations was seen in Washington tonight as a result of Premier MacDonald's decision to visit the United States early next month.

Word from London of the premier's intentions gave rise to reports that the two nations were on the verge of an accord. The only official information, however, was a statement by Secretary Stimson that the last note sent by Washington to Ambassador Dawes was of such a character that it could have caused MacDonald to be confident that there would be an agreement.

The secretary of state said the announcement of MacDonald's coming meant "we are at least hopeful of an agreement."

"The note last night," he continued, "was not of such a nature that you could say that it brought an agreement, but it was working toward an agreement and could have caused Premier MacDonald to be confident that there would be an agreement."

President Hoover said nothing concerning the developments.

The secretary's statement was made informally as he left the department with Undersecretary Cotton, who has participated in the frequent white house conferences on the naval limitation negotiations.

"It means we are near enough to an agreement to have him come," was the undersecretary's interpretation of the MacDonald announcement.

During the day Secretary Stimson had two conferences with Mr. Hoover, calling at the white house immediately after the president reached his desk in the morning, and consulting the chief executive again after formal word had been given that the British prime minister would sail for the United States on the Berengaria September 28.

Mr. MacDonald is expected to reach Washington on either October 3 or 4. While arrangements for his reception are incomplete, the expectation is that Secretary Stimson, as the personal representative of President Hoover, will meet the premier at New York and accompany him to Washington.

The chief executive is expected to welcome the British statesman at the Union station.

PRELIMINARY HEARING ON "BIG NAVY" PROPAGANDA

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—(AP)— A senate committee began a preliminary private inquiry today into the charges of interference at the 1927 Geneva naval limitations conference by American shipbuilders preparatory to beginning public hearings next week.

Senator Shortridge, republican, California, was named chairman of a subcommittee of the naval committee which is to conduct the investigation ordered yesterday by unanimous vote of the senate. Other members of the subcommittee appointed by Chairman Hale included Senator Robinson of Arkansas, the democratic leader, and Senator Allen, republican, Kansas.

They will examine the prospective list of witnesses and issue subpoenas for those to be called for examination in public next week. Chairman Shortridge said it was certain that William B. Shearer, who calls himself a naval expert and who filed suit against three shipbuilding corporations for services he alleges he rendered in their behalf at the Geneva fiasco, will be an early witness.

Both Shortridge and Robinson want to have summoned the officers of the three shipbuilding concerns named by Shearer, the Bethlehem Shipbuilding corporation, the American Brown Boveri Electric corporation, and the Newport News Shipbuilding and Drydock corporation.

The committee members made it clear that if there is any necessity the high command of the navy will be summoned.

YACHTS ARE TIED FOR INT'L. SEAWANHAKA CUP

OYSTER BAY, N. Y., Sept. 12.—(AP) Sailing by far the best race of the five-race contest for the Seawanhaka International cup, the Scottish sloop Caryl today won the fourth duel of the series and tied the series at two victories each.

Pulling out to a lead on the first weathering and steadily increasing it to the finish, the Caryl, sailed by her owner, Frank Robertson, led the American defender, the Gypsy, by 43 seconds at the finish line. The deciding race will be sailed tomorrow.

The Caryl's elapsed time was 4 hours, 14 minutes.

Today's race was sailed in a breeze from the north east and it came with increasing strength as the day progressed. A slight chop in the waters may have bothered the Gypsy and favored the Caryl but Raymond Hunt, youthful American helman, who had won the first two races by covering each maneuver of his rival elected to sail his own race today and lost.

COL. AND MRS. LINDBERGH TO BLAZE NEW MAIL TRAIL

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—(AP)— Over the air trail her husband blazed around Caribbean, Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh will fly with him during September.

Pan-American Airways announced today that the Colonel and Mrs. Lindbergh would leave Miami, Fla., Sept. 20 to inaugurate the Miami-Dutch Guiana Airmail line, following the route the colonel blazed on his goodwill tour last year.

Down through Isavana, the Virgin-Windward and Leeward islands they will fly to Paramaribo, Dutch Guiana, the southern terminus of the line and then on their return skirt the northern coast of South America to the Panama Canal.

From there they will fly back by easy stages to this country, stopping off in capitals en route where the colonel was entertained on his first trip over those countries, when he flew alone.

WORLD'S AIR SPEED RECORD RAISED TO 357.7 MILES AN HOUR

CALSHOT, England, Sept. 12.—The world's air speed record was raised today to 357.7 miles an hour by Squadron Leader Orlebar, captain of the British Schneider cup team. This is 1.9 more mile per hour than he flew when he set a world's record on Tuesday.

It was hours after the British flier had shot over the 3 kilometer course six different times, before the fact that a new record had been made was announced. It took a re-checking of the calculations to establish that fact. The first announcements were that the flights had been made at a fraction of a mile per hour slower than the Tuesday mark of 355.8. The error was discovered after figures recorded by the electrical timing apparatus had been compared with a film taken by the instruments.

BELIEVE NEW ORLEANS CARMEN MADE MISTAKE

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 12.—(AP) — The New Orleans street car strike entered the tenth week, while officials sought to piece together the loose ends of the settlement controversy.

The striking conductors and motormen rejected by vote of 1,009 to 87, the settlement agreement drafted by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, and A. B. Patterson, vice president of the New Orleans Public service at a conference in New York. The agreement also was approved by W. D. Mahon, president of the Amalgamated association of street and Electric railway employes.

At Indianapolis Mr. Green said the rejection of the agreement was due to a "misunderstanding" and from Seattle came word that Mr. Mahon regarded the negative vote of the car men as a "serious mistake" and that he would seek to have the vote reconsidered.

CHARGES $500,000 EXTORTED FROM N. Y. MILK DEALERS

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—(AP) — Dr. Shirley W. Wynne, city health commissioner, today charged that more than $500,000 has been extorted from New York milk dealers during the past year by a "protective association."

The commissioner has been collecting evidence against the association since last October, he said, and this will be presented to the district attorney at once.

Investigations reveal, Dr. Wynne stated, that the association has been "extorting from two to five cents on each forty quart can of milk handled by the dealers forced to join its membership."

These levies, he said, are called "dues" and when the organization was formed an "assessment" of $1.50 a can was made on the members for the purpose of defraying organization expenses.

BALTIMORE CELEBRATED ITS 200TH ANNIVERSARY

BALTIMORE, Md., Sept. 12.—(AP)— Pealing of bells, shrieks of whistles, the music of many bands and the tramp of marching feet, resounded among the crowds that filled bunting-decked streets today as Baltimore took a holiday to observe the 200th anniversary of the chartering of the city.

The day was the first of four designated for the bi-centenary observance and the biggest feature was a military parade through the business part of the city. Today also was the 11th anniversary of the bombardment of Fort McHenry which inspired the writing of the national lyric "The Star Spangled Banner" and in the celebration program were exercises at the fort.

The battleship New York headed a flotilla of naval ships visiting the city and sailors and marines joined infantry, artillery, cavalry and tanks in the parade.

CABLED PARAGRAPHS

MOSCOW, Sept. 12.—(AP)—A reply to the British note suggesting resumption for renewing diplomatic relations between Russia and Great Britain, was handed to the Norwegian charge d'affaires tonight by Foreign Commissar Litvinoff.

LONDON, Sept. 12.—(AP)—Great Britain today made a new move toward resumption of diplomatic relations with Russia. A note proposing that conversations begun several months ago should be taken up again was dispatched through the Norwegian embassy.

MILAN, Italy, Sept. 12.—(AP)—The resignation of Arthur Toscanini as director of the famous La Scala opera here will be met on the part of the directors by invitations to various noted conductors, including Guarnieri, Del Campo, Desabata and Calusio, to direct various works on the season's program.

MUSSOLINI REVAMPS FASCIST MINISTERIAL ORGANIZATION

ROME, Sept. 12.—(AP)— The duce today shook up his government in the most vigorous fascist ministerial reorganization since July, 1928, relieving himself of most of the posts which he then assumed. Instead of eight cabinet offices, Signor Mussolini will now hold only one, the portofolio of the all-important ministry of the interior, but continues of course, to be premier.

The revamped cabinet is noteworthy for the fact that three of the famous quadrumvirate who led the historic march on Rome, Oct. 29, 1922 have now achieved full ministerial rank. General Italo Balbo becomes minister of aviation in the new government, Michele Bianchi, minister of public works, and General Debono, minister for the colonies.

The duce divested himself of these three porotfolios among the seven relinquished today.

After the 1928 reorganization he held six portfolios, those of foreign affairs, the interior, war, aviation, corporations and marine. Afterwards he assumed those of the colonies and of public works, which gave him eight out of thirteen votes in the cabinet council.

Today's reorganization, announced in a royal decree, was based on Mussolini's principle of rotating through the various ministerial posts the best men in the fascist party, in order to build up a governing elite.

The only conclusion drawn in Rome from inspection of the new ministry was that the same forces predominent in fascism at the outset still are in power. The fourth leader of the march on Rome is not in the cabinet, is Count Bevecchi Di Val Cismon, the first ambassador from Italy to the Holy See.

OREGON FOREST FIRES STILL OUT OF CONTROL

PORTLAND, Ore., Sept. 12—(AP)— Having swept over 2,500 acres of valuable fir and cedar timber, the Rock Creek fire in Camas valley between Marshfield and Roseburg still was out of control tonight with more than 400 men on the fire line retreating before the flames.

All other fires in the district were reported under control. Fire wardens said rain appeared to be the only hope of checking the Rock Creek conflagration.

Conditions in the Siuslaw National forest were regarded as alarming with a thousand acre fire burning the Waldport area.

Telephone communications with fire lines has been severed in many instance by the burning of poles carrying the wires.

Three or four groups of ranch buildings in Lane county have been destroyed by the flames. Reports from the fire fighters yesterday described these groups of buildings as "settlements".

Two serious fires were said to have broken out in the Siskiyou National forest.

The only new fire in Washington was on Siouxon ridge on the upper Lewis river in the Columbia National forest. The Dole fire was burning fiercely in the Little Washougal district.

RHINELANDER HAS LEFT HIS MOUNTAIN RETREAT

LAS VEGAS, Nev., Sept. 12.—(AP)— Leonard Kip Rhinelander, accompanied by his attorney, H. A. Harmon, today deserted his mountain retreat near here, where he has been living since last January, and boarded an east bound train to confer at an unannounced point with his mulatto wife, Alice Rhinelander, who he is suing for divorce.

Rhinelander instituted the proceedings recently, charging he was inveigled into the marriage and that it had caused his family to disinherit him and brought "great embarrassment" to him among his friends. It was his second attempt to annul the ceremony.

Neither Rhinelander nor his attorney would divulge their destination or the reason for the conference.

NEGRO WOMEN IN BOSTON CITY HOSPITAL SCHOOL

BOSTON, Sept. 12—(AP)—Two Negro women were admitted to the Boston City hospital training school in the September class, for the first time in the history of the institution, hospital officials said tonight. The young women are Miss Frances W. Harris, of Boston, and Miss Letia Campfield, of Cambridge.

Dr. John J. Dowling, hospital superintendent, said it was the first time applications of Negroes had been accepted by the hospital trustees.

Chairman Joseph P. Manning, of the hospital trustees said: "The trustees of the Boston City hospital have taken the initiative in the matter of recognizing the right of Negro women to train as nurses. The decision of the board in accepting their applications was unanimous. As citizens they have a perfect right to enter the nursing service. I am glad to say that our institution is one of the first to recognize that right."

DIED WHILE TALKING OVER DISTANCE PHONE

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—(AP)—M. S. Mandell, 55, chiropodist of 153 Court street, New Haven, Conn., died suddenly in a hotel at Seagate, Coney Island, tonight, while talking over long distane teclephone to his family. His death was pronounced due to a heart disease.

Mr. Mandell, hotel employes said, had written a play which will be produced in New York soon. He also was said to have been an instructor of Russian at Yale university at one time.

Murderous Robbers Seek Mercy Of Court

Five Members of Gang That Held Up Bank at Lamar, Colo., in May, 1928.

LAMAR, Colo., Sept. 12—(AP)—Pleading guilty to first degree murder, bank robbery and kidnaping, three members of the gang that held up the First National bank here in May, 1928, today threw themselves upon the mercy of the court. Their trial was set for Oct. 1. Under Colorado law the jury or judge must assess the penalty, death not being compulsory.

Ralph Fleagle, George J. Abshir and Howard Royston were the prisoners who entered the pleas. They were arrested as a result of nation-wide search. One of their gang, Jake Fleagle, still is at large.

Four men were killed in connection with the holdup in which the robbers stole $200,000 and kidnaped three men, two of whom later were put to death.

While the prisoners were being arraigned word came from authorities that the state would not ask for the death penalty for Ralph Fleagle, because it was his confession that enabled officers to fix the blame for the holdup and clear seven other suspects that had been arrested in a nation-wide hunt.

Officers stationed extra guards in the court room to prevent any demonstration but the small crowd which gathered showed no resentment toward the prisoners, and appeared to be drawn solely by curiosity.

The informations to which the three pleaded guilty charged murder of A. Newton Parrish, president of the bank, and J. F. Parrish, his son; bank robbery with a gun and kidnaping of E. A. Kessinger and E. A. Lumgren, bank employe. Kessinger was killed by the robbers in their flight and Lumgren was turned loose. The bank robbers later in their flight abducted Dr. W. W. Wineinger at Dighton, Kansas and he was slain after treating the wounds of Royston. The Wineinger murder is not involved in the present case.

LOS ANGELES POLICEMEN ARRESTED FOR GRAFT

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 12—(AP)— Three of nine officers sought on indictments accusing them of operating a graft ring to "shake down" bootleggers were arrested today, and with three others apprehended Tuesday were arraigned in superior court and released on $10,000 bail each.

The arrest disclosed that federal officers who were known to have names of 62 policemen in connection with the same charges had started an investigation of several cancelled checks amounting to $2,250 each, believed to have been given a perfumery manufacturer for shipment of hundreds of gallons of denatured alcohol. The federal agents withheld all names, but said the alcohol permit of the manufacturer previously had been under scrutiny.

The three officers who surrendered today were Detective Lieutenants Robert Evans and M. H. Ledbetter and Patrolman Oscar Peterson. Those arrested yesterday were Sergeants Harry M. Hill and Leonard S. Sale and Patrolman Thomas B. Washburn. They were ordered to plead next Monday.

BANKER WAGGONER WEEPS IN CELL AS HE MEETS WIFE

NEWCASTLE, Wyo., Sept. 12—(AP)— C. D. Waggoner wept in his jail cell here today when his wife came to see him. It was a dramatic scene when the banker who admitted defrauding six New York banks of half a million dollars for the benefit of his own depositors was greeted by the comely, motherly woman whose eyes were swollen from sleepless nights.

"Honey," the wife cried, "this is terrible."

After the first embrace, Waggoner asked "Where is Delos?" Delos is his son.

"He stayed in Denver, honey, thinking he could do you more good there," Mrs. Waggoner replied.

Not until then did Waggoner break down. The stoic calm which he maintained since his arrest near here Tuesday night snapped and tears flooded his eyes.

"It's too bad, honey," his wife sobbed. "If Delos had known you wanted him so badly he would have come. He will come anyway if you want him and need him."

Near English's body police found a note addressed to his benefactress, saying: "I'm sorry I've got to do this. Forgive me. We'll meet and I'll pay up in heaven."

English was married and was the father of two children. Police recalled that four weeks ago Miss Sloan complained to them that English had been frequenting her apartment and annoying her.

Move For Arrest Of Gastonia Kidnapers

Warrant Issued Charges Conspiracy to Kidnap With Intent to Kill—14 Persons Involved.

CHARLOTTE, N. C., Sept. 12—(AP)— A bench warrant for the arrest of fourteen persons was issued this afternoon as a result of Judge Thomas J. Shaw's inquiry today into the Gastonia mob which Monday night invaded three counties, kidnaping three men, one of whom was severely beaten.

Solicitor John G. Carpenter, who aided Judge Shaw in the inquiry which was held behind closed doors, made the announcement. The warrant charges conspiracy to kidnap and kidnaping, assault with intent to kill and imprisonment and false arrest.

The solicitor would not make public the names of those who are to be arrested.

The warrant will be handed to Sheriff Ell P. Lineberger of Gaston county at once he said, and service will be made as rapidly as possible.

The public hearing into the mob activities with Judge Shaw sitting as a committing magistrate may begin tomorrow, the solicitor said. This hearing is expected to place blame for the Monday night affair, in which Ben Wells, British labor agitator, was spirited from Gastonia to Cabarrus county where he was beaten, and C. D. Saylor and C. M. Lell were kidnaped.

Ten witnesses were called today to appear before Judge Shaw, acting in the capacity of a grand jury. This number included Saylor and Lell, who were kidnaped Monday night; R. B. McDonald of Cabarrus county, who was fox hunting and disturbed the men as they were beating Wells; Rural Police Chief Vic P. Fesherman, of Mecklenburg county, and Tom P. Jimison, chief counsel for the defense in the trial of the 16 labor leaders and strikers now awaiting trial for murder of Police Chief O. F. Aderholt.

After leaving Gastonia Monday night where a labor headquarters was broken into and literature scattered, the mob visited Bessmer City and Charlotte, where a similar action was taken, in Gastonia, Wells, Saylor and Lell were seized, and were carried to a spot more than 50 miles distant near Concord, where Wells was beaten

The action of the mob followed the mistrial of the 16 labor leaders and strikers Monday, occasioned when one of the jurors suddenly became insane and had to be removed to a cell.

TWO BULLET HOLES FOUND IN ALL METAL DIRIGIBLE

LAKEHURST, N. J., Sept. 12—(AP)— A metallic stranger wounded in the line of duty was tucked under the covers of the naval air hangar here today—an odd bedfellow for the majestic Los Angeles and the two baby blimps of the United States navy's lighter-than-air craft.

It was the ZMC-2, the world's first successful all-metal dirigible, which arrived from Detroit and is due to have a permanent bed in the hangar after another test flight when it may be formally accepted by the navy for use in training student fliers.

The "tin bubble's" 350-mile flight from Detroit in charge of Captain William Kepner, of the U. S. army, was so uneventful that the crew of three was unaware of two bullet holes in the ship's huge metal gas chamber that were allowing the precious helium to escape.

Members of the ground crew that brought the ship to earth discovered the bullet holes as they were walking the craft into the hangar. From the angle at which the bullets entered the metal bag and passed out through the other side, Captain Kepner expressed the belief that the shot had been fires while the ZMC-2 was passing low over a mountain, probably somewhere in Pennsylvania.

The craft averaged slightly more than 40 miles an hour on its flight, despite the fact that it bucked strong headwinds most of the way.

Bags were stuffed into the holes to prevent further gas leakage, pending permanent repairs.

CHICAGO, Sept. 12—(AP)—Coast guard boats from six stations on Lake Michigan tonight put out, manned by full emergency crews, to seek the missing sand carrier Andaste which was 60 hours overdue in Chicago at 8 o'clock with her crew of 29 and a cargo of 1,900 tons of sand out of Grand Haven, Mich.

ATTACKS ON TARIFF BILL IN THE SENATE ALL OLD STUFF

After Senator Simmons Had For Two Hours Belabored the Bill as "Indefensible," Senator Smoot, Chairman of the Committee, Declared the Attack of Simmons and all Others Had Been Heard Before—Before the Senate Meeting Ended the Tariff Debate Was Well Under Way.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 12.—(AP) — Two participants of legislative clashes of a quarter of a century ago, one now 75 and the other 67, resumed their familiar stands in the senate today in conflict over the tariff.

The elder, Senator Furnifold M. Simmons, of North Carolina, belabored the "indefensible bill." His 12,000 word speech was made as senior democrat on the finance committee, republicans of which revised the house measure.

After listening two hours, Senator Reed Smoot, of Utah, answered as chairman of that committee. He said the attack of Simmons and all others had been heard before.

Simmons for the first time in his public career read his speech, going through it with the aid of a clerk. He asked the senate to excuse this because of his physical condition.

Smoot took cognizance of many objections to the bill made by the North Carolina veteran who was chairman of the finance committee in the Wilson administration.

He contended Simmons was fallacious in claiming the proposed tariffs would add billions of dollars to the consumers costs.

Before the senate meeting ended the tariff debate was well on its way. Senator George of Georgia took up the democratic case against the bill and argued for its modification.

Unlike Simmons, who asked that he not interrupted, Smoot was questioned frequently, during the reading of his prepared speech by democrats. Senator Tydings, of Maryland, asked whether the president favored the bill.

"I haven't asked him but I think he will sign it," Smoot replied.

Simmons listed nine specific objections to the bill as follows:

"It contains many rates and increases upon agricultural products that are useless and ineffective.

"It is replete with exorbitant rates on articles which farmers buy.

"It contains numerous instances of higher rates on articles used by the masses than on articles of identical use, but purchased principally by persons of wealth or of more than average means.

"It does not conform to President Hoover's request for increases on industrial products only when there has been a slackening of employment, due to imports. In many cases, increases have been granted to industries which have been very prosperous under the present tariff act.

"It is full of inconsistencies and unfair discriminations.

"It increases rates on many articles even though the imports under the present tariff act have been negligible.

"It encourages inefficiency by many of its increases in rates.

"Its increases on manufactured articles imperils our trade with European countries; and finally

"By its liberalization of the flexible provisions, enlarging the powers and discretion of the president, the latitude allowed the president in the imposition of additional duties is dangerously expanded."

Charging that sectional forces and groups of internationalists were aiding the democrats to break down the republican policy of protection, Smoot said prosperity "will inevitably follow the readjusted tariff of 1929 as was the case following the 1922 tariff."

CHINESE GOVERNMENT TO PROTEST AMERICAN RIGHTS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12—(AP)—Assurances that the Chinese government will exercise "due diligence" to protect American rights in the event extraterritoriality privileges in China are abandoned was contained in a note from Dr. C. The note was in response to a communication on the subject of extraterritoriality forwarded by Secretary Stinson, August 10, to the Nanking government.

After reviewing the situation Wang declared the American note indicated the Washington government "is not yet free from misgivings as to the safety of American life and property after the abolition of extraterritoriality."

Secretary Stinson in his note had offered to consider a gradual relinquishment of the privileges. The Chinese reply urged the American government to enter into immediate discussions with a view to bringing about the abolition of the extraterritorial privileges.

PAINTERS BADLY HURT IN FALL AT NORMAL SCHOOL

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Sept. 12. — Two painters, Robert Beckwith, 42, of Lebanon avenue and Emile Houle, 39, of St. Mary's court, are patients at St. Joseph's hospital suffering from severe injuries sustained about 10 o'clock this morning when the staging from which they were working at the dormitory of the Willimantic state normal school broke and precipitated the men to the ground, a fall of nearly 40 feet. The snapping of a window jack was the cause of the accident. Fellow workmen and others assisted the injured men until the arrival of the ambulance which rushed them to the hospital. Under examination by Dr. E. J. Ottenheimer with the help of x-ray pictures it was disclosed that Houle had an almost totally crushed pelvic bone, crushed chest with seven fractured ribs and possible internal injuries. Beckwith had a badly fractured left femur bone, three broken ribs, painful lacerations on the head and internal injuries. Despite the seriousness of the injuries there is hope for the recovery of both men.

Beckwith and Houle, with Fred Dumaine, of 63 Center street, all in the employ of Contractor Charles L. Crane, were engaged in painting window casings on the third floor of the west end of the dormitory. The scaffold had been rigged up on three window jacks. Houle and Beckwith were working near one of the jacks when it suddenly broke and they dropped to the ground three stories below. The section of scaffold on which Dumaine was standing, held and he escaped injury.

Windham's share was about $2,417, which was handled by a trustee until 1887 when the town voted to make a change by authorizing the town clerk to take care of it. The town has since drawn orders on this fund and later replaced the amount taken. In 1900 the amount on hand was $6,483.62 and in 1928, $9,910.59.

Discharged In Police Court

At the session of police court this morning, Joseph E. Slater, 55, of Middletown, was arraigned on a charge of failing to heed the warning to stop from Inspector Arthur B. Somers, in the employ of the U. S. Department of Agriculture for the corn borer research. The alleged infraction took place July 30, on West Main street, at the junction of Columbia avenue, where the department men maintain a station. Pleading not guilty to the charge Slater said that the car was being driven by his son-in-law, Thomas McCormick, also of Middletown. McCormick slackened speed upon approaching the survey station and then brought the car to a complete stop after passing the inspector several feet. Someone in the rear, whom those in the car believed was the inspector, yelled that everything was all right and to go ahead, and McCormick drove on to Middletown. McCormick corroborated this testimony. When the inspector failed to recollect the incidents of the case, Judge Frank H. Foss discharged Slater. The session was followed by juvenile court for the arraignment of two boys, one 14 years of age and the other 15, charged with taking two rabbits from a coop on Brick Row. DANIELSON

ROBILLARD ALIVE BUT LETTER SAYS "MURDERED"

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Sept. 12 — William Robillard, about 25, was alive and well today, notwithstanding the fact that his wife received a letter from Philadelphia yesterday informing her that he had been murdered. The letter purported to have been written by a woman, who represented herself as so consumed with love for Robillard that she had killed him rather than to give him up to his wife or anyone else.

Robillard left here last Thursday for Philadelphia seeking employment. This fact taken with another that the letter telling of the fake murder bore a Philadelphia postmark naturally greatly upset Mrs. Robillard, and she took up the matter with Lieut. Ross V. Urquhart of the state police at the local barracks. Lieut. Urquhart took the matter up immediately with the Philadelphia police department and has ascertained through them that Robillard is his normal self. It is another case of the report of a person's death being greatly exaggerated.

However, interest remains as to the identity of the writer of the disturbing letter. It was said today that there may be some connection between its origin and a comely young person who lives in Plainfield when at home.

On Sidewalk Construction

A special borough meeting has been called for next Tuesday evening to do once again something that has been done before as to authorizing new sidewalk construction and as to sections to be built and again to make the necessary appropriation. In carrying out its sidewalk building program the borough will be operating under provisions of its new charter. It will be recalled that this was enacted by the legislature of 1927 and was one of the 1400 or more acts later invalidated through a test case in the courts, on the ground that the governor had not affixed his signature within the time required by law. Meanwhile, some months ago, and prior to the invalidating decision, a special meeting of the borough of Danielson authorized an extensive sidewalk building program and made an appropriation of $15,000 with which to carry it on, the borough to pay one-half the construction cost, the abutting property owners the other half.

In view of the legal tangle that later developed at Hartford it was deemed best not to go ahead with construction. Now, following action by a special session of the legislature, in August, the new borough charter is a legal enactment. Next Tuesday evening's meeting is called that the voters again may go on record favoring the construction and authorizing the necessary appropriation.

A legal notice of this meeting printed elsewhere in this issue of The Bulletin sets forth in detail where it is proposed sidewalk construction will be undertaken. The longest stretch to be undertaken will be along the entire easterly side of Mechanic street, a thoroughfare through which hundreds of employes of the Connecticut Village plant of Powdrell and Alexander travel every day in addition to the many others that traverse that section.

It is planned to begin the Mechanic street sidewalk this season. Borough officials plan to purchase a carload of cement with which to start work and also a concrete mixer.

Killingly Expects Tax Reduction

Budget figures of the town of Killingly as estimated for appearance in the forthcoming town reports indicate a reduction of at least 2 1-2 mills in the tax rate for next year from the rate paid this year, when it touched the high mark of 29 1-2 mills. This reduction is based on the last grand list, which amounted to $6,784,167. The next grand list will be substantially greater, it is indicated, and if this proves true the tax rate may be as much as four mills less in 1930 than in 1929. These reductions, of course, will only be possible if expenditures are kept within the estimated budget costs. If special large appropriations are made for any purpose the prospects of a reduced tax rate may vanish completely.

Important items in the new budget to be passed upon at the annual town meeting on the first Monday in October are: Town farm, $6,000; outside poor, $10,000; state hospitals, $4,000; repairing roads, $16,000, which is the same amount as last year; removal of Reynolds street trees (as appropriated and working done during current fiscal year) $700; Reynolds street further improvement, $500; oiling streets and roads, $7,000; gravelling roads, $6,000; bridges, $2,000; cutting brush, $1,000; snow removal, $1,000; snow removal in Danielson's business section, $600; town clerk and treasurer, $800; selectmen and transportation, $15000; assessors and transportation, $700; selectmen's office and central bookkeeping department supplies, telephone and clerk, $1200; property tax collector, $950; propert tax collector's expense, $150; town hall maintenance and supplies, $2500; county tax, $5,000; state tax, $4500; Day Kimball hospital, $800; interest apart from school bonds, $11,000; payments on bonds other than school bonds, $7,000; town court, $1,000; widows and dependent children, $1,000; insurance, $1400; road machines and tools, $8,000; military tax, $1,800; contingent allowance, $1,000.

Against these major items of expense are the following estimated credits: Town farm income, $2500; interest on overdue taxes, $1200; personal tax, $7,000; personal tax penalties, $250; dog money from state, $1250; sundry licenses, $100; town hall income, $3,000; state bank stock tax, $2500; child welfare refunds, $780, a total of $19,580

For Benefit of Hospital

Mrs. Richard D. Banigan, chairman of a committee of the Killingly Woman's club that is to engage in an annual effort in the interest of the Day Kimball hospital at Putnam said this afternoon that the period from next Monday until the following Monday has been designated for receiving contributions here and in other parts of the town of Killingly. Each year at about this time contributions of money are sought here in the interest of the Day Kimball hospital to which so many patients go every year from this town, and especially from Danielson. During the period covered by the last annual report of the hospital there were 157 patients from Danielson and upwards of 200 from the entire town of Killingly entered as patients. That the hospital deservedly has many friends here is indicated by the generosity of the town's citizens each annual contribution time. Those who desire to give during the coming week will have the opportunity presented to them.

Circular letters and further publicity relative to the matter will be forthcoming in the immediate future.

Gardner and Bushey Tie

Sergeant G. L. Gardner of the Danielson state police barracks tied yesterday with Lieut Bushey with the top score in the revolver shooting tournament in which members of the state police department are competing at Hammonasett Beach, Madison. Their score was 94 each, out of a possible 100 on a 20-yard range, using service revolvers. The participants yesterday were shooting for the Commissioner Robert T. Hurley trophy cup. Today Lieut. Ross V. Urquhart and State Officers Elton Nolaan, Theodore Strand and John Murphy of the Danielson barracks went to Madison for a continuance of the tournament.

Rev. and Mrs. J. Rees Jones are entertaining Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Huckvale of Great Neck, L. I.

The Westfield Men's club is to resume its meeting on Friday evening, October 4. President Thomas A. Beckett has appointed Rev. Harding W. Gaylord as chairman of the program committee for the meeting.

Numbers from Danielson were at Woodstock this afternoon attending the 71st annual Woodstock fair.

Reynolds street between Main and Broad has now been completely graded where trees were taken out and oiled. Lewis boulevard also has just been put in good repair and oiled by the town.

Sportsmen here are interested in an announcement by the U. S. Department of Agriculture that there will be no open season on shore birds during 1929-1930 other than woodcock and Wilson's and Jacksnipe.

Killingly high school's football game with Putnam high school this year is scheduled for Nov. 28, Thanksgiving day, and will be played at Putnam.

Fifteen members of Killingly grange attended a Neighbors' Night meeting with Putnam grange.

Parking Problem

A matter that will have the attention of the chamber of commerce has to do with finding some large area convenient to the business section that can be used for parking. There is such a constant congestion of parked cars in the central section of the borough that it is felt this has an effect on business, especially at week ends, when many out of town people who come here to trade have difficulty in finding a place to leave their machines.

Work on the northerly end of the new state-aid highway from Pomfret Landing into Brooklyn Center is well advanced, and the construction crews are advancing steadily southward.

TWO CONTESTS DEVELOPE IN KILLINGLY CAUCUS

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Sept. 12— Two contests developed tonight in the largely attended caucus of the republicans of the town of Killingly assembled in the town hall to nominate candidates for town offices. Selectman Napolean P. Gingras defeated John Z. Labelle, 181 to 154, in a contest for second selectman and Fred L. Miller received 204 votes for assessor for three years against 67 that were cast for his opponent, Ivan F. Ellgren. The remainder of the ticket was nominated by acclamation and the complete list of nominees is as follows: Assessor, Fred L. Miller; board of relief, A. B. Simmons, first selectman, Charles A. Tillinghast; second selectman, N. P. Gingras; town clerk and treasurer and agent of the town deposit fund, Frank T. Preston; auditor, Elmer C. Wood; collector of taxes, James R. Walsh; constables, L. DANIEL BOONE'S SISTER REINTERRED BY D. A. R.

FALMOUTH, Ky.—(AP)—The body of Mrs. Mary Boone Bryan, heroic sister of Daniel Boone, will rest under a monument to be erected by the Daughters of the American Revolution.

It has been removed from the grave where it was placed 110 years ago and taken to Grant's Lick cemetery.

Mrs. Bryan's bravery was shown when Bryan's fort was besieged by Indians.

When lack of water threatened the small garrison, the women calmly walked out of the protecting walls down to the spring. There they filled their jugs, chattering and laughing as if they were certain the Indians had gone away. When every jug was full they dashed back into the garrison before the amazed Indians in the skirting forests could muster the wit to take them.

Bryan's fort since has been made a historic shine.

Dearest Priscilla:

"Good News." This expression was written in the incandescents in the big city last fall, but literally it is written all over the Putnam Savings Bank, in the form of a five (5%) per cent interest rate on all accounts, to be paid in October. While doing my shopping today I stopped into the institute, had a delightful chat with one of the tellers and learned all about the interest increase. The tremendous volume of business experienced in the past 12 months has enabled the trustees of the Putnam Savings Bank to declare in favor of their depositors an extra dividend of ½%, in addition to the regular dividend of 4½%. Courtesy, dear Priscilla, is the watchword of this bank. This, combined with the cheery atmosphere of the Putnam Savings Bank, encourages one to take advantage of its excellent banking facilities.

It would certainly be worth your while to step into the Putnam Savings Bank on your next visit to the city and open a savings account. The banking quarters are conveniently located on Main street in the heart of Putnam's trading center.

PUTNAM

PUTNAM HIGH SCHOOL IS TO OPEN EARLIER

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Sept. 12—The town school committee held its monthly meeting Wednesday evening in the law offices of Torrey and Geissler. Upon a recommendation from Superintendent of Schools Leon N. Farrin it was voted to change the operating schedule of Putnam high school from 8 o'clock to 8.30 a. m. When the bill becomes effective the school will open at the new hour throughout the year irrespective of any summer time change. To comply with the requests of the year irrespective of any summer time change. To comply with the requests of the Pomfret and Abington school boards, the town school committee failed to advance the clocks at the high school to conform with the daylight saving time system. The new schedule, it is believed will meet with the favor of out of town students attending Putnam high school.

Supt. of Schools Farrin was unable to state today what the closing hour of the school would be after the new commencing hour is placed in effect, but said this matter would be settled following a conference with Principal E. L. Robinson.

Several new teachers were hired. The teachers' committee recommended the appointment of Miss Roselle LaFrance, of Central Village to fill the vacancy created at the Israel Putnam school, when Miss Irene Charbonneau of Pomfret resigned. Miss Charbonneau was appointed at the Israel Putnam school this year but did not assume her position at the opening of school, consequently the action of the board in naming Miss LaFrance was necessary. Miss LaFrance is the daughter of County Commissioner Urgele LaFrance of Central Village and is an experienced teacher. She will assume her new duties at once.

The board also confirmed the appointment of Miss Mary Millard to succeed Mrs. Dodge at the Sawyer district school and Miss G. Etta Hanley's appointment as art supervisor in the schools of the town. Miss Hanley is in charge of art work in the Pomfret schools and will instruct in Putnam on one day each week.

Mrs. Lillian Morrison, appointed as school nurse, was approved by the board. Following the transaction of routine business and the paying of current expenses the board adjourned to October 2.

Horse Races at Woodstock Fair.

The 71st annual fair of the Woodstock Agricultural society held its final showing today. The racing events proved to be the major feature of the afternoon. A five heat trotting classic and a free-for-all trot and pace of five heats comprised the programme that was thoroughly enjoyed by a large attendance. The gate receipts were much larger than those of the middle day. The cattle show proved to be of interest to hundreds of people. Some of the best specimens of the county were exhibited. Other attractions were the same as those witnessed on the opening day, as no additions to the midway were noted today. The Windham county "Y" track meet was held today. Mostly local athletes participated in the events.

Water Tank Plans Ready.

It is believed that an interesting session of the common council will take place Friday evening when the aldermen sit to listen to the plans and specifications report of the proposed one million gallon steel storage tank, part of the reconstruction programme of the water system, to be submitted by Chairman Ralph E. Thurston of the water board. Alderman John Dean, r, ward 2, a member of the special water committee of the common council, said Tuesday that the plans of the tank have been received from Engineer Symonds of Boston, and it is expected that the council will take immediate action in advertising for bids on the project.

The city street department is preparing Farrows street from the intersection of Florence north to a point near the W. S. Ames property for an application of oil. This work will not take place until next year at the earliest, but the repair of the road bed is being done to make the street passable during winter months.

On Important Committee.

A Woodstock man—Clarence W. Bowen, is one of the committee of thirteen members appointed to bring about the completion of Grant's tomb on Riverside in New York. Included in the membership of the committee are many prominent New York business men. The body was created in 1928 by the Grant Monument association. The completing of the work will be an enormous undertaking and calls for an expenditure of over $400,000.

The attention of the police was called to an "automobile accessory theft" on the premises surrounding the Putnam Buick garage on Bundy street last evening. Sergt. George Liard was called by an employe who believed that thieves were tampering with tires on a car, but the sergeant was unable to find that any property had been stolen.

Evening School to Open.

According to an announcement made today by Supt. of Schools Leon N. Farrin, the Putnam evening school will begin its session of September 30, at 7.15 p. m. and will be in operation three nights a week. Supt. Farrin stated today that the class in Americanization, maintained especially for aliens unable to speak the English language, will be discontinued this year because of the poor attendance records of the 1928 season. Two commercial teachers will constitute the faculty, Mrs. Anna J. Jarvis will instruct in bookkeeping and Miss Mildred Orwat will supervise the teaching of typewriting and short hand. Enrollments in the evening school will be accepted on the opening night.

Arrangements are now being made for a representative of the Junior Red Cross corps to come to this city and address the pupils and teachers of the Putnam high school and the Israel Putnam school in October.

School Superintendent Farrin has announced that a school census is to be taken this month under the direction of Judge M. H. Geissler, who is clerk of the school board.

Down to 38 Degrees.

The fact that the summer season is about to depart was impressed upon the public this morning when the mercury dropped from its soaring heights at 90 in the past two weeks to a record low mark of 38 degrees. In some places in the rural sections it was reported that the temperature dropped to 30 degrees and touches of frost accompanied the change.

Wallace H. Child, of Woodstock, a graduate of Woodstock academy, has enrolled in the Worcester Polytechnical institute.

Daughters were born yesterday at the Day Kimball hospital to Mr. and Mrs. Harry Howard, of Moosup, and to Mr. and Mrs. Joseph LaPointe, of this city.

Miss Doris Swift, of New London, is spending two weeks as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Barrak K. Smith, of South Main street.

Mrs. L. Thomas Jones, of Main street, and Mrs. Amelia Cutler, have left for a trip to Niagara Falls, N. Y.

Miss Eva Botham, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Botham, of Abington and Miss Madeline Anderson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. Anderson, of Pomfret will, on Monday, enter St. Joseph's hospital training school in Willimantic to train for nursing careers. Both were members of the class of 1929 Putnam high school.

Engagement Announced.

The engagement of Miss Gladys Shaylor, of Grove street to Llewellyn Mellbert, of Hartford, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas C. Mellbert of Pomfret, has been announced. Miss Shaylor is a graduate of the local high school class of 1929 and now is employed in the commercial department of the Connecticut Light and Power company. Mr. Mellbert is employed by the American Telephone and Telegraph company in Hartford.

Maor A. D. McIntyre, of Grove street, is visiting in Niantic.

Rural School Supervisor.

Calvin Stanley, of Memphis, Tennessee, has been appointed to succeed Martin B. Robertson as supervisor of rural schools on the towns of Woodstock, Pomfret, Abington and Eastford. Mr. Stanley has taken up his residence at 42 Chapman street, Putnam. He is a graduate of University of Tennessee and received his master's degree from George Washington university.

JEWETT CITY

LEDGE BEING DRILLED MAY CONTAIN GOLD ORE

The residences of F. S. Leonard and John Sharkey, on South Main street, may be situated on a gold mine, and untold wealth may await future mining operations. Last Friday, when the rock cores were being taken up through the drill, at the ledge testing being conducted by the state, at the site of the new Quinebaug bridge, one of the long stone pieces broke apart. Those who were watching operations were thrilled to notice the unmistakable traces of re. The bright-shining particles were made out, running through the core. Some declare that crushing and smelting operations have often begun with less evidence that mineral value exists, than is actually evident in the great Quinebaug ledge now being drilled to ascertain its formation.

BIG BUILDING PROJECTS TOTAL OVER $700,000

Never, in the history of Griswold, has the prospective local building, bridge and highway operations, approached the figure reckoned in the present projects.

The Quinebaug viaduct will cost approximately $400,000, not including a property damage in excess of $40,000.

The Tadpole S-curve bridge job promises to include an outlay of close to $200,000.

The East Quinebaug highway will cost $40,000.

The new Jewett City Savings bank is to call for an expenditure of $80,000.

The new block at the corner of Palmer avenue and North Main street, to include stores and apartments, is to be built at an estimated cost of $30,000.

The remodeling and improvement of the Blanchard block may reach $10,000. All of which will pile up a total of $760,000, well in excess of three-quarters of a million.

At 5 a. m. Thursday, the thermometer reading in this section was as low as 39 to 41. Steam heat was necessary in all the schools in the borough. Until sunrise, low lying meadow land was obscured in a blanket of white mist. Some reports said close to a frost.

Special Officers Thomas Moraney and Jack Davis are on duty at the Pachaug fair. The management is determined that there shall be no petty thieving this year.

RADIO TALKS LESSEN DEATHS BY ACCIDENT

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Radio is helping St. Louis reduce traffic accident fatalities among school children.

A decrease of 50 per cent since 1926, when safety campaigns in schools and by radio were started, is reported by Girard C. Varnum, manager of the St. Louis Safety council.

More than 200,000 children in St. Louis county have joined the Careful Children's club organized by the Safety council and conducted over KMOX six nights a week.

THE VARE CASE.

The demand has been made, and with justification, that something be done in the senate regarding the seating of Senator-elect Vare of Pennsylvania. That question has remained undecided too long, but we are not generous enough to believe that it was for such reasons that Senator Norris endeavored to have the decision reached at this time.

It was brought up at a time when it was recognized that it would have the effect of delaying tariff action. That seems to have been the purpose for it was claimed as privileged and was bound to be so treated. But to let that matter throw the whole tariff discussion and decision over into the next regular session of congress was out of the question. It was at this special session of congress that action on the tariff was to be taken, along with farm legislation. The latter has been accomplished and now there remains to be seen what the tariff revision will amount to. But the time should be devoted to that object and it was so recognized by the senate. Everything considered it was the thing to do.

The Norris move has had the effect of fixing a date for the consideration of the Vare matter. That in itself is something, but even though Pennsylvania is anxious to have the situation cleared up it must appreciate the force of the argument against blocking tariff revision.

Pennsylvania has ground for complaint that the Vare decision has not been reached before this. For nearly three years it has been deprived of the representation of a second senator. The reason for this is the claim that fraud was used in his election but the claim hasn't been decided and the seat has remained unoccupied. Because of illness that might have been the case anyway, but under existing conditions there is neither a second senator nor a chance that the senator-elect will resign. The state feels that one thing or the other should be done. Either Mr. Vare should be given his seat in accordance with the vote of the people of that commonwealth or else it should be refused him and the way opened for the naming of another senator from that state or possibly the re-election of Mr. Vare over the senate's decision. The expectation for the decision in December should be fulfilled.

INFANT MORTALITY.

Efforts in behalf of a reduction in infant mortality have not accomplished all that is desired, but they have made headway of a kind that gives satisfaction and a keen desire for constantly greater progress.

Through educational efforts by various organizations headed for a similar goal the child that is born these days stands a much better chance of living according to the figures which have just been given out by the American Child Health association. In the larger cities the death rate appears greater and yet, according to the association, a comparison of the rates for the various population groups considered as a whole shows the lowest rates for the cities having the largest population.

When we stop to realize that the average rate in ten large cities has shown a decrease of 32 deaths a thousand in the past 12 years everyone can appreciate the excellence of the educational work and the desirability of the purpose. Perhaps it is more strikingly presented by stating that "approximately 10,000 babies lived through their first year in 1928 who would have died in 1916."

That discloses in a most convincing manner the great opportunity that prevails in bettering health conditions and in providing instructions in the care of the young. The past year was not the one in which the best record has been made in reduced infant mortality. That distinction belongs to 1927 with a rate of 64.9, but to keep the rate as low as 68.4 per thousand indicates that the good influences are at work and through continued efforts and the proper cooperation on the part of organizations and individuals will yet materially lower the record.

When we stop to realize that 68 out of every 1,000 infants born alive died before they are a year old it is evident that there is still an opportunity for increasing and extending the well directed educational efforts. The health move that aims to give to every baby the chance to which it is entitled in its first months ought not to lack for popular support.

JUSTICE IN NORTH CAROLINA.

The opinion has prevailed for a long time among many people of the south that the way to stop or correct one wrong is to commit another. Practice in keeping with that idea has resulted in lynchings and floggings. Lawlessness has taken the place of lawful procedure and those who have taken the position that they were bettering conditions have been conspicuous in showing disrespect for the law.

Thus it is with those in North Carolina who seized three leaders in connection with strike conditions in that state and took them out and gave them a beating, following the sudden ending of a trial of the strikers charged with causing the death of the chief of police. They seem to have been imbued with the idea that they would take matters out of the hands of the court, impose such penalty as they thought fitted and pose as the regulators in that region. It was a resort to mob rule that has too often characterized southern sentiment and it has created a situation where the country or state is expected to ferret out the participants and bring them to justice.

In connection with the strike it has been the claim of certain workers that improper conditions prevailed there. There has been agitation that has been resented, but when the people of that section resort to the same kind of methods or worse, they lay themselves open to the worst kind of criticism. They have in fact played directly into the hands of their critics. They have turned to the sort of action which they decried. They have employed unlawful methods in an endeavor to convince certain workers that they have invaded the wrong locality, but those singled out for a beating are sure to capitalize their experiences in further appeals for better conditions.

The people of North Carolina may have their own views in regard to labor conditions. They have a right to expect that those conspiring to kill the police chief, or those who shot him, would be adequately punished. They may be right or they may be wrong, but when they undertake to apply lynch law methods to back up their views they make a serious mistake and lay themselves open to punishment by the same administration of justice that they are seeking for others.

HALTING MOTOR TAXES

Throughout the country the tax on gasoline is general. It is by no means the same in every state, but all states collect it.

Maine has been impressed by the benefits it has obtained from this tax and in order to do more road work it was conceived that the tax might be raised to five cents from four. There is a limit to which it is possible to impose such a tax. While many visitors pay their share of it the burden falls upon the auto owners of the state and in the recent referendum there was overwhelming opposition. Maine declared that it is paying enough.

Quite the same sort of sentiment has been expressed by the people of Missouri where a constitutional amendment was passed by a big majority limiting the gas tax rate to the present two cents a gallon for a period of ten years and at the same time including the registration fee, which is also to remain unchanged for that period.

Missouri has become convinced that it can accomplish its needed work through the proceeds from this tax and it has insisted that revenue obtained from the motor vehicles must be devoted to road work.

Thus two states have given clear evidence that there is a saturation point when it comes to motor vehicle taxation. They do not condemn the gas tax idea and they do not balk at proper contributions to road improvements, but they do say that there is a limit to what they should be called upon to pay and they have become convinced that that limit has been reached. These expressions were contrary to the action in 21 states where the gas tax was boosted last year, but the worm will turn and it is possible that Maine and Missouri have simply headed the list.

THE RECKLESS FLIER.

Anticipating the possibility of airplanes dropping upon communities or areas where crowds are assembled, certain states have established regulations requiring that flying at such places must be at a sufficient height so that in case of trouble the plane could be coasted to a point where those on the ground would not be endangered.

But even greater restrictions are going to be needed for the fliers, if we can judge by the recent experiences about New York. There the operator of a machine so maneuvered his plane on the water that he caused the death of a man in a boat and injured another, while a second flier injured several and killed two in alighting at a beach.

Such accidents create the impression that they are needless. It would seem as if there was room enough for the maneuvering of seaplanes or airplanes without doing it at points where it means a menace to life. It is to be realized, as has been pointed out so many times by Colonel Lindbergh, that the public has a responsibility of its own when it comes to getting into the way of machines which are landing, or rushing out to greet those who have been flying. Such involves the conduct of adults and children at landing points, recognized fields for airplanes, but when it comes to landing on beaches where there are large numbers assembled and where it can be expected that there will be a grand rush to get in the way the judgment of the flier should be exercised to the extent of avoiding such hazards.

What was the most aggravating about the seaplane case, aside from the killing of the fisherman, was the fact that the aviator paid no attention to it and sped away. It is recklessness of that kind which sooner or later brings stiff restrictions for all fliers.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

These cool days with frost threatened are joyfully welcomed by the hay fever sufferers.

They seem to be having great sport over in Palestine putting the blame on the other fellow.

Sympathy is still needed in those places which have had heir droughts replaced by floods.

Those auto owners who drive cars without horns probably expect to frighten people by their looks.

If you have put in your application to be made a voter it will do no good unless you follow it up by being made.

That Schneider cup must be a wonder. It has increased the speed of flying machines from 44 to 355 miles an hour in 16 years.

The man on the corner says: If you don't stop to worry about it Friday the 13th will pass off like any other day, and so it will if you do.

ALONE AT LAST

The folks of Hartley Davidson's best girl were the trial of his existence. Not that they weren't the very salt of the earth, for they were, and not that they had ever appeared to dislike Hartley or had shown any aversion to his society.

On the contrary, they all stuck around like so many burrs, and try as he would he never could get Janice to himself long enough to give her any indication of his feelings.

There was Mr. Lansing, Janice's father, who seemed to think Hartley came to the house for the sole purpose of discussing baseball with him.

There was Mrs Lansing, who took a motherly interest in his health and invited him up to Sunday suppers; but she was forever deciding that it was "cooler out on the porch" and moving her rocking chair out there just as Hartley and Janice were nicely located in the swing.

There was Aunt Nan, who was always in evidence with her tatting and there was Brother Ben, who of all the family troubled him the least. And then there was Elsie!

"My gosh," groaned Hartley from the depths of an overtired spirit whenever he thought of Elsie. "That kid!" No walk that he and Janice might plan was ever too long, no hour too late, no weather too hot or cold or rainy, to serve as a hindrance to Elsie's plaint, "I wan'na go long."

However, there's an end to all things. And this night was to see the end, both of Hartley's patience and his opportunity, for the firm for which he worked was sending him west.

"It's now or never," he said grimly to himself as he retied his tie for the fifth time. "I'll see Janice alone tonight if I have to do like young Lochinvar." Janice met him at the door, and to his suggestion that they walk down to the river she agreed with an alacrity that left Hartley's heart singing with hope. However, he reckoned without his Nemesis, for at that moment Elsie piped up.

"I wa'na go," and she whined with all the aggravating insistence of a spoiled child. Outwardly Hartley smiled—the tolerant smile of maturity for the caprices of childhood. Inwardly he razed.

"Put on your rubbers, Elsie," suggested her mother placidly from her rocker, "and then you may go." A sudden wave of fury possessed Hartley. What did they think a fellow came to see a girl for, anyway? His rage mounted at the sight of Elsie reentering the room, a rubber in each hand.

They wouldn't let him see Janice alone, eh? Wanted to know everything he said and did, hey? He'd show 'em. He'd come there to propose to Janice and he was going to do it. And then, before them all, this young man, who refused to be balked, made this declaration:

"Janice, I came here this evening, and in fact I have been coming here twice a week for some weeks, for the purpose of telling you that I love you and asking you to marry me. I have never been able to see you alone, although I have tried my best to make such opportunities. As this will be my last chance to see you before going west, I will now ask you, in the presence of your family, who seem to take an uncommonly keen interest in our affairs, if you will be my wife?"

From somewhere behind him Hartley could hear the sounds of hurried and scrambling exits; of empty chairs violently agitated, so hastily had they been quitted by their occupants; of a sudden impact and a smothered ejaculation, as father and Aune Nan endeavored to escape simultaneously through the same door; of a dull thud as Frank landed on the porch beenath the open window. Elsie's rubbers came hurling through the air, as their owner with a shriek dived into the hall.

But all the tumult, the hurry and confusion, were to Hartley Davidson totally unnoticed. For a golden head rested on his shoulder, the dearest girl in the world was within his arms, and a peace that passed all understanding possessed his soul.

They were alone!—Chicago News.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Post-Gager Cemetery.

Mr. Editor: When in 1923 I took up my residence in Norwich Town, one of the first things I desired to do was to see the earliest burying ground, the Post-Gager cemetery, as I had not found time for it on my previous visits.

I experienced a pleasing sensation when I turned into the shady country road between the attractive old-fashioned houses and proceeded over the antique right-of-way toward the two stone posts which mark the approach to the sacred spot.

Before me rose the green slope on the summit of which stands the spreading oak which marks one of the corners of the cemetery and in whose shade stands the Mason monument adjacent to the burying ground.

When I wished to enter the enclosure a roving cow seemed to object so strongly that I beat a retreat but only to return another day when I could dispose of more time. When I made my second attempt the cow was still on guard but the owner of the adjoining property came out to assure me she was not really dangerous. He took me to the monument and then showed me the location of the Post burying ground and told me that his father-in-law, in ploughing, had turned up many interesting objects, among them one of the old gravestones. He also said that there were many of these stones built into the walls and foundations about there and that one could see them as they were a different stone from the rest.

I exclaimed that I thought it horrible to plough over a graveyard and he said "Yes, we thought so too—so we only passture the cow here." I said I did not think that very respectful and he said it did no harm, on the contrary, was good for the grass.

The third time I visited the spot his wife came out and told me substantially the same things.

That afternoon I went to a tea-party and my mind being full of what I had seen and heard I spoke to the group of new acquaintances about the Post-Gager cemetery and I said I thought it was in an even more neglected and precarious condition than that described by Miss Caulkins in her history and that something should be done to protect it immediately. One of the ladies spoke rather sharply and said "Oh, Mrs. Wilson! These people have been the faithful guardians of the cemetery through all these years and they have a sentimental regard and reverence for it and I think it would be cruel of you, a new comer, to make any trouble." I was annoyed, but merely said I would think it over.

Some months later I visited the cemetery and again the woman neighbor came out to me and said: "Oh, Mrs. Wilson, I see you here so often and you seem so interested in the place I should like to ask a favor of you." I was astonished, but asked her what it was. Her request was that I should have the Mason monument removed from her property and put on the cemetery.

She said that whatever she wanted to do with her land "that thing" was always in her way and that her father should never have sold the little place of land nor allowed the monument to be built. I said "Well, he did sell it and as I have no connection with it I can do nothing about it. You must find out who compose the committee and put your case before them. I believe the mayor is ex-officio president of the committee. As for the monument being moved onto the burying ground, that is another question which would concern a larger number of people."

At that she left me and I came home feeling vaguely uncomfortable and anxious.

For some time after that I was overwhelmed with work and care and could not make the pilgrimage, but one day a man brought me a package as I stood on my doorsteps and he said "Norwich is looking up! They are building all up Yantic way. There is a great real estate boom!"

"I had not noticed it," I said.

"Yes," he said, "even up there by Lee avenue, near Adams tavern they are building right up over the hill!"

It was too true! In such a short time all the beauty had been laid low and the outline of a dwelling house, encroaching on the cemetery, was marked out on the hill-top—the "faithful guardians" had betrayed the dead.

Since then I have striven for more than a year in the face of great odds to recover this historic spot for Norwich Town.

Let all those who care for history, beauty or justice join me in this endeavor to spare our town a lasting disgrace.

As Frances Manwaring Caulkins says:

"The clay that once a soul possessed
Is not a common clod
O leave in sacred peace to rest
The workmanship of God!"

And when we think that those who lie in the Post-Gager cemetery are the founders of this settlement the spot becomes doubly sacred.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12—The most recent troubles in Cuba of Joseph E. Barlow, American claimant to sundry millions in connection with his dispossession of certain lands in the city of Havana, must have tickled former Secretary Kellogg if he read about it.

Not so long ago these two elderly gentlemen were within an ace of physical hostilities within the staid precincts of the state department itself.

Against his own indignant protest, Mr. Kellogg, then secretary of state, was surrounded for a time by special precautions against a chance street encounter with Barlow, who was breathing threats of smiting the secretarial nose.

And it can be said on good authority that despite his yearning for peace as exemplified in the Kellogg-Briand pact, the secretary appeared entirely willing to have it out with Barlow any time, any place.

The row resulted from Barlow's call on the secretary to urge diplomatic pressure in support of his claims in Cuba.

He became so incensed as to chide Mr. Kellogg in loud tones, and the visitor was ushered out with highly undiplomatic and forceful rejoinders from the secretary following him.

For a day or two after that, a uniformed watchman kept an eye on Kellogg's office door, a policeman did the like at his house o' nights, and always when he turned out in the morning to walk to the state department, an assistant secretary of state happened to be passing and fell in step with him.

Kellogg didn't like it and said so. His bent toward peace is of the philosophic order and applies to large international matters rather than to personal contacts. It would take more than 70 years to cool his fiery temper.

Two Warriors

Barlow, about the same age and as small physically as Kellogg, is built in the same way. There have been rumors of frequent clashes with American embassy folk in Havana and with other secretaries of state in the decade or so he has been waging the battle for his claim with the Cuban legal-political and American diplomatic machinery.

What the rights of that claim may be the Bystander does not know, but Senator Borah's foreign relations committee seemed satisfied after an inquiry that Barlow deserved diplomatic support.

Secretary Stimson already had started an inquiry of his own into the matter before Barlow got into new difficulties in Havana which led to his brief sojourn behind the bars of an old Spanish-built jail.

Embarrassing

As a matter of fact the Barlow case is not without its embarrassments for the state department, regardless of the merits of his claims.

Foreigners with similar claims against American citizens or American governmental entities, federal, state or municipal, always have been advised to seek redress first in American courts.

That is what Cuba said to Barlow. He has done that and been sustained by those courts, it appears. Whether there are further processes of law in Cuba through which he must pass the Bystander does not know.

It is obvious, however, that for the sake of consistency the state department cannot well bring heavy diplomatic pressure in the matter while there remains any legal recourse for the claimant in Cuba.

YOUR HEALTH

Insanity Like Heart Disease, Needs Early Treatment

(By William A. White, M. D., St. Elizabeth's Hospital, Washington, D. C.)

Few people realize the very great prevalence of mental disease and its enormous cost to the country. Until the beginning of the present century there was little scientific knowledge regarding it that was useful in prevention. Since the beginning of this century, however, this knowledge has rapidly been increasing. The mental hygiene movement is a movement towards healthy ways of training and using the mind. This has placed mental medicine along with the other medical specialties in which physicians are conducting a campaign of prevention.

One of the important pre-conditions to success in this campaign would be the removal from the popular conception of mental disease of the feeling of hopelessness, and of many of the ideas regarding it that have hung over from generations past. The following contrasted statements have been prepared by the National Committee for Mental Hygiene, in the form of a poster which the hospitals for mental disease throughout the country have been urged to place in a conspicuous place. This poster is being read each year by many thousands of people. It embodies these ideas as simply as they could be stated:

What some people still believe:

1. That "insanity" is either a disgrace or a mysterious affliction that cannot be prevented or cured.
2. That "insanity" is a single disease of only the most serious kind.
3. That "insanity" comes suddenly and without warning.
4. That people are helpless to prevent "insanity."
5. That emotional shock, loss of dear ones, disappointment in love, loss of money, or other misfortunes, cause "insanity."
6. That "insane asylums" are dreadful places, and that to go to one means never to come out.
7. That "insanity" is inherited.

What science teaches today:

1. That "insanity" includes a group of the more severe types of mental diseases. They need early medical treatment, just as does heart disease, and no one need to be ashamed of this sickness.
2. That there are many DIFFERENT KINDS of mental disease; some mild, some serious. The symptoms also are different.
3. That mental disease develops gradually and displays warning signs in advance.
4. That DANGER SIGNALS (symptoms) of an approaching breakdown can usually be recognized, and if these are given prompt medical attention, the threatened mental disease can often be prevented.
5. That shocks or losses may precipitate a mental disorder, but in such cases the real POSSIBILITIES of the illness have been present for some time but unrecognized.
6. That our "asylums" now are HOSPITALS from which 25 to 40 per cent of all patients are discharged as recovered or improved.
7. That some kinds of mental disease probably have an inherited background, but a greater number seem to arise from inability to adjust to a difficult environment.

CHILD TRAINING

The Game of Truth

Florence Bascom-Phillips

"Mother, Virgil hit me!" cried my three-year-old daughter.

"I did not! She hurt her own self," emphatically declared my five-year-old son.

"He did hit me. He did," sobbed Evangeline.

"Why, I didn't either!" replied Virgil with still more emphasis.

Such episodes became problems befiting the wisdom of Solomon, and the persistence of a Philadelphia lawyer, rather than that of an ordinary, busy mother with four tots under school age, all demanding attention. But experience with an older foster-son had demonstrated the evils growing out of a childhood habit of falsehood, so I determined to find a way to get these kindergarten children of mine to tell the truth. Therefore, I invented the "Game of Truth."

Placing a bottle, a pencil, a book, a ring, or similar articles on the table, I shut my eyes and said:

"Virgil, put the pencil on the kitchen cabinet."

Both children had formed habits of obedience, so this part was easy. Then I carefully explained how in this game we had to tell things exactly the way they really were, and placed a score card on the wall with each child's name written on it, promising a tiny gold star after the name of each one who successfully played the game.

Then I questioned as follows:

"Virgil, who put the pencil on the cabinet?"

Upon a satisfactory, truthful, well expressed answer, I said:

"Evangeline, who put the pencil on the cabinet?"

At first, she echoed the words of her brother, which made her claim that she had put the pencil there.

Virgil then got a star after his name for telling the truth, and I played the game with Evangeline doing the acting. Each time I questioned both children as to who did whatever I had told them to do, explaining patiently that each one must tell things just exactly as they really were, until both children could tell the truth about these simple things. It was a game to them, one of the most thrilling games we had played, and their delight knew no bounds when they began to see a row of gold stars after their names, for telling the truth.

Neither one has developed into a George Washington yet, but it has simplified the matter of getting their stories straight when they have a disagreement, for when I find one telling one thing and the other something else a reminder to "tell it just as it really is as we do in the Game of Truth" usually causes the child who is telling a falsehood to speak truthfully about the matter, even to acknowledging having done wrong. It seems that when approached in this way, the child's mind grasps the larger thought of speaking the truth, in place of the more personal idea of possible punishment or reprimand for having done wrong.

The most frequent cause of lying appears to be fear of consequences if the truth is known. The next, seems to be the effort to create a condition which will merit praise. Keeping these two facts in mind helps me with my "little flock."

IN DAY'S NEWS

Liberia.

Cooperation of the United States with Liberia in the investigation of labor conditions in the latter country, plans for which were recently announced by the state department, adds one more chapter to the many recording the assistance extended by the great American republic to its small copy in Africa.

A bulletin from the National Geographic Society, based on a communication from Harry A. McBridge, who has traveled in Liberia, describes the little republic and its capital.

"Nowhere in the world," writes Mr. McBride, "can there be found a foreign country so like the United States in history, language, customs and form of government. After traveling up the West African coast, touching at ports in British, French, Belgian, and Portuguese colonies, all of which are decidedly foreign, distinctly West African, and altogether 'far-away' and different in character, most Americans experience, when the slow west coast steamer turns its nose into Monrovia bay, a feeling of being much nearer home than the 4,000 miles which actually separates them from the nearest American ports.

"The steamer, cautiously approaching the shore, finally drops anchor and awaits a brave little surfboat, pulled by twenty stalwart natives in white duck uniforms, at first a tiny speck in the huge waves churning so threateningly over the dangerous bar. This feeling of interest is intensified when the boat approaches nearer and a flag is made out at its stern, so like the Stars and Stripes as to be readily mistaken for it. The Liberian emblem, however, has only 11 stripes and one lone star.

"Next the customs officers approaches—his English is decidedly American in accent—and demands that each passenger landing in Liberia prove that he has $100 in his possession. This requirement safeguards the little republic from having to care for public charges. And he doesn't speak of pounds, francs, or pesetas, either; he says, in plain American, 'one hundred dollars'—another link with home, the only place in Africa where the currency is the same as ours.

"Monrovia, the capital, named for an illustrious American president, is the largest town in the republic, and I should say that few cities in the world have a harbor so picturesque.

"Nature seems to have lavished great care on this out-of-the-way tropical stopping place. Monrovia bay is about seven miles wide, and vessels enter the harbor in the center, with Cape Mount far off toward the left and Monrovia Point, high and rocky, on the right. Between the Cape and the Point is the oval background of sandy beach and majestic palms.

"Because of the bar, steamers are forced to anchor a mile or more from the shore, while passengers and freight are landed in surfboats. Often this landing is an exciting experience, and the passenger always marvel at the canny judgment of the native 'headman' in choosing the wave that will be the longest and safest to 'ride in on.'

"The landing is disappointing. The wharf is small and untidy and the main business street along the waterfront—Water Street—is none too wide, none too straight, none too well paved, and none too clean.

"The business premises, most of the more pretentious kept by British, French and Dutch firms, are poor, with the first floor usually built of cement and the roof of corrugated iron. Water street could, however, easily be made to compare more favorably with the main business centers of Freetown or Dakar.

"Climbing the hill, two or three blocks, one comes to Ashman street, the chief residential thoroughfare, which is very pleasing in aspect. The executive mansion, the foreign legations and consulates, the war department building, and the representatives hall lend to its importance. On this street are also several of the best residences, well constructed of brick, after the fashion of American houses of the Colonial days with columns along the front.

"The executive mansion is a large, white, three-story structure—and it has its 'East Room.'

"Liberia occupies that corner of West Africa which juts out into the Atlantic as if in an endeavor to reach across to the Brazilian shore, on the South American continent. Only a few years ago the maps showed it to comprise a large area, extending northeastward almost to the Sahara; but the geographers themselves were unable to place definite heavy lines for Liberia's interior frontiers.

"Then came the dreams of African empires by European nations, and little by little the area accredited by the mapmakers to the weak little republic had dwindled until today its coastline is only 360 miles in length and its frontier farthest in the interior is only 200 miles from the sea coast. Its present area, about equal to that of the state of Ohio, is one-third what the Liberians originally claimed, and their claims were probably as good as those of many of the powers which undertook the colonizing of the Dark Continent.

"Here and there along the coast the original settlers—negro freedmen from the United States—founded little towns and settlements. They were sent from America back to the lands of their ancestors by the American Colonization society, in which such men as President Monroe, Henry Clay and others were interested. This movement began in 1816, and the first vessels, sailing schooners chartered by the American government, set forth from New York in 1820-23.

"Many of the first settlers succumbed to African fevers; others were killed by hostile natives. Indeed, the early efforts of these civilized Americo-Liberians to establish themselves on the African coast were not unlike those of the early colonists at Jamestown and the seekers of new homes who landed at Plymouth Rock. Finally they acquired right to certain lands by purchase from native chiefs."

Little Talks on Thrift

Home Ownership Shows Thrift Trend

The immense development in home ownership, especially as evidenced in the increase in suburban building is a promising sign of thrift progress.

Much suburban building represents individual home ownership. The own-your-own home movement is also present in the smaller towns and cities.

Rather than being huddled in quarters not their own, people are more and more trying to live in semi-rural sections. In their plans for homes they are showing every indication of a desire to have modern structures that are far more than four walls. Beautiful types of architecture are now being studied out for the ideal small home.

While it is not possible to tell how many millions of dollars will have been absorbed by new home-owning projects this year, it can be said that more Americans are now owning homes of their own than ever before.

Good roads and the automobile have enabled people to gratify their desire to enjoy better standards of living—to live amidst the beauties and comforts of a semi-rural existence where they may have their own gardens and flowers and ample room for rightful recreation and pleasure.

As the result of this great movement thousands of Americans are becoming home owners today who would never have taken this step otherwise.

It is a fortunate circumstance that this great movement—this migration to the suburbs, which is bringing with it such a tremendous amount of home-ownership—has been started. It has a general stabilizing effect, the value of which is beyond calculation.

The man who owns his own home is a stockholder of the United States. He owns a tangible part of it. The erection of his own home helps create new values for others as well as for himself. Through it communities grow and thrive, and the entire range of social conditions is bettered.—By S. W. Straus, president American Society For Thrift.

DECLINES TO RUN AGAIN ON TOWN SCHOOL BOARD

Walter F. Lester will not be a candidate for re-election to the town school board, it was learned Thursday. Mr. Lester has been a member of the board for nine years and for the last eight years has served as chairman of the board. His term does not expire until September of next year, but as there will be no town election a year from October, his successor will be elected at the town election next month. Mr. Lester made the announcement Thursday that he will not seek re-election. Pressure of business and the need for a well earned rest are given for his decision not to seek re-election.

Robert McNeely, it was learned Thursday, will seek re-election to the board. His term of office will expire at the end of this month. The other republican member of the board is James C. Macpherson whose term expires in 1931 and who has denied rumors to the effect that he was going to resign because of ill health.

It is understood that republican women of the town have circulated a petition asking representation on the board and it is possible that a woman will be elected to the board at the election next month. Thomas J. Kelly and E. J. Brophy will be re-nominated for election by the democratic party, it is said.

A number of outstanding improvements have been made in the town schools, and three new school buildings have been erected during the nine years Mr. Lester has been a member of the board. The new schools were erected on East Main street, Elizabeth street, and in Norwich Town. Efforts to have Mr. Lester re-consider his decision not to seek re-election were to no avail, it is understood.

THREE WORKMEN IN HOSPITAL AFTER TWO TRUCKS CRASH ON BALTIC ROAD

Four employes of P. F. Sweeney, the contractor, riding home from work Thursday afternoon on their employer's motor truck, were injured, one of them seriously, in a sideswiping accident with a motor truck of the H. F. and A. J. Dawley lumber firm on a curve on the road between Baltic and Occum.

All the injured men were brought to the Backus hospital in the ambulance, where one of them, Paul E. Winkle, 42, of 13 Hickory street was discharged after being treated for abrasions, but the other three remained as patients at the hospital. They are James Johnson, 43, of 103 Prospect street, contusions and abrasions on body; Charlie Gentile, 39, 38 Boswell avenue, contusions, soreness of abdomen, but no apparent serious injuries; and Ellis Ruley, colored, 120 Hight street, broken right arm. The last named sustained the most serious injuries.

The Sweeney truck which was operated by Driver Connell was bringing a group of men home from their work on the Baltic parochial school when it met a heavily loaded Dawley truck which Frederick D. Vergason of 108 Lafayette street was driving. The two machines swung together on the curve with considerable force and the men in the Sweeney truck were tossed about, Ruley flying out and doing a pinwheel in the air before he landed heavily in the trolley tracks.

A call for the ambulance was put in at once and the men were rushed to the Backus hospital.

The trucks were little damaged.

DEFENSE AND ANSWER IN FAIR GROUNDS LITIGATION

Defense is set up by Attorney George Houghton Gilman of this city, appearing as counsel for himself and his brother, Francis Gilman, also of this city in their answer to the $20,000 damage suit brought against them by Gilbert S. Raymond of this city as receiver of the New London County Agricultural society in connection with the refusal of the Gilmans to consummate the sale of the fair grounds at East Great Plains, the scene of the annual county fair. The Gilmans paid a deposit on the grounds at public auction, but refused to pay the balance. The suit brought against the Gilmans by the receiver is to force them to pay the balance of the purchase price.

Attorney Gilman in his answer recites that the title tendered by Mr. Raymond, claiming to be receiver of the Agricultural society, was and is unmarketable, in that Mr. Raymond was not and never was the duly appointed permanent receiver of the society and was not appointed upon full notice and opportunity to be heard to all concerned, and in that the sale was not made in accordance with the order therefor, and was not in accordance with the notices therefor given by advertising, and was not in accordance with the notices given by mailing.

Charges Fraud On Court

The answer also alleges that the action on or about Feb. 20, 1929 of Martin E. Jensen, a life member of the society in bringing a civil action against the New London County Agricultural society, returnable to the superior court for this county on March 5, 1929, for the appointment of a receiver for the society was collusive, and was a fraud on the court, and in that it conferred no jurisdiction upon the court to act in the premises.

For a separate defense it is alleged the transactions set forth in the complaint were an agreement for the sale of real property, and there was no part performance by the defendants and there was no memorandum of the agreement signed by either of the defendants (George H. and Francis Gilman) and there was no memorandum of the agreement signed by the agent of either of them.

Deny Raymond Is Receiver

The answer sets out that the Gilmans admit that the superior court made an order or judgment on March 8, 1929, but they deny that the plaintiff herein, Gilbert S. Raymond, was thereby appointed permanent receiver of the New London County Agricultural society or that he is or ever was such permanent receiver. A denial is also set up to the fact that the judgment or order directed him to sell the fair grounds, and it is alleged that the judgment or order directed him to sell all the assets of the society, including real and personal property as a whole.

The Gilmans admit that on May 1, 1929, Raymond, claiming to be receiver, purported to sell to them the fairgrounds and that they paid the sum of $2,000 therefor. They allege that the sale was not in accordance with the notices published and mailed of the proposed sale, and that the sale was void, and that Raymond had no authority to make the sale.

Attorney Gilman sets out that he admits that on May 1, 1929, acting for himself, executed an agreement for consummating the sale, and delivered it to Raymond.

It is admitted in the answer of the Gilmans that Raymond, claiming to be receiver, notified them that he was ready, able and willing to deliver a deed approved by the court for the premises, but it is denied that he was then or at any time the receiver of the society.

The answer further admits the fact that George H. Gilman refused to accept the deed or to pay any money therefor, and that he and his brother, Francis refused to pay and have not paid any sum of money in addition to the $2,000 paid May 1, 1929.

That Mr. Raymond on June 1, 1929, while claiming to be receiver of the society tendered to them a deed, conditioned upon the payment by them of $13,750 and demanded payment to him of the said sum and that they refused to accept the deed or to pay the sum is admitted by the Gilmans, but they deny that the deed was a good one and they deny that it was a sufficient deed.

Reply Filed By Raymond's Counsel

A reply to the defense set up by the Gilmans has also been filed in superior court with Clerk John H. Walker by the law firm of Perkins and McKay, counsel for Mr. Raymond.

That the judgment or order which directed Mr. Raymond to sell all the assets of the society, including real and personal property as a whole is admitted in the reply, but Raymond's counsel set up that the order of sale was modified by the court on or about April 12, 1929, and the court authorized and empowered the receiver to sell the real and personal property separately, which the plaintiff, Raymond, did.

Denial is made of the fact that "the sale was not in accordance with the notices published and mailed of the proposed sale, and that the said sale was void, and that Raymond had no authority to make said sale." In a rejoiner filed by Attorney Gilman it is denied on information and belief that the court modified the judgment or order of sale and it is denied on information and belief that the court authorized and empowered Mr. Raymond to sell the real and personal property separately.

The reply of Perkins and McKay also admits the fact set out in the answer that "the defendant, George H. Gilman, acting for himself, executed a paper of which Exhibit A annexed to the complaint is a copy", but counsel allege that George H. Gilman also signed the instrument as the agent of his brother, Francis, although he signed the instrument once only, and that he signed the instrument in a dual capacity.

Counsel for Mr. Raymond deny entirely the paragraph of the answer which alleges that, "the title tendered by the said Raymond, claiming to be receiver of the said society, was and is unmarketable, and that the said Raymond was not and never was the duly appointed permanent receiver of the said society, and was not appointed upon full notice and opportunity to be heard to all concerned, and in that the said sale was not made in accordance with the orders therefor given by advertising and was not in accordance with the notices given by mailing, and in that the action referred to in paragraph 1 of the complaint was collusive and was a fraud on the court, and in that it conferred no jurisdiction upon the court to act in the premises."

Errors Clerical and Immaterial

Exhibit A, counsel for Mr. Raymond set forth in their reply to the answer made by the Gilmans, is a good and sufficient memorandum of an agreement concerning the sale of real estate and the errors appearing therein are clerical and immaterial, and it was executed and delivered by George H. Gilman, who was acting for himself and as agent of Francis Gilman.

In concluding their reply to the defense set up by the Gilmans, counsel for Mr. Raymond states:

"The transactions between the plaintiffs and defendants were and are an equitable judicial sale. The public auction held by the receiver on May 1, 1929, was subject to the confirmation and approval of the court, and on or about May 27, 1929, the court confirmed and approved the sale of the real estate on the New London County Agricultural society, described in Exhibit A, to George H. Gilman and Francis Gilman for the sum of $15,750—$2,000 of which the defendants had paid, and the further sum of $13,750 remaining to be paid; the said real estate to be subject to a mortgage of $25,000, dated June 1, 1922, and recorded in Norwich Land Records, Book 164, page 255."

MERIT BADGE COUNSELORS TO RAISE STANDARDS

A meeting of the merit badge counselors for the city of Norwich was held in the conference room of the chamber of commerce Thursday night chairman of the court of honor, presided and in a few introductory remarks, spoke of the experiences of previous courts of honor, of the necessity for higher standards and of the attempt to be made this fall to make the courts public occasions of interest to parents as well as scouts.

Scout Executive John L. Sellman distributed sheets showing the different requirements for badges with a picture of the badge. Circulars entitled, "The Merit Badge Counselor" were distributed by the scouts and occasioned some discussion. Arthur L. Peale, scout commissioner, spoke of his experience as a merit badge counselor and of the necessity for higher standards and more thorough instruction. He pointed out the great service men are rendering boys by meeting with them to discuss their interests and hobbies.

Junior Assistant Scoutmaster Cecil Wetherbee, speaking for the scouts, emphasized the boy's reaction to the manner in which he receives his badge. He urged that the requirements as listed in the manual be more fully met in the future. Scout Nick Tarrant gave an interesting talk on the 19 badges he has earned and of how the badges required for Eagle Scout challenge any boy. He, too, declared the counselor should enter more into the life of the boy. Robert Agnew seconded what Scouts Wetherbee and Tarrant had said. He told how a doctor going to the trouble of showing him bacillus had made him more appreciative of his first aid badge.

All the men present were asked to write an article for the newspaper on their badge the same to be incorporated with requirements and a picture of the badge into a news article.

A committee of five men was chosen to aid in putting on a merit badge show later in the fall. This show will consist of exhibits made by scouts in different troops.

Charles Coit, president of the local council, was present at the meeting and talked with many of the counselors, personally, on problems of scouting. Merit badge counselors present were: James J. Dutton, on salesmanship; Lewis H. Walden, on art, bookbinding, leathercraft and leather work; Emery H. Davis, on pioneering; William Corey, on cooking; Fire Chief H. R. Taft, on firemanship and safety; William Wyman, on life saving and swimming; Frederick H. Cranston, on business, machinery, metal work; Henry A. Tirrell, on civics, interpreting, and scholarship; Joseph W. Curtiss, on foundry practice; Martin E. Jensen, on mining; Henry LaFontaine, on music; John W. Hill, on painting; Charles Williams, on plumbing; Joseph A. French, on seamanship; Weston C. Pullen, on printing; Reginald Laubin, on archery; W. Howard Demarest, on physical development and athletics; James P. Sheridan, on automobiling; W. U. Forschler, on basketry, carpentry, handicraft and woodwork; C. V. Pendleton, on reptile study; Arthur L. Peale, on camping and hiking; Lewis M. Young, on masonry and cement work; Imbert E. Fellows, on poultry keeping.

Other merit badge counselors who were unable to attend the meeting but who have signified their intention to help the boys with this work are: Walter F. Lester, in aviation; R. Whaples, in weather and forestry; Kirk Ricketts, in pathfinding; Lewis Smith, in radio; Shephard B. Palmer, in surveying; E. V. Ross, in angling; Dr. R. R. Agnew, counselor, in first aid, first aid to animals, personal health, and public health; Walter T. Clark, in agriculture, dairying and gardening; James V. Pedace, in journalism; Capt. W. R. Denison, in marksmanship; Don Houghton, in photography; H. Downer Johnson, in textiles; George Zimmerman, in woodcarving; Raymond Case, in astronomy, botany, and chemistry; Henry Bamber, in blacksmithing; Mr. Fuller, in bird study, taxidermy and conservation; John M. Swahn, in bugling.

Howard Ludlow, scoutmaster, and Scouts Cecil Wetherbee, Nick Tarrant and Robert Agnew served as a reception committee.

WORKERS' BLAST OPENS SOURCE OF CHILLY AIR

BEND, Ore. (AP)—A chilling current of air from a subterreanean source was released by a dynamite blast of highway workmen near here.

Geologists believe an unknown lava cavern crosses central Oregon and that wind enters its mouth, is cooled in passage through ice caves and by forced draft is expelled through the newly opened orifice.

The flow of cold air seems inexhaustible.

HELEN HICKS ROMPS TO VICTORY BY MARGIN OF 14 STROKES IN CHICAGO PLAY

(By Paul R. Mickelson, Associated Press Sports Writer)

CHICAGO, Sept. 12—(AP)—New York's 18-year-old golfing prodigy, Miss Helen Hicks, ended her first important invasion of the middlewest gloriously today, winning the derby, a new 72 hole medal play classic for women, by a decisive margin of 14 strokes.

The husky, broad shouldered New York girl, who amazed the golf world by her brilliant performances down south last winter, shot exactly par for her four rounds on the tricky Flossmoor Country club course to gain her one-sided triumph, adding an 81 today to her previous cards of 78-78—83 for a handsome 320 total.

Her closest rival was Virginia Van Wie of Chicago, finalist in the 1928 national championship, who jumped from fourth to second place by shooting a 79, the lowest score turned in by today's field, for a 334 total. Maureen Orcutt of White Beeches, N. Y., present metropolitan champion, ranked third with Mrs. Lee Mida of Chicago with 336 strokes. Mrs. Dorothy Kiotz Pardue of Hibbing, Minn., was next with 340, while Mrs. Gregg Lifur of Los Angeles was three strokes behind her.

Compared with women's par, Miss Hicks' performance probably established a new record for feminine golf. From the first round on, she held a wide margin over the small but classy field which faltered badly on the first two rounds to give her a 10 stroke lead at the halfway mark. All told, Miss Hicks snared 16 birdies on her 72 hole tour and went one stroke over par on as many.

The record for men's 72 hole national open play is only two strokes better than par, established in 1916 by "Chick" Evans.

Total round scores for the other leaders:

Maureen Orcutt, White Beeches, N. Y., 84-87-80-85—336.

Mrs. Lee Mida, Chicago, 83-83-83-87—336.

Mrs. Dorothy Kotz Parude, Hibbing, Minn., 82-90-84-84—340.

Mrs. Gregg Lifur, Los Angeles, 85-85-83-87—342.

Mrs. Melvin Jones, Chicago, 83-89-86-90—348.

Bernice Wall, Oshkosh, Wis., 89-91-84-84—348.

HOUSE OF DAVID TEAM PRESENTS UNIQUE CLUB

Those long haired, bewhiskered baseballists from the House of David will appear at the J. B. Martin grounds Sunday afternoon. Put a mark on your calendar now to serve as a reminder you have a date with yourself to take in this game. This bunch of athletes, all bedecked with beards and some with flowing hair, present one of the biggest attraction in the sporting world. Nobody will dispute the validity of their claim to being the most unique attraction in baseball today. The team is an annual visitor in many cities and at present have just completed a tour through Nova Scotia, where they have played 30 games in twenty days, winning all. The demand and crowds being so large it was necessary to play afternoon and evening games in most of the large cities. The novelty of men looking like fit subjects for an undertaker to work on scampering around a baseball diamond like kids doesn't seem to wear off, as a matter of fact many of these players are not so ancient, in spite of their deceiving appearance. Many of them have had chances to enter organized ball, shaven, but religion as taught them, forbids and the leagues are the losers.

H. N. S. IN TWO HOME GAMES OVER THE WEEK END

Saturday at Ashland park, the Jewett City H. N. S. team will meet the fast Plainfield Red Stars. The locals hold a ten-inning victory over Plainfield at Plainfield this season and no doubt the Red Stars are out to even the count. Either Bernal or Vachon will most likely twirl for the H. N. S., while Marriot is the probable choice for Plainfield.

Sunday at Jewett City, the series between the H. N. S. and the Taftville American Legions will open. This game will most likely produce real rivalry as all Taftville-Jewett City series have done in the past. As yet the exact Taftville lineup is unknown, but the H. N. S. will lineup as follows:

Pizzo, c; Vachon or Bernal, p; Perry, 1st; H. Matthews, 2nd; Kusek, ss; Solenski, 3rd; Slonsky, Gaska, Liberty, Wolkosky and Beaulieu, outfield.

This game is scheduled for 3 p. m. at Ashland park.

STRONG SUPPORTING CAST FOR LOUGHRAN-SHARKEY BOUT

NEW YORK, Sept. 12—(AP)—The Madison Square Garden corporation tonight announced the supporting card for the Tommy Loughran-Jack Sharkey fifteen round heavyweight bout at the Yankee stadium on September 26.

Jim Maloney of Boston will meet Armand Emanuel of the Pacific coast in the semi-final of ten rounds, and another bout of the same distance will bring together Tom Heeney, Gene Tunney's victim of last summer, and George Hoffman, the former amateur.

Jack Gagnon of New Bedford, Mass., will meet Lou Barba in a six-round bout, and Phil Baring of the navy will oppose Bob Carvill of New England in the opening brush of four rounds.

BIG SIX AVERAGES TAKE DOWNWARD PATH

(By The Associated Press)

The Big Six batting averages took the downward patch yesterday except in the case of Al Simmons. Hits were few and far between with Simmons the only player who was able to get a pair. The two in four times at bat raised his mark one point to .367, only two points behind his teammate and rival, Jimmy Foxx. Ruth and Hornsby went hitless for the day while O'Doul, Herman and Foxx got but one blow apiece. The Babe and the Rajah lost three points apiece in the averages:

HERRING PITCHES TIGERS TO WIN OVER RED SOX

BOSTON, Sept. 12—(AP)—Arthur Herring, 23-year-old righthander from Oklahoma City, signalized his major league debut here today by pitching the Detroit Tigers to a 2 to 1 victory over the Red Sox. Herring held the local club to eight well scattered blows.

Ed Morris, Red Sox ace, pitched well enough to win most games. What moved to be the winning run was scored off him in the eighth on singles by Johnson and Alexander with an error by Scarritt sandwiched between. Herring scored the Tigers' other run after delivering a healthy two base hit when Johnson, who was as strong in the field as at bat, singled him home. The score:

YANKS FINALLY SHAKE JINX AND DEFEAT BROWNS, 5-2

NEW YORK, Sept. 12—(AP)—The Yankees today conquered the jinx which followed them in five successive games against the Browns, defeating the St. Louisians in the second game of the current series by 5 to 2.

Roy Sherid was wild but well supported, particularly by Combs and Koenig. The shortstop started three double plays. Combs snared Schulte's liner with three on in the fifth, drove in two runs and scored another. Lazzeri hit a home run and a double. The score:

WALTER MILLER TAMES NATS AND INDIANS WIN, 5 TO 1

ATHLETICS EDGE OUT WIN OVER CHICOX BY 4 TO 3

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 12—(AP)—The Athletics advanced to within three games of pennant certainty this afternoon by taking their second straight from the Chicago White Sox in an eighth inning rally, by 4 to 3.

Blackburne's minions wiped out an early Mack lead when they pounded Rube Walberg out of the box while scoring two runs in the sixth, but in the eighth Bing Miller touched Al Thomas for a single, stole second and scored the winning run on Joe Boley's scratch single through short.

Rommel pitched a fine brand of relief ball in blanking the White Sox after going to Walberg's assistance in the sixth. The victory was the eleventh for the Athletics in twenty games with Chicago, assuring the new champions at least an even break in the season's series. The score:

It isn't often we laugh at another's misfortune but yesterday we enjoyed a quiet chuckle all to ourselves.

Perhaps some of you have seen the little white car around town bearing the words, "The Bad Bill Collector," in big, black letters.

Now how would you feel to have that car parked out in front of your house or place of business for a couple hours when you didn't owe a nickel in the world?

You can imagine how everybody going by would look at the car and then at the house and make a mental note of it. And how at the next meeting of the gossip league they would come out with the choice bit of information that Mr. John must be pretty near on the rocks.

And when they were asked how they knew their answer would be that they saw the bad-bill collector's car parked out in front of Mr. John's house for two hours. That would be enough and Mr. John would be put down as a financial wreck.

This is about the same as in the old days when the brewer's wazon always stopped in front of the teetotaler's house when delivering a case to a neighbor. How that used to burn up the teetotaler in those days.

The little white car was parked in front of a certain place yesterday afternoon while the collector was doing business in some other part of the town.

And people in passing would look at the car and then see in front of the building it was parked. They'd smile to themselves and you can imagine their thoughts. Well, it didn't set so very well with the proprietor of the establishment, either, and who can blame him.

The officer on the beat also took notice of the fact and it was with a sort of unholy glee that certain people saw the officer hang a tag on the car for parking overtime.

And now the court is going to collect from the collector.

It is to lauzh, Ha. Ha.

HORACE FORD'S HOME RUN WINS FOR REDS BY 3 TO 2

CINCINNATI, Sept. 12—(AP)—A freak home run by Horace Ford beat Dazzy Vance, 3 to 2, and Cincinnati won the second game in the fourth inning with Sukeforth on first. In making a try for the ball Babe Herman put on a tumbling act instead of making the catch. Herman stumbled against the fence in front of the right field stand and then turned a complete flip-flop over into the seats while the ball rolled away and the two runners scored.

The Reds hit Vance fairly hard while Eppa Rixey held the Dodgers well in hand allowing only five hits. Sensational catches by Rube Bressler and Johnny Frederick saved Vance several times. The score:

CLAUDE WILLOUGHBY STOPS CUBS AS PHILS WIN, 7-1

CHICAGO, Sept. 12—(AP)—Chicago lost a 7 to 1 decision to Philadelphia today but moved nearer the National league pennant as New York beat Pittsburgh by 8 to 5. Three more victories will clinch the flag.

Claude Willoughby hurled great ball to check the Cubs. He allowed seven hits, five of which came in the last three innings after he had a big lead.

Guy Bush, ace of the Cubs' staff, was driven from the mound in the seventh and Cvengros and Carlson finished. Bush gave only eight bases on balls and was touched for ten hits. It was Bush's fourth defeat.

ONLY 24 REPORT TO DOLE FOR FOOTBALL

STORRS, Sept. 12—(AP)—Only 24 of the 30 candidates Coach Sumner A. Dole expected for football practice at Connecticut Agricultural college, turned out today. It was the smallest squad Dole has had in his seven years here.

He gave the candidates a light workout lasting two hours, drilling them in setting up exercises, passing, kicking, ball handling and passive work in blocking and tackling.

Ten lettermen, including two regular linemen of last year, were out for practice. Six of the lettermen were in the backfield last year.

TILDEN HAS NARROW ESCAPE FROM DEFEAT AT HANDS OF JOHN VAN RYN

(By Ted Vosburgh, Associated Press Sports Writer)

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Sept. 12—(AP)—For a tense moment this afternoon Big Bill Tilden stood face to face with defeat in the quarter-final round of the National Single Championship tournament upon the winning which he has set his heart.

Weary, and harried, chasing the well-placed shots of young Johnny Van Ryn of East Orange, N. J., Tilden found himself trailing at two games to five in the third set after having won the first set at 7-5 and lost the second at 2-6 as the former Princeton tennis captain drove home his earnest challenge.

Then with the fighting heart of the great champion he has always been, Big Bill rose to the occasion, brought his wavering arm under rigid control, took the set at 9-7 then went on to out-play and finally master his youthful adversary by scores of 7-5, 2-6, 9-7, 6-2.

Another formidable young American challenger must be met and beaten tomorrow if Tilden is to enter the final round of play for the title that the great French players have left for the home stars to fight for after monopolizing the crown for three straight years.

Johnny Doeg, bronzed young California giant from Stanford university crushed Henry Wilfred "Bunny" Austin of England by scores of 6-4, 6-4, 8-3 in another of the quarter finals. In the lower half Fritz Mercur, of Lehigh university came through at 8-6, 10-8, 6-4 against Wilmer Allison, hard fighting Texan, and Tilden's friend, Francis T. Hunter, of New Rochelle, N. Y., downed Richard N. Williams 2nd of Philadelphia the old ex-champion, in a third straight set engagement, 6-0, 6-3, 6-4.

Thus both of the semi-finals will find the old guard shooting it out with young America.

Alternately bursting into cheers and applause, and lapsing into almost complete silence during the long rallies a gallery of 7,000 watched every move in the epic battle between Tilden and Van Ryn.

In the veteran singles, H. H. Bassford, defending champion, reached the semi-finals, defeating Irving Wright, 6-4, 6-3.

Summaries national veterans singles championship quarter final round:

H. H. Bassford, Scarsdale, N. Y., defeated I. Wright, Boston, 6-4, 6-3.

C. M. Charest, Washington, defeated S. J. Adams, Jr., Fort Washington, N. Y., 6-2, 6-1.

A. J. Cawse, New York, defeated Dr. W. Rosenbaum, New York, 3-6, 7-5, 6-3.

J. B. Adou, Jr., Dallas, Texas, defeated P. Martin Scarsdale, 11-9, 4-6, 10-8.

GRIFFITH STOPS HAYMANN IN THE FOURTH ROUND

NEW YORK, Sept. 12—(AP)—Tuffy Griffith, two-fisted slugger from Sioux City, Ia., did his bit toward checking the current foreign menace in American heavyweight circles tonight by stopping Dr. Ludwig Haymann, of Germany, in the fourth round of their ten round bout at Madison quare Garden tonight. The end came after two minutes and 35 seconds of fighting in the fourth round.

Haymann, who holds the heavyweight title of Germany, never had a chance with the hard hitting Griffiths. Tuffy floored his man for a nine count in the first minute of the fourth round. Haymann got up and went right back down. Up he came again to take another crushing right flush on the chin and the referee called a halt.

Griffiths gave away 15 pounds to his foreign opponent. He weighed 184 to Haymann's 199.

The Sioux City heavyweight tore into Haymann at the opening gong and never ceased firing until he had him down and out.

Haymann caught several hard rights in the very first round and from then on was on the run and did not land a single telling blow.

It was a crushing defeat for Haymann who had began his American invasion with two impressive knockouts: And it was a well-earned victory for the Iowa clouter who was knocked out by Jimmy Braddock in his first New York bout last winter.

Griffiths flashed a two-fisted attack that simply bewildered Haymann. Tuffy worked his right for the first two rounds and then shifted to a left hook in the third session.

When the fourth round opened Haymann came out looking for some more of the same and ran into a right that planted him on his back in the middle of the ring. From then on it made no difference. Haymann was through and it was just a matter of waiting for the finish.

Sidewalks In Parisian Life

French newspapers call attention to the hundredth anniversary of an institution which has done far more than its humble part in making Paris famous—the lowly sidewalk.

A communication to the National Geographic society from J. R. Hildebrand, notes that not even the 'sidewalks of New York' play nearly so important a part in the daily life of their city as the sidewalks of the French capital do in Paris.

"The sidewalk cafe is familiar, but the Parisian finds multitudinous other uses for his sidewalks than feasting on them. He shops, he writes his letters, he strolls on them; he reads his daily paper there; his wife does her sewing and mending; he even fishes from them!

"Behind these customs lies an interesting bit of civic geography. Paris is a city

WATCH FOR LOS ANGELES— SEEN FROM BEACHES THURSDAY

Shortly after 11:00 Wednesday night it was learned by radio that the navy dirigible Los Angeles had left its Lakehurst hangar and was proceeding to Newport, R. I., on a practice cruise. To some this appeared to mean that the government had sent the navy craft to this section of the country to see what had become of Otto Seidel, pilot of the advertising balloon which broke loose from its mooring at his Westerly factory Wednesday morning and sailed away out over Block Island sound. Advantage was taken by a few nighthawks to visit Hinckley hill in Pawcatuck to observe the approach of the air visitor up Long Island sound and up to 12.30 a. m. the craft did not put in an appearance, so self-appointed watchers went to bed.

A course must have been laid out off the south shore of Long Island for at daybreak the Los Angeles moored to the mast of U. S. S. Patoka, anchored in Narragansett bay between the islands of Jamestown and Newport. On its return trip to its Lakehurst port Thursday, begun just before noon, watchers at the Westerly beaches of Weekapaug, Misquamicut and Watch Hill saw the aircraft headed in a westerly direction shortly after the noon hour. The big airship was also seen from some of the more elevated points in and about Westerly, as it flew at a low altitude over Fishers Island sounds.

Andrews.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Jerry Muskrat Shows Off

The humblest person often will Delight in showing off his skill. —Old Mother Nature.

"You're a very fine swimmer," said Flip politely to Jerry Muskrat.

"When have you seen me swim?" demanded Jerry Muskrat.

"Why, the other day when I tried to catch you," said Flip.

"Pooh, that was nothing!" said Jerry. "I was just playing. That wasn't real swimming. I let you get as close to me as you did just for fun."

"Well, all I can say is that if that wasn't real swimming I don't know what is," said Flip. "Did you swim under water? I don't see how any one can swim under water."

"Oh, that's easy," replied Jerry Muskrat. "First, you draw your lungs full of air, then you put your head under water, open your eyes and just swim. Watch me now."

Jerry took a long breath and dived. Being on the bank above him, Flip and Bowser the Hound, who was with Flip, could see Jerry in the water. They saw him swim clear across the

He suddenly dived and went down deep.

Smiling Pool without once coming to the surface. Then they lost sight of him. That was because Jerry came up among the rushes on the other side. A moment or two later he poked his head out of water right beneath them again.

"My," exclaimed Flip, "I don't see how you do it. I wish I could swim under water like that. I can't swim under water at all."

"You don't have to," replied Jerry, "but I do, and that makes the difference."

"What do you have to swim under water for?" Flip inquired.

"For a number of things," replied Jerry. "I get some of my food down on the bottom of the Laughing Brook and the Smiling Pool."

"You do!" exclaimed Flip.

Jerry nodded. "I'll show you," said he. He suddenly dived and went down deep. He was gone so long that Flip began to be anxious. He was just about to ask Bowser if he supposed anything could have happened to Jerry when the latter popped his head out of water. In his mouth was something that Flip didn't recognize at all.

"What is that you have there?" asked Flip.

Jerry didn't speak. He couldn't. His mouth was full. Instead, he swam over to a favorite log and climbed out on it. There he sat, very busy for a few minutes. Flip watched, full of curiosity. Jerry seemed to be opening something. He was. It was a fresh water mussel, or clam, as some people call it. In a moment he had the mussel opened and ate what was inside the shells. The two shells dropped in the water. Jerry then smacked his lips.

"If I couldn't stay under water I couldn't get one of those fellows," said he, "and they certainly are good eating. Now I'll go get me a root."

Once more Jerry dived and this time he headed toward the rushes on the other side. In a moment Flip noticed one of those rushes moving violently. Then it disappeared down in the water. Almost at once Jerry Muskrat's head appeared. He came swimming back with a rush in his mouth. He cut off the stalk and began to nibble the root.

"Now do you see why it is necessary for me to be able to swim under water?" said he.

Flip nodded. "I'm learning every minute," he replied. "I think you must be the greatest swimmer in all the Great World."

DEMAND INCREASES FOR SPECIAL STAMPS

WASHINGTON —(AP) —Demand for commemorative stamps is increasing every year. The postmaster general is constantly besieged by groups and individuals in various parts of the country to issue stamps commemorating some event.

The first of such stamps, the Columbian series, was put out in 1893 in honor of the Chicago World's fair. No more were issued until 1898, when the Trans-Mississippi exposition was recognized in the same way. Three years later the Pan America issue started the vogue of commemorative stamps, which has increased steadily.

Thus far this year five stamp issues have honored various individuals and events. They are the George Rogers Clark stamp, the Thomas A. Edison, the Sullivan expedition, the Ohio river canalization and the Gen. Anthony Wayne stamp to commemorate the one hundred and thirty-fifth anniversary of the Battle of Fallen Timbers, which resulted in peace with the Indians and put America in a position to advance westward.

To be recognized with a special stamp an event must have national significance or at least have received an appropriation from congress.

The number of stamps issued depends on the popularity of the subject and the estimated demand. The largest issue ever put out was the two-cent stamp of the Columbian series, of which 1,464,588,750 were printed. The largest denomination was the $5 stamp of this same issue.

An act of congress prohibits placing the face of any living person upon a commemorative stamp. There have been three issues of memorial stamps, the Lincoln, Harding and Ericsson.

BALLOON REFEREE SET MARK IN 1910

ST. LOUIS—(AP)—Alan R. Hawley, referee of the James Gordon Bennett international balloon races, may officiate at the breaking of his own record that once stood as a world mark.

It is unlikely, however, that the wealthy New York sportsman's experience of 1910 will be equalled in the race beginning here September 28.

In his record-breaking race of that year, Hawley and Augustus Post of New York set out from St. Louis in the "America II" as United States representatives in the international contest.

Drifting into Canada, they became engulfed in a snow storm and heavy wind. They landed on the face of a mountain, 1,173 miles from the starting point.

Their whereabouts was a mystery to a waiting world. The armies and navies of this country and Canada and others sought to win large rewards by finding them dead or alive.

Meanwhile, Hawley and Post plodded eight days through forests and arrived, exhausted, at Chicoutimi, Quebec, aboard an improvised raft.

Two years later M. Blenaime of France set the present world record for free balloon flight. In the 1912 races he stayed up 46 hours, two hours longer than Hawley's mark.

UNPROTECTED FORESTS BIGGEST FIRE HAZARD

WASHINGTON — (AP) — Complete reports of the federal forest service for 1928 show that 136,362 of the 177,362 forest fires last year occurred on unprotected areas.

The damage on 350,498,960 acres of protected land was but $8,583,620, compared to a damage of $74,370,000 on 178,855,050 unprotected acres. Fire burned over but 4,428,400 acres of the protected areas whereas it burned a total of 39,502,810 acres of unprotected forest.

Careless smokers were responsible for the largest number of fires on protected lands, causing 8,346 fires or 20.6 per cent of the total.

EXPORTERS GET ADVICE ON FAR EASTERN TRADE

NEW YORK—(AP)—Trade possibilities in India and Japan have come in for a little concentrated interest on the part of the export managers club since their last luncheon.

Charles B. Spofford, trade commissioner at Bombay, and Halleck A. Butts, commercial attache at Tokyo, told the exporters that they must take into consideration special customs and racial factors in the Orient.

Both said that American exporters could benefit by adhering strictly to specifications in making shipment, because trans-Pacific merchants and importers insist on the letter of an agreement.

CHEMICAL WEED KILLER NEEDS CAREFUL WATCH

ST. PAUL, Minn — (AP) —Farmers have found sodium chlorate an effective weed killer, but chemists and plant specialists at the University of Minnesota warn that it is a dangerous explosive and a fire hazard under certain conditions.

It must be kept dry, never stored near sulphur or lime, and only in a steel container. It will explode when subjected to friction if mixed with dust, or spilled on clothing.

Further, veterinarians have found it poisonous to cattle in comparatively small amounts and warn against using it for pasture weeds.

Heaven helps those who help others to help themselves.

DRIVERS' CARELESSNESS HIKES OKLAHOMA TAXES

OKLAHOMA CITY —(AP)— In Oklahoma the reckless motorist is adding thousands of dollars a year to the taxpayer's bill.

Damage to highway repair equipment, says John Rightmire, state engineer, has become excessive. Graders and tar heaters frequently have been overturned or demolished beyond repair by speeding cars.

Sometimes horses belonging to repairmen have been killed. One highway worker was struck by an automobile and its driver became indignant when the injured man's fellow workers sought to use the car to take him to a hospital.

"We try to make the motorist pay the damage," Mr. Rightmire says, "but as a rule those who do the damage have no money."

Drive America's finest medium-priced automobile and learn what a difference there is

Nowhere is the impressive superiority of today's Oakland All-American Six more clearly revealed than in its remarkable performance.

Oakland's engine has, among other features, the large piston displacement necessary in developing high power at the moderate engine speed essential to long life—the Harmonic Balancer to neutralize torsional vibration in the crankshaft—rubber "biscuit" mountings to insulate it from the frame and make it incomparably smooth and free from vibration.

Drive this car—and learn what a difference these features make. We will prove to your complete satisfaction that today's Oakland is America's finest medium-priced automobile.

Why Oakland is unrivaled in performance at its price

The following facts were obtained from a comparison of the Oakland All-American Six with 20 other medium-priced automobiles. All told, 878 individual comparisons were made. Of these Oakland proved to be distinctly superior in 451 or 51.37 per cent. The 20 cars combined were at best equal to Oakland on 382 or 43.50 per cent. And 13 of the 20 were higher-priced than Oakland!

PISTON DISPLACEMENT
Oakland's 226-cubic-inch piston displacement is greater than 12 of the 20 cars in its price field. Of the 8 remaining cars, 7 are much higher-priced than Oakland.

G-M-R CYLINDER HEAD
Only Oakland and one other car in the field use the G-M-R cylinder head. Sixteen have no type of non-detonating cylinder head whatsoever, although 11 of the 16 are more expensive to buy than Oakland.

RUBBER ENGINE MOUNTING
Only Oakland in the entire field employs rubber "biscuit" insulators. While others claim rubber mountings, none offers such resilience and permanent freedom from vibration as Oakland.

HARMONIC BALANCER
Only Oakland and one other car in the field have the Harmonic Balancer. Of 13 cars using some other device, 11 are higher-priced than Oakland. Oakland's crankshaft is fully counterweighted. The crankshafts in nine higher-priced cars are not counterweighted at all.

CRANKCASE VENTILATION
While most cars in the field have crankcase ventilation, only Oakland and one other, according to available information, have any method for cleaning the air. Six have not, although three of the six are higher-priced than Oakland.

The 2-Door Sedan

BROTHERS' PROGRAM WINS IN CONTEST AT GRANGE

Ledyard grange held its meeting in grange hall Friday evening, Sept. 6, with Carl H. Holdridge, master, in the chair. Visitors from several granges were present. There was a contest between the sisters and brothers to see who would put on the better program for the lecturer's home. At the last grange meeting the sisters put on their program, with Mrs. Robert Bennett, leader. The lecture's hour at this grange meeting was in charge of Brother Harry Hanks who had arranged the following program: Singing Old Folks at Home and Old Black Joe; talk by George A. Montgomery on his attendance at the State grange field day held recently in Rhode Island, also a recitation. The Darkey's Sermon: Fred Allen sang a solo with encore: Alonzo Shaffer read an article entitled "Things Worth Doing". Mr. Montgomery gave a song with encore, and Paul Wieman spoke of his recent trip to California, especially concerning the oil wells there. The judges, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Muttart of Norwich and Mrs. Alice Gray of North Stonington, decided that the man had put on the better program.

Mrs. George A. Perkins of Lincoln Center, Maine and Mrs. Fred Stetson, of Cambridge, Mass., are guests of Mrs. Delarn Sheldon, the former being the sister of Mrs. Sheldon and Charles Poole who has been visiting Mrs. Perkins, motored with them to Ledyard.

EXTRAVAGANCES.

(Written Especially For The Bulletin)

Some of us aren't half so much worried over the exuberances of the younger generation as we are over the lunkheadedness of the older folks.

Youth always has been and doubtless always will be a period of unrest and rebellion. It is idealistic on the one side and frankly animalistic on another. It is a mixture of Utopia and delicatessens. It has its eyes on the shining towers of some city of dreams and its feet in the mire of eager and unrestrained desires. It wants caviar and champagne, not bread and milk. No wonder it seems to some old and tired and disillusioned eyes to be running wild.

Such should be patient. It won't be long before the radicals of 20 will have changed into the conservatives of 40 and the old foxies of 60. They soon enough discover that the gilded glories of The-Other-End-of- Somewhere are are very much of a muchness with the tawdry tinsel of This-End-of-Anywhere. After they have broken a few arms and legs and heads in their scramble to attain the unattainable they will settle down to a humdrum pacing up and down the back yards of more or less humble homes—and thank their stars for warmed-over stew and plated knives and forks.

Very few of them will be found chasing Utopias after their waistbands begin to expand.

Whether they come, as Wordsworth intimates, trailing clouds of glory from heaven, or, as I have heard some disraught parents suggest, from the other place, dragging fogs of impishness and devilry in their wakes, matters less than the fact that they'll lose both clouds and fogs and glories and devilries, in due course, and settle down, as we older and wiser (?) ones have done, to the common drugeries of a common-place existence.

They'll lose their exuberances, never fear. They'll get over prancing and curveting and settle back into their collars as steady draft horses. There's hope for them.

But what hope is there for those who have long passed their 'teens, and yet haven't arrived at years of discretion?

When you see a youngster making a wild-eyed ass of himself over some alluring dream or overmastering passion, you can make allowances on account of his very youth.

But when that youngster has become an oldster and still hasn't developed vision enough to see beyond the end of his nose or sense enough to go in when it rains, or judgment enough to reason from cause to effect—what hope can be cherished for him?

The department of commerce at Washington has been keeping tab on the finances of American cities since 1903, their taxes, their expenditures, their indebtedness. There are now 250 cities with populations of 30,000 or more in the United States. There were only 145 in 1903. This is almost a hundred have grown past the 30,000 mark in the past 26 years.

Now, just a few figures from the department's census of their money-spending activities.

To begin with, the total expenditures of the 250 cities for 1927 for construction and maintenance of public improvements were almost double the similar expenditures of all 48 states and much larger than those of the federal government for similar purposes.

That's going some, as a starter.

As has been noted, there were 146 cities of 30,000 or more in 1903 and their net government costs for that year, 1903, averaged $16.41 for each city resident. For 1927 the net governmental costs of the same cities averaged $52.65 for each resident.

That, as I think you will admit, is more than "going some."

But it isn't the whole story. The percapita net debt of these 146 cities averaged $44.71 in 1903 and $134.27 in 1927. In simple words, it is three times bigger now than then. In the one year, 1927, it was increased by $361,000,000.

Now, this utterly unwarranted and wickedly indefensible increase in spending and borrowing has not been brought about by the demands of the youngsters. It has been due to the absence of both thrift and gumption in their elders, the grown-up men who control affairs.

Slightly paraphrasing the words of Scripture, if they do these things in a dry tree, why weep over any goings-on in a green one?

While the federal government has been exercising a vigorous economy, has cut down its running expenses and paid off billions of its debt; while several state governments, Connecticut's notable among them, have been thriftily managed without irksome increase of taxation or borrowing, the cities of the land have been plunging from one extravagance to another, not only boosting taxes to pay for desired conveniences, but also to pay interest on money borrowed to instal other luxuries.

I remember once going into the living quarters of a certain family in a Connecticut city where they couldn't afford a table-cloth or anything better than tin spoons. At least, there was no table-cloth on the table and only tin spoons in the tea cups. Yet the father insisted upon having his two pints of beer every day, and the mother, under a "picture hat," was that moment wheeling her baby in a $50 perambulator up and down the admiring street.

Their conduct was no more thriftless and shiftless and senseless than that of the cities which have been and still are spending money like drunken sailors for any and every so-called "improvement" which happens to take the fickle popular taste for the moment.

If 17 years old Jack and Sister Jennie should start in spending all their parents' money and all they could borrow from the neighbors on whatever their unlimited desires happened to crave, it wouldn't be long before the old folks would call a halt and issue and embargo.

They wouldn't stand for such wasteful extravagance. But, when it comes to spending the city money for something, for almost anything, that same adult pair will either vote for it or consider it of too slight interest to go to the polls and vote against it.

And so the debts of the cities and towns grow to crushing weights, and the taxes climb to almost unreachable heights, and everybody concerned winces and squeals when the tax collector comes 'round, and Vox Populi or some other sufferer writes a piece to the paper about it.

Which is all the good it does. Which is all the good this particular "piece" will do. I'm quite aware of the utter hopelessness of sweeping back the Atlantic ocean with a kitchen broom, or of stemming the tide of popular thriftlessness with either appeals or arguments or denunciations.

The orgy of public spending for more or less desirable public purposes is on, and nothing is going to stop it. Some years ago a southern democrat in congress, irritated beyond control by the stupidity of his party leaders, shouted out: "Here we go, d——n our fool souls: somebody head us"

But nobody did.

When I had the flu my experienced doctor kept a daily watch out for signs of pneumonia or pleurisy or heart trouble. But he didn't do or try a single thing about the flu. "It's got to run its course," he said, "you'll get over it in time."

Perhaps the present epidemic of money-wasting has got to run its course—let us hope that it won't run us into the ground in the meantime.

Perhaps some of you may think that this talk about city doings is out of place in a column ostensibly devoted to discussions of farm matters. But the division between town and country isn't so complete as to make the interests of one wholly inclusible by the other.

We back-roads farmers have to get many of our supplies in or from the cities. We have to pay the prices city dealers charge. If those city dealers are mulcted in outrageous taxes, you may be sure that such tax exactions are passed right over to us, in the form of increased prices. That's the only way they can survive. Their businesses must pay all expenses and something over, or bankruptcy looms on the near horizon. Very few business men are in it for their health, and none stay in it long who don't get back from their customers all they pay out for rent and taxes and clerk hire, etc., etc., with something over for profit.

And that's only one way in which city extravagances influence country living. There are many others.

Anyway, city and country are both vitally essential parts of the one all-embracing nation. What's bad for one member is necessarily bad for the other. When you get blood poisoning in one arm, it's going to affect the rest of the system, if it isn't checked and cured right off. It's not only the city tax collector whose fingers indirectly grab after the farmer's pocketbook. The poison, once in the general blood stream, works pain and sickness in all the bodily parts. It is said that cancer, which is at first but a localized ailment, eventually taints the whole body.

In the same way one part of our national system can't be infected with disease without injury to the whole shebang.

Also it happens I know of a few city people who read these rambling talks. Perhaps some of them may find the figures I have quoted from the commerce department's census worth getting mad over.

The situation calls for a wholesale amount of wholesome anger.

DUKE OR HYBID CHERRY IS HIGHLY RECOMMENDED

Duke or hybrid cherries deserve more attention from fruit growers than they now enjoy, according to Dr. U. P Herrick, horticulturist at the experiment station at Geneva, N. Y., where a large number of varieties of Dukes have been grown in comparison with standard sweet and sour cherries. The Dukes are hybrids between sweet and sour varieties and posses many of the characteristics of the parent sorts.

The name is believed to have come from the variety May Duke, a corruption of the word Medoc, a district in France where this variety had its origin. Duke cherries are much hardier than sweet cherries and a little less hardy than sour cherries. In size and flavor they are, as a rule midway between the two, although in the main they resemble sweet cherries more in size, shape and color. They have the somewhat acid flesh of sour cherries. They are particularly valuable in regions a little too cold for sweet cherries and for persons who like mildly acid fruits.

The Dukes respond to the same care and attention given other cherries, although in most regions they are more easily cared for than sweet cherries. They ripen between the sweets and sours, but the late varieties such as lat Duke and Reine Hortense hang on the trees without cracking or rotting much longer than any of the sweet cherries. Because of this characteristic they are particularly adapted to southern regions where sweet cherries crack and rot badly.

The four varieties commonly listed by nurserymen, fortunately the best of the group, are: May Duke, earliest to ripen; Royal Duke, mid-season; Reine Hortense, medium late; Late Duke, very late.

GRAFTING OF GRAPES BRINGS GOOD RESULTS

Grapes may be grafted with entire success, even by amateurs, and this is an excellent method by which to obtain desirable fruit from a vine which produces a poor variety or one which ripens too late to escape frost.

Dr. Walter G. Kendall of Atlantic, who has won many prizes for fruit at Horticultural hall, Boston, cites the following example: The stock was the Jefferson grape, which requires too long a season for New England. The scion was taken from a Worden vine which grows particularly good fruit. Dr. Kendall's method is to dig away the earth around the stock to a depth of three inches, at which point the scion is inserted. A regulation cleft graft is made, but a saw instead of a grafting tool is used to make the cut. The scion is inserted carefully and held in place with string.

No grafting wax is used. This is an important point to keep in mind. To use wax means to invite failure. Paper is then wound around the graft to exclude earth and the little excavation filled. It has been found advantageous to mound the earth a little to have it shed water.

Grafts inserted by Dr. Kendall in the spring have made a growth with two arms each six feet long in one season. Grapes may be expected to bear the next season after being grafted. The entire operation is explained at length in bulletin 520 of the New York state agricultural experiment station at Geneva.

AMERICAN SALAD BOWL IS BOUNTIFULLY SUPPLIED

What is in the American salad bowl and in the vegetable dishes of the nation is reflected in considerable measure in the records of car-lot shipments of fruits and vegetables published each month by the United States department of agriculture. The figures for the season to the end of June this year show many important increases with the grand total of all items active in the June markets amounting to 668,814 carloads in comparison with 526,366 carloads of the same commodities for the same period last year.

String beans, carrots, cauliflower, celery, cucumbers, lettuce, onions, green peas, strawberries, tomatoes, watermelons, potatoes, and cabbages were shipped in considerably larger amounts than last year. Asparagus, cantaloupes, cherries, deciduous mixed fruits, early grapes, miscellaneous melons, early pears, peppers, early plums and prunes, and sweet potatoes were in smaller volume than for last year.

Spinach, which in recent years has become an important truck crop for shipment, is credited with 9,701 car lots this year, as compared with 10,002 last year. Lettuce, with 39,972 carloads this year, is only about 400 carloads in advance of last year, but this increase comes after a long period of increasing supplies which have resulted in establishment of lettuce as a year-round staple in city markets. California supplies about one-third of all car-lot shipments of lettuce.

NO NEED TO TRAMP SILAGE

Four silos at the United States dairy experiment farm at Beltsville, Md., have been filled the last three seasons without tramping or distributing. The silage has kept perfectly in every instance, and as much has been put in the silos as in previous years when a small amount of tramping was done.

The practice at Beltsville is to use the regular farm teams and help without hiring more than a few extra men. Filling, therefore, is done rather slowly, an average day's run being 40 or 50 tons. The corn is planted so it will not all mature at once, thus making possible its harvesting at about the right stage of maturity. Under such conditions tramping silage is an unnecessary expense, according to the United States department of agriculture. If filling is done much faster than was done in these experiments, or if the corn has passed the proper stage of maturity, there may be some question about the advisability of not tramping, the department says.

GROWERS OF LATE POTATOES LEARN PRICE-MAKING FACTORS

When, where, and how to sell are practical questions for growers of late potatoes, a cron one-half to two-thirds of which is sold each season.

The chief price-making factors, says the bureau of agricultural economics, United States department of agriculture, are acreage, production, losses from rot, disease, or freezing, demand, and competition with imported potatoes or with the early crop. There are also fluctuating prices caused by weather and transportation conditions.

Reports of heavy plantings in early sections suggest caution, especially if production was light the season before. A season of heavy planting often follows a season of light production and high prices. It is unsafe to increase acreage heavily in the year following a season of high prices, especially if early reports show that plantings are being generally increased. However, supply and price demand depend on yield as well as on acreage, and the yield of the main crop cannot be forecast until August or September.

Figures compiled by the department of agriculture show that a yield in the 35 late-potato states of much above 3.4 bushels per capita has usually resulted in rather low prices. A yield much lighter than this has generally brought relatively higher prices.

DAIRY PRODUCTS ACCOUNT FOR ONE-QUARTER OF FARM INCOME

Last year the farm value of dairy products amounted to approximately three billion dollars, according to figures compiled by the United States department of agriculture.

"Many people fail to realize the size and importance of this industry," says O. E. Reed, chief of the bureau of dairy industry. "It may help some to a clearer realization of the dairying business to learn that this three billion dollars amounts to 26 per cent or a little more than a quarter of the total value of all agricultural produce. The dairy cow accounts for about one dollar as against three by all the other animals and corps in the country."

"This development," Doctor Reed says, "has been accompanied by an ever increasing appreciation by the public of the value of milk and dairy products in the diet and their relation to the health and general welfare of the people."

In the relative stability of the dairy industry, Doctor Reed finds an obvious explanation of the increasing number of investors who are keenly interested in the industry. "The stability of dairying," he says, "has resulted in large investments of capital, not only on farms but in manufacturing, processing and distribution plants."

It would be unfortunate, however, Doctor Reed points out, if the present favorable position of the dairy industry should lead many producers to expand their business or if it should induce many men not now in the business to enter the field. In recent years the domestic production of all dairy products has amounted to about 99 per cent of the demand, a close margin.

Definition of a Gentleman

He turns not from the cheerless home, where sorrow's offspring dwell;
He'll greet the peasant in his hut—the culprit in his cell.
He stays to hear the widow's plaint of deep and mourning love
He seeks to aid her lot below, and prompt her faith above.
The orphan child, the friendless one, the luckless, or the poor,
Will never meet his spurning frown, or leave his bolted door;
His kindred circles all mankind, his country all the globe—
An honest name his jewelled star, and truth his ermine robe
He wisely yields his passions up to reason's firm control—
His pleasures are of crimeless kind, and never taint the soul.
He may be thrown among the gay and reckless sons of life,
But will not love the revel scene, or head the brawling strife.
He wounds no breast with jeer or jest, yet bears no honeyed tongue!
He's social with the gray-haired one, and merry with the young;
He gravely shares the council speech or joins the rustic game
And shines as nature's gentleman, in every place the same.
No haughty gesture marks his gait, no pompous tone his word,
No studied attitude is seen, no palling nonsense heard;
He'll suit his bearing to the hour—laugh, listen, learn, or teach,
With joyous freedom in his mirth, and candor in his speech.
He worships God with inward zeal, and serves Him in each deed;
He would not blame another's faith, nor have one martyr bleed;
Justice and mercy form his code; he puts his trust in Heaven;
His prayer is, "If the heart mean well, may all else be forgiven!"

PACHAUG FAIR OPENS THURSDAY-- MANY ENTERTAINING FEATURES

The ninth annual fair of Pachaug Grange Fair association, Inc., opened Thursday morning. The morning was spent in arranging exhibits, which this year are larger in some houses than in any previous year. It is a most interesting tour through the exhibit house, to see the widely varied articles of needlework, vegetables, food, the poultry, animals, beautiful flowers, etc.

Antiques in Varied Lines

The antique display is in a class by itself, this year being in its own house. It is a wonderful display. Frank Durfey exhibiting a remarkable number of articles, and Mrs. Ransom Young having the second largest. Chairs of all descriptions, tables, glass and chinaware, ancient guns, pictures, dolls, andirons, hats, bonnets, and numerous other articles are to be seen.

Mrs. Lester Pictured

During the morning, a Bulletin representative took a number of pictures of the officers and houses, and another of Mrs. Jane Lester of Pachaug standing by her spinning wheel winding yarn, surrounded by antique fiddleback, Hitchcock and crossback Hitchcock and Hepplewhite chairs. Avoid Strange Water!

Drink this famous "golden" ginger ale and get needed liquids—SAFELY

LOOK OUT for that clear bubbling spring—that picturesque mossy well—while you're on your vacation. It's always dangerous to drink untested water, doctors warn.

Take along a case of famous aged Clicquot Club Golden instead. It's the ideal thirst-quencher on the motor tour, at the camp or cottage. And there's a health value in Clicquot Club Golden. "Invert" sugar in it gives quick new energy. Double carbonation and mellow syrups of pure fruit juices regulate and aid digestion.

The finest aged flavor at no higher cost

Clicquot Club Golden is aged to perfection before it is sold. And it comes only in clean, new bottles. Yet the cost to you is no greater, ounce for ounce, than any other ginger ale.

For Clicquot Club's full-measure 16-ounce pint bottles are more economical in the end than the "near-quarts" often sold as "family sizes." Such bottles are wasteful because the ginger ale often may go flat before it is all used. With Clicquot Club you can always open a pint at a time—just what you need.

Give your dealer a standing order to be delivered at cottage or camp. The whole family loves that delicious aged Clicquot Club flavor—and it helps keep them well!

Note: If you like a "dry" ginger ale, rather than the "golden" flavor, ask for Clicquot Club Pale Dry. If you like an extra dry ginger ale, ask for Clicquot Club Sec. An overwhelming favorite in clubs, hotels and club cars

Broadway Theatre.

Love—that force which motivates the whole world—has its place in college curriculum as well—for isn't there love of study (!), love of athletics, love of music, love of class and love of alma mater?—to say nothing of the love of the "only girl." They all have their part in "College Love," also, that all-talking pep-drama of co-ed collegiate life now being shown at the Broadway. Today is N. F. A. day, the management having invited the athletic coaches of the Academy with their charges to witness the picture, which is not only a speedy drama of sports, music and whoopee, but a wholesome lesson in loyalty and good citizenship as well. The most thrilling football game ever shown on the silent or talking screens, is shown with the Caldwell college team arrayed against the champion Trojans, those terrors from the University of California. The game itself is a real one, as the Trojans were instructed to "play football"—which they did, and how. Laid in the gorgeous Bowl of Roses, before a capacity crowd, the game will arouse as much enthusiasm and excitemetn as though it were in the flesh instead of on the shadow screen. George Lewis, Dorothy Gulliver, Eddie Phillips, Hayden Stevenson and lovable Churchill Ross, those "collegian" heroes, have the leading roles in the picture, and present a classy thesis on modern college life. The latest Fox movietone news, together with selected Vitaphone specialties, make up an interesting and timely program.

Ring W. Lardner, the master of modern slang, presents his favorite character, Elmer (Hurry) Jane, in a fast moving and thrilling drama of the world's series, at the Broadway, beginning Sunday, in "Fast Company," in which Jack Oakie portrays Elmer, with Skeets Gallagher, Evelyn Brent, and the New York Yankees as his assistants.

Frigidaire.

Use of left over foods in an economical and attractive way is covered in a very interesting manner in "Food Handling in the Home," a special souvenir booklet published by Frigidaire corporation for general circulation in connection with the national food preservation campaign being conducted this month by the refrixeration industry.

Salads, soups, stews and other vegetable combinations in almost limitless variety may be made from left over foods which have been kept fresh and tasty. Bouillon, orange juice, and vegetables held at a temperature of 42 degrees can be kept from ten to fifteen days, it is pointed out.

Proper arrangement of food in a refrigerator, so that space can be utilized to best advantage is covered in one chapter. Four distinct advantages of quantity buying are explained. Considerable space is devoted to discussion of food preservation during the winter months.

The booklet contains also the complete rules covering a $25,000 national idea contest for an essay on "Why 50 Degrees is the Danger Point." Frigidaire dealers who are distributing the booklet are ready to aid any one interested in the national contest by providing them with all the information needed to participate in the competition.

More Home Work

NEW YORK—(AP)—A foreign trade library of more than 1,000 volumes is listed in the 1929 edition of the national foreign trade council's selected bibliography. One hundred and seventy books receive special mention and a five-foot shelf of 40 books is recommended as indispensable. The council reports that American exporters are studying world conditions more diligently than ever before.

TREE CROPS MAY MAKE HILL FARMS IMPORTANT

AMHERST, Mass.—(AP)—Prosperity may yet return to the hillside farm of New England, says Prof. Frank A. Waugh of the Massachusetts Agricultural college.

But when the hillside farm comes back to its own, he suggests, it will not be as a competitor of the farm of the valley or the plains. It will be as a tree farm.

Trees are naturally adapted for holding the thin loam of the hillsides from washing away with the rain, he points out. Furthermore, tree crops are ideal for hill farms and hill farms for tree crops.

The blueberry and the Concord grape loom as other possibilities.

OHIOAN SAVES CHICKS WITH NEW "SUN PORCH"

BARNESVILLE, Ohio—(AP)—Dangers incident to raising chickens on dirt floors are eliminated in a system developed by H. Grover Hanes on the Spring Dale poultry farm.

He uses a wire-enclosed "sun porch" equipped with floors of wire netting which keep the chicks high and dry at all times.

Hanes built pens, 15 by 8 feet, abutting his chicken houses and equipped them with feed boxes and water troughs.

By dividing his flock to house half on wired-floored runs and half on earth or board floors, he found the death rate greatly reduced by the sanitary close-weave wire floors.

Dances Between Flights

KANSAS CITY, Kas.—(AP)—They dance in one hangar at Fairfax airport while passengers await their turns in a night sight-seeing plane. Landing lights from another ship in the hangar illuminate the dance floor.

HUGE SHOVELS BITE 20 TONS EACH DIP

MARION, Ohio—(AP)—A fleet of steam shovels, each towering eight stories high, with dippers that bite 20 tons of earth at a dip, have been shipped from the factory here for strip mining in the Illinois coal fields. An ordinary roadster can be driven into the dipper.

The shovels were built to cut a 200-foot path through a 70-foot blanket of earth overlaying the coal beds. A central electric motor puts each shovel under control of one man.

Eighteen months were required to build the first of the great excavators, and several months for assembling. It was shipped on 50 flatcars, six for the goom alone.

UNCERTAINTY OF CREDIT SITUATION CAUSED HEAVY SELLING OF STOCKS

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.— (AP)— A black fog of pessimism crept into important speculative circles today, and leading shares were heavily liquidated on the stock market. Scores of stocks closed from 3 to 15 points lower. Selling was in such volume that the day's total transactions again crossed the 5,000,000 share mark.

The heaviness of the market was generally attributed to the uncertainties of the credit situation. It has been rumored about Wall street that administration circles in Washington regard the rapid increases in brokers' loans during the past several weeks with some apprehension. The weekly meeting of the New York federal reserve bank this afternoon caused considerable nervousness. It was even rumored that the rediscount rate would again be increased. This rumor gained little credence in banking circles, and proved to be unfounded, but the federal reserve weekly brokerage loan compilation published after the close of the market was unexpectedly disappointing.

While the large amount of new investment trust financing, including that of Blue Ridge Corp., during the past week, had dashed hopes of any substantial decline, despite the heavy liquidation on the market during the past few days, most estimates had indicated a small reduction. The increase of $120,000,000 was certainly a blow. Some traders professed to see in this that investment trusts, which generally hold stocks outright rather than on margin, had been large sellers.

A less gloomy aspect of the loan compilation was the disclosure that New York banks, which had been forced to increase their federal reserve borrowings to tide the market over the turn of the month, had been able to call $56,000,000 and pay off much of their borrowings. Corporations and individuals were again financing the market, having increased the loans for "others" $149,000,000. Out of town banks increased theirs by $57,000,000.

The reserve condition statements showed that holdings of acceptances bought in the open market had been increased about $40,000,000, to a total slightly larger than that for the like period of last year. This, and an increase of about $10,000,000 in government securities, however, were more than offset by a decline of about $74,000,000 in rediscounting, and the reserve ratio improved slightly.

The Bank of England again made no change in its discount rate, and this influenced a brief bullish demonstration during the morning. Business news was largely favorable, including another new high record for car loadings in the last week of August. August copper statistics were not altogether pleasing, however, showing that while production was curtailed, stocks increased a little. It was reported that the recent effort to increase the price of red metal to 18 1-4 cents a pound had been abandoned.

Lack of support for such leaders as U. S. Steel was particularly discouraging. Steel common sold off about 7 points, and rallied only 1 1-2 points from its low. Such issues as American Can, American Telephone, Anaconda, American Water Works, Atlantic, Chesapeake and Ohio, Du Pont, Eastman Kodak, General Electric and Norfolk and Western, lost from 3 to 8 points.

Westinghouse tumbled about 12, but reduced its loss to 8 at the close. Johns Manville lost 7 points, Commercial Solvents 8 1-2, and Auburn Auto 15.

The market opened with a burst of strength, and pools hurled up some of the volatile issues in violent fashion as the market began to sag in an effort to stay the tide. American Machine and Foundry Type Foundry was sent up 9 points, but it closed 5 lower. Case Threshing rose 12, but tumbled 18 from its top.

Radio was heavily bought for a time, rising to a new high for the present stock at 114 3-4, but it closed at 108 1-2, off more than a point. Heavy trading developed in the oils, but Standard of New Jersey encountered realizing on its sharp advance of yesterday, closing off a couple of points. Standard of New York reached a new peak in a small gain, but then reacted. Sun Oil rose 4 points to a new top, but closed up only a point. Although the utilities were generally heavy, Columbia Gas moved against the trend, rising 5 points to a new high record, and closing near the top. Philadelphia Co. jumped 11 points to a new peak and held its gain.

Commodities were irregular. Corn lost about a cent a bushel, but wheat was firm on better foreign demand. Cotton futures fluctuated widely, but closed a little higher.

Foreign exchanges were mixed. Sterling cables sagged to their low level of the year, $4.84 11-16, and French francs and Spanish pesetas were under pressure. Other continental currencies, however, were generally firm.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—(AP)— The bond market drifted aimlessly today. Scant attention was paid to prime investment issues and quotations fluctuated irregularly, with railroad obligations holding a steady course.

Net losses ranging from 1-2 to 2 1-2 points prevailed in the convertibles. After an upward flare during the forenoon, the stock privilege bonds suffered with the share list in the later trading, although liquidation was only nominal, and prices closed slightly above the day's lows. American Telephone 4 1-2s had a net loss of 2 points, Atchison 4 1-2s dropped 1, International Telephone 4 1-2s yielded 1 1-2. American International 5 1-2s dipped 1 3-4 and Alleghany Corporation 5s, 1944, lost 1-2. Reading Coal & Iron 8s, however, were strong, showing at the close.

Reports that new financing for the Shell Union Oil company would comprise a $50,000,000 issue of debentures sent the listed 5s of that corporation to a new low of 83, a point below the previous minimum. The debentures were supported at the bottom, however, and regained half a point for a net loss of 2. Shell Pipe Line 5s, also freely sold, dropped 1 1-2.

Cuba Cane Sugar issues were depressed on the announcement of the reorganization committee that a receivership for the company seemed inevitable, even though only 18 per cent of the outstanding debentures remained undeposited under the plan for the financial reconditioning of the concern. The debenture 8s went down half a point to 56 1-2, a new low, while the 7s sold off a shade to 57, equaling the previous minimum.

The market for high grade rails remained thin. Evidence of its general tone was the slump in Atchison 4s, Rocky Mountain division, which fell 6 points to the new low of 84 on the trading of a single $1,000 bond. Chicago & North Western General 4s also made a new low of 83 on a 2 1-8 point decline.

Bethlehem Steel 6s sold into lower ground at 104 1-4 against the price of 105 at which they have been called. Certainteed Products 5 1-2s, which had a sharp rise yesterday, suffered from profit-taking. Keith Corporation first 6s featured the specialty group with a spurt of 3 1-2 points.

The United States government division traded narrowly and irregularly lower. The new treasury 4 7-8s were quoted at par and an eighth in the over-the-counter market, a slight premium over the offering price of 100.

Foreign obligations and utilities developed no outstanding features. New bond offerings scheduled for tomorrow include a $1,300,000 issue of Iowa Public Service company first mortgage gold bonds of the 5 1-2 per cent series, due in 1959. They are priced at 97. It also became known that the war department would soon advertise for bids on a $1,500,000 Philippine government 4 1-2 per cent 30 year loan.

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—(AP)—Structural steel awards during the past week amounted to about 44,000 tons, contrasted with 26,000 tons in the preceding week. Inquiries appearing in the market call for about 26,000 tons, compared with 32,000 tons in the previous week.

The Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturers company has purchased the Bissell Electric Co. of Toledo, Ohio, making the 44th large jobbing supply house to come under Westinghouse control, the Bissell company was formed in 1901.

Holders of both common and preferred stock of the North American Car Co., of record Sept. 23, have been offered rights to subscribe for one share of common stock for each 10 shares held. The price will be $42.50 a share, payment for which must be made on or before Oct. 8.

The net operating income of the Western Union Telegraph company for July totaled $1,274,668, as against $1,142,315 in the corresponding month last year.

The total number of General Motors common and preferred stockholders for the third quarter of this year was 140,113, compared with 125,165 for the second quarter and 104,202 for the first quarter.

The net profit for the Pepperell Manufacturing company for the year ending June 30, amounted to $1,114,280, equal to $1.32 a share on 107,930 shares, as compared with $1,026,975, or $9.51 a share in the preceding year.

IMITATION COTTON TO GROW IN AFRICA

NEW YORK—(AP)—American cotton exporters have learned that the English Artificial Cotton corporation is preparing to plant 15,000 acres of the new fiber which, it is claimed, is a good substitute for cotton.

The Anglo-East African Cotton company whose organization was announced recently in the Financial News of London, owns an estate of 117 square miles in Portuguese East Africa.

It entered into a contract with the English Artificial Cotton Production and Marketing corporation, to plant 15,000 acres of the fiber near the port of Inhambane.

The prospectus of the Anglo-East African Cotton company says:

"The corporation states that owing to the abundant demand for 'artificial cotton' (on the qualities of which authoritative textile experts have reported favorably), the whole of the available output for a considerable time to come will be absorbed by cotton spinners in various parts of the world."

Dr. C. J. Hedley-Thornton, chairman of the English Artificial Cotton corporation, who was recently in the United States to study American cotton production and consumption, has joined the board of the new company.

MODEL HOMES PLANNED TO KEEP YOUTH ON FARM

OKLAHOMA CITY—(AP)—A model farm home is to be erected in each of Oklahoma's 77 counties.

This "better farm home" movement sponsored by the state chamber of commerce, has been organized to keep boys and girls from deserting agriculture.

By demonstrating the advantages of ultra-modern furnishings in rural homes, it is believed, farm life may become more attracting to many who otherwise might leave it.

FRUIT TREES MENACED BY NEW INSECT PESTS

AMHERST, Mass.— (AP) —An army of new insect pests and disease is bearing down on the fruit growers, according to Prof. W. H. Theis of the Massachusetts Agricultural college.

This army, says Professor Theis, must be reckoned with in the next few year. Already, he points out, the college and extension service is making plans to enable fruit growers to fight these pests as they appear.

PSYCHOLOGY VALUABLE ASSET IN WALL STREET

NEW YORK—(AP)—Psychology has displaced mathematics and economics as the best asset for successful security trading.

Mathematics and economics retain a large degree of importance. Earnings, a company's position in a given industry, and the position of that industry in the general economic structure, are factors hich must be considered in judging the value of a security.

But with any popular stocks selling from 25 to 30 times their earnings, and the best economists of the country disagreed on whether the future will justify such prices, successful trading in the most active issues has come to be little more than successful guessing on popular or professional reactions to current developments.

STREET "GRAPEVINE" STIRS UP SECURITIES

NEW YORK—(AP)—Wall street wireless requires no apparatus.

A first class rumor, preferably an old one that has been used many times, can be dusted off and put on display by a brokerage house and it will be all over the financial district inside of an hour.

Recently the stock of a large utility management company rose rapidly on the strength of systematically circulated "grapevine" rumors regarding new contracts. An officer of the company was asked for a statement and he said:

"The reports are completely groundless. I happen to know that two or three large holders of stock decided to sell and they trotted out these rumors to insure themselves a higher price."

CHANCE BEAN DISCOVERY GIVES NORTH HARDY CROP

EDMORE, Mich. —(AP)— Chance discovery of a white bean in a shipment of ordinary Green Refuge seed two years ago has led to the development of a very promising strain.

The white bean caught the eye of Ralph Balch, manager of a canning factory. Out of curiosity he planted it alone in the cannery's trial grounds.

The result was a crop of the Green Refuge type and the beans were superior in quality to the brown seeded beans. Tests indicate it is more resistant than most other wax and lima beans to anthracnose and bacterial wilt, two diseases menacing Michigan's bean crop.

SCHOOL OPENS DOORS FOR STUDENTS' COWS

STILLWATER, Okla.— (AP) —Even cows may go to college now.

Each student will be permitted to bring two bovines to Oklahoma A. and M. college this year. It is part of a plan to aid self-supporting youngsters.

All cows in attendance will be fed at cost by the school. A student self-help farm is to provide employment for 40 or 50 boys.

There also will be a tile and pottery factory and a broom factory for student work.

AMATEUR CYCLE CHAMP JOINS PROFESSIONALS

PROVIDENCE, R. I. —(AP)— Frank Mrdonna of Providence, world's 10-mile amateur motor-paced bicycle record holder, has turned professional and will compete in a more lucrative field.

Madonna twice has lowered the record of 14 minutes, eight and one-fifth seconds, established by Sammy Sulkins of Boston in the Providence Coliseum August 22, 1903. On one occasion he traveled the distance in 13.29 3-5 and on another in 13:57 2-5.

He is a nephew of Vincent Madonna, former American champion cyclist.

UNIQUE FARM RAISES THOUSANDS OF WORMS

ALHAMBRA, Cal.—(AP)—Old Izaak Walton would chuckle with glee if he were alive today upon seeing Alhambra's unique gift to the fishing world.

It is an angle worm farm, now raising nearly enough of this favorite bait for half the anglers of the United States.

More than 300,000 worms have gone to market from the ranch this year and the season is only half over. Close to a million baby worms now are being fattened for next year's angling season.

When ready for market they are packed in imported moss in tin resembling large pepper cans and are guaranteed to live six weeks or longer in the containers without additional water.

The angler-worm ranch, the result of a boyhood dream of R. B. Bilkosky, was started four years ago. Now five men besides Bilkosky are kept busy during the rush season catering to the growing worms, which are fed only one food, cornmeal.

Here are few facts from Bilkosky:

"The angle worm has many worthwhile attributes. He doesn't kill other angle worms. He doesn't believe in divorce. He minds his own business.

"The angle worm mates for life. A pair will go peacefully through life together.

"It takes two years for a worm to reach maturity. They have been known to live as long as 20 years.

"The angle worm you see in your back yard during the wet season is still there in late summer, but probably is down deep, possibly 25 feet, where it is still moist.

EASTERN STATES PREPARE AGAINST AUTUMN FIRES

BOSTON—(AP)—While huge forest fires rage in the west, fire fighting forces of the northeastern states are being marshalled against the fire menace when the leaves fall in September and October.

Unusually dry weather this year has advanced the menace and made the earlier fires more difficult to fight because they burn into the grounds.

Hundreds of fire towers, mounted high on the peaks of the Appalachian chain from the Great Smokies of Tennessee to the White mountains of New Hampshire and the peaks of Maine, are used.

CHICAGO BOASTS LARGEST NATURAL SUNTAN DOMAIN

CHICAGO—(AP)—Along the 30 miles of Chicago's front yard stretches a strand of bathing beaches, the largest natural suntan factory—a dividend maker for the sunburn ointment manufacturers.

No other city has such an expanse of sandy shoreline at its very doorstep.

The sparkling Lake Michigan dances up to the property lines of the "Gold Coast," the select residence districts on the north and south sides, and democratically offers its golden bosom and cooling waters to the poor of the downtown district, and the Negroes of the "black belt."

CONCRETE BASEMENT CUTS FIRE HAZARD

A concrete walled basement and first floor of reinforced concrete will effectually control basement fires which are especially dangerous and costly, at least one-third of all residence losses being due to them.

Even though the rest of the house may be of burnable material, the slight extra expense of a concrete floor is justified. Surface of such a floo may be of hardwood, tile or linoleum; or the concrete may be finished smoothly, tinted and waxed. A concrete floor increases the strength and durability of the entire house. It prevents cracking and settlement of partition walls, thus eliminating one cause of cracks in plastering.

The cold, dry wind peculiar to the French coast of the Mediterranean is called the mistral.

You pay for good tires--- whether you get them or not!

— and you have more tire trouble if you don't. Tire cost per mile is always noticeably less when you buy dependable quality. Try it by buying Silvertowns.

Even if you could buy so cleverly as to equal their cost per mile, your tire trouble would be in proportion to the quality of the tire you buy. Isn't this trouble worth saving? And isn't it worth while to be sure of the lowest tire cost per mile?

The Old New England Meeting House

As I go up and down these days
Amongst New England's pleasant people,
I never hear a single word
About the meeting house or steeple;
The meeting house and steeple, too,
It seems, are pretty "low" today;
The old New England meeting house
Is passing fast away.

It's hard to tell a meeting house
Today by looks or situation,
For some are built like concrete halls
And others like a railroad station;
There's arches, apses, foyers, foils,
And festooned fonts in fine array—
The old white-steepled meeting house
Has almost passed away.

How grand they stood upon the hills
Or at the township's windy center!
How self-respecting were the folks
That came for miles their courts to enter!
The "closest" workmen in the parts
They made the pulpits, so they say—
Too bad the churchliest church of all
Is passing fast away.

How grand they stood upon the hills,
And also in the village valleys!
What ways of posts of the soul they were,
What ways and means for "inward" rallies!
How quick their slender steeples caught
The early morn's flirtatious ray—
Too bad the churchliest of all
Is marked to pass away.

What art the old-time builders used,
The Rhenish spire, the Doric pillar!
The hand-made pews of fragrant pine
Unvexed by stain or "Swedish filler;"
They lay upon the landscape's lap,
Like jewels on a lady's tray—
The old colonial meeting house
That's passing fast away.

I wonder what we stand for now,
We folks whose forbears separated
From too much form—a scrambling back
To just the things our forbears hated?
We've even got a "service" up—
We often read the prayers we pray—
The old New England meeting house,
Of course, must pass away.
—Daniel L. Cady, in "Rhymes of Vermont Rural Life."

Fireflies

Little lambs of the dusk,
You fly low and gold
When the summer evening
Starts to unfold.
So that all the insects,
Now, before you pass
Will have light to see by Undressing in the grass.

But when night has flowered
Little lamps a-gleam,
You fly over tree-tops
Following a dream.
Men wonder from their windows
That a firefly goes so far,
They do not know your longing
To be a shooting star.

SIX CANDIDATES FOR COUNCIL PUT IN HARD WORK AT NEW LONDON

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 12—The six candidates, Cornelius Twomey, E. Frank Morgan, James A. May, Alton T. Miner, Lucius E. Whiton and David B. Seamon are working hard among their acquaintances in their effort for election to the city council at the next election which will take place a week from next Monday. Messrs. Twomey, Morgan and May are believed to have the inside track toward election, for judging from the vote last Monday when not a single nominee obtained a majority of the votes polled, it is apparent that unless there is a decided turn of opinion between now and the next election, these candidates will again obtain the greatest number of votes. As there are three candidates to be elected, it is generally believed that Messrs. Twomey, Morgan and May will be successful in gaining a seat in the council. However, Alton T. Miner's friends are rising strongly to his support and there is every indication that that candidate will 'poll' a much larger vote than he did several days ago. Mr. Miner served efficiently several terms as alderman under the municipal form of government and is thoroughly qualified for the duties of the office. Messrs. Whiton and Seamon are believed to be out of the running, at least the small vote accorded them in the first election would indicate such a condition. Mr. Whiton has been a member of the council since the city manager form of government was adopted, but he ran far behind the field in Monday's contest.

NORWICH MAN TOOK NOTE TO GROTON STATE BARRACKS

What is believed to be the work of jokers was revealed yesterday with the finding of a bottle containing a poorly written note, purporting to be the appeal of two aviators, who were in distress because of their disabled plane in the Atlantic ocean. While the finding of the note is not taken seriously, the state department of aeronautics at Blainard field, Hartford, has been notified by Groton state police. The note was found by Mrs. William Smith, Groton, at the mouth of the Poquonoc river. The note read, "One and one-half minutes northeast of Cape Hatteras. We have no food and only one quart of water. Can only live two days. Ned help quik. L-391. Help in plane. Longitude 22, latitude 39. Mechanic J. Murphy, Pilot P. Putnam." The note was poorly written in pencil and had numerous words mispelled. The note was found in a whiskey bottle and was taken to the state police barracks by Mrs. Smith's son, John W. Haselden, of Norwich. The name of P. Putnam does not appear in the aeronautic department of commerce directory of licensed pilots, but the name of two J. Murphy's were listed, however, as mechanics.

Mrs. Linnie Thomson and infant son of Waterford; Mrs. Laurence Wilson, Mystic and John Henderson, U. S. S. Illingworth, patients at Home Memorial hospital, were discharged today.

Officer Arthur Johnson went to the gasoline station and after questioning the youth, the latter admitting having stolen the auto in Boston. The boy and automobile were taken to the Groton barracks. Today an officer from Boston went to Groton and took charge of both the auto and the youth.

EXPERTS TO DISCUSS CRIME AND PRISONS

TORONTO —(AP)— Problems of crime prevented and the treatment of prisoners, as affected by modern conditions, will be discussed by experts when the American Prison congress meets here September 20-25.

The delegates will be wardens and officers connected in executive capacities with penal institutions in Canada and the United States, with social workers and public officials who come in contact with this phase of public work.

It is expected that contrasts will develop between the viewpoints of administrative officers of the prison of the two countries, for Canadian methods are known to be much more conservative than those of the United States, especially as they affect the liberty and privileges accorded inmates.

Cooperation with the American Prison association are kindred bodies, including the Wardens' association, the National Prisoners' Aid association, the Chaplains' association and the National Conference of Juvenile Agencies. The Canadian department of justice and the Canadian Prisoners' Welfare association are also working with the association sponsoring the congress.

Pajamas No Sensation

TEXARKANA, Tex. (AP)—Pajama-clad pedestrians create no stir in Texarkana. On certain streets they have been seen for years. Many convalescents of a railroad hospital here wear the modern substitute for the nightgown.

NEW LOCOMOTIVE WEARS BAGGAGE CAR'S CLOTHES

CHICAGO —(AP)— A new type oil-burning locomotive, which looks like a steel baggage car and uses steam at about three times the normal pressure of an ordinary locomotive, is being given tests here.

Designed chiefly for small units on railway divisions contemplating electrification or motorization, it can be used for larger and speedier trains by multiplying the powering unit.

Steam is not stored in any large quantity, but is made only as needed. It is generated in a small compartment in the forward end of the car where the controls are located.

The fuel is either distillate or ordinary furnace oil. Steam is also condensed and the recovered water used again. Power is applied to both rear and forward axles without transmission gears. Journals are roller-bearing type.

The engine is 61 feet long and weigh 117,000 pounds. Th eengines are fastened under the car to permit floor space for baggage, express and mail.

MAIL BOX PAINT COST IS $30,000 A YEAR

WASHINGTON —(AP)— Hail, rain, snow and the insidious effects of salt air cost the United States post office department $30,000 a year for repainting mail boxes.

Corrosion of the elements is the chief enemy to Uncle Sam's spic-and-span letter receivers. They must be repainted once a year. In sea-coast towns even this vigilance fails to keep them sightly.

Brass boxes have been installed in Atlantic City and a few other coast towns, as brass is proof against salt air corrosion. Steel withstands the elements better than cast iron. Prior to 1923 all U. S. mail boxes were made of cast iron, but the larger ones now in general used in the cities are made of steel.

Some years ago smokers marred the mail boxes by scratching matches against them. As most smokers now carry lighters or safety matches this cause of defacement has largely disappeared.

The government still has to cope with the chronic "leaner," however.

CHEAPER RAIL RATES FOR MICHIGAN GRAPES

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. —(AP)— Michigan railroads voluntarily have reduced freight rates on grapes about 20 per cent in an effort to pump life into the grape traffic.

Truckers have cut deeply into the grape shipments during the last half decade.

Car lot shipments have decreased sharply since 1924. In that year Michigan produced a 51,000-ton crop and 4,480 cars were shipped by rail and boat. The 1928 crop, approximated 72,300 tons, yet only 1,575 cars were shipped. There is another 72,000-ton crop in prospect this year and it gives carriers and growers an opportunity to observe the reaction, if any, to freight rate reduction

DROUGHT MAKES APPLES SMALLER BUT BRIGHTER

PROVIDENCE, R. I. —(AP)—Lack of rainfall will result in smaller apples in Rhode Island this year, but they will be of much brighter hue than usual.

Harry R. Lewis, state commissioner of agriculture, says that the same lack of moisture that is causing the size of the apples to be reduced probably also is contributing to the brighter coloring.

Insufficient rain, has, however, played havoc with the hay crop.

Construction of 75-mile underground railway for freight exclusively has been proposed as a remedy for London's traffic congestion

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE MEMBERS TO GIVE VOTE ON CALENDAR REFORM

Within a short time the members of the Norwich chamber of commerce will be called upon to register their approval or disapproval of the proposed "calendar reform". The chamber now has before it for consideration Referendum No. 54, issued by the U. S. chamber of commerce, containing a report of their special committee on "calendar reform" with a minority committee report and arguments in the negative. Under the caption, Inconveniences of the Present Calendar, the committee report says:

The divisions of the year, the months, quarters and half years, are of unequal length. The months contain from 28 to 31 days. As a result, the number of days in the quarters are respectively 90 (91 in a leap year), 91, 92 and 92. The first half year, therefore contains two or three days less than the second. Another result is the unequal number of weeks included in the quarters and half years.

The unequal length of months, quarters and half years is a cause of confusion and uncertainty in economic relations in the arrangement of all statistics, accounts, commercial and transport figures, etc.

The fact that the months contain 28, 29, 30 or 31 days, is responsible for the fact that all calculations of salaries, interest, insurance, pensions, leases and rent which are fixed on a monthly, quarterly or a half yearly basis are inaccurate and do not correspond with 1-12, 1-4 or 1-2 of the year. In order to make daily calculations in current accounts with comparative certainty and speed, banks are obliged to make constant use of special tables.

The calendar is not fixed; it changes each year; the year, in fact, consists of 52 weeks plus one or two days. Thus, if the first day of the year is a Sunday, the following year it is a Monday (or even a Tuesday) in the case of a leap year.

The dates of periodical events can never be fixed with precision. The position of the weeks in the quarters varies each year. The 1st, 15th and 30th of the month are sometimes Sundays. This is a serious disadvantage in respect of accounts and statistics. The 15th and 30th of the month are very important dates as regards the falling due and the payment of rents.

The committee report recommends a revision. A revision is needed, says the report. Your committee recommends that the divisions of the year in the present calendar should be so changed that there will be greater uniformity in length.

The committee also recommends that the weeks should be so fixed in relation to the divisions of the year in which they occur that there may be increased comparability between business results in a division of one year and business results in the corresponding year. With reference to the 12-month plan and the 13-month plan the report says:

The proposals which have been formulated by students of the calendar for accomplishing such changes as this committee has recommended, disclose a difference of opinion as to the division of the year, which should be made exactly equal and within which the weeks should be fixed. Plans of one kind undertake to make the quarters of equal length with the same type of week days in each month. The best known plan of the other type contemplates months of equal length with the weeks fixed in each month, with a consequence that the number of week days would be the same in all months and a date within a month would always fall on the same day of the week, regardless of the month. Both kinds of plans provide calendars of 364 days and would utilize a "blank" day to fill out the ordinary year and two "blank" days to complete a leap year. Both would provide a fixed or perpetual calendar.

Advantages and Disadvantages.

A comparison of the advantages and disadvantages of the 13 month and 12 month year, is given as follows:

Thirteen months of 28 days—Advantages: The months have the same number of days. The periods for which salaries are calculated exactly correspond to the periods of expenditure. The fact that the months are all of the some length has great advantages from the point of view of monthly statistics. Each month contains the same whole number of weeks.

Disadvantages: The figure 13 is not divisable by 2, 3, 4 or 6. The quarters of the year (of equal length) do not contain a whole number of weeks. The introduction of a year of 13 months implies a considerable change in custom which have been established for many thousands of years. In general, a greater number of corrections would be required in drawing up statistics than with the 12 month system.

Twelve months (8 months of 30 days, 4 months of 31 days)—Advantages: Half years and quarters have a full number of months and weeks. Every month can contain the same number of working days.

Disadvantages: The months are not of the same length. The months do not contain a complete number of weeks. The dates do not fall on the same day of the week in each month. In comparison of future dates with past dates and the comparison of future statistics with past statistics is less complicated than in the 13 month group, but more complicated than in the group which merely regularizes the quarters.

Generally speaking, and considering only the intrinsic value of the last two main groups, the 13 month system would seem to be of greater utility from the point of view of statistics and commerce, if the month, rather than the quarter, is to be taken as the unit of economic life. The 12 month system would be preferable in the other contingency. The committee does not at present see its way to pronounce in favor of any of these groups of reform schemes to the exclusion of the other groups.

The members of the committee have individual preferences respecting the 12 month plan and the 13 month plan and a majority favor a plan for 13 months of 28 days each. But a majority of the committee believe also that the time is not yet ripe to suggest that the chamber commit itself to a choice between the two plans.

The committee recommends that the calendar should be changed and that the government of the United States should participate in an international conference called to formulate a plan for calendar reform.

Minority Report.

The minority report opposing the committee recommendations, says: Generally speaking the civilized world does now possess, or is rapidly coming to possess, a calendar enjoying substantial uniformity. The infliction of a new calendar having radical departures from the present, or attempting to improve it, would mean annoyance to millions of people, would bring great discomfiture to great sects, which view the present calendar with religious loyalty and would offer nothing of substantial value to any single business which that business cannot now enjoy, if it will. We are opposed to the recommendations of the committee which, we believe, should not at the present time have the encouragement of the chamber. Furthermore, we are opposed to the last recommendation, which would seek to encourage our government taking part in a conference on a subject in which the great body of this country not only have a vital concern, but have, as yet evinced no deep-seated interest. When the people themselves, through their accredited representatives, have been led to take an interest in this matter, it may be time for the chamber to bestow its consideration. Popular interest will be our warrant. Certainly there is no great business need for it. We do not believe the subject is a timely one.

Arguments Against

Under the heading, Arguments in the Negative, the referendum says:

There have been earlier attempts at change in the yearly calendar. These attempts were made through various motives. Thus, France, at the time of the revolution in 1793, actuated by a revolt against Christianity, set up a new calendar. Under this calendar the year began at the minute of the autumn equinox and had 12 months of 30 days each, divided into periods of 10 numbered days. The remaining five days were grouped at the end of the year into a period of holidays. In 1806 France returned to the use of the customary calendar.

Attempt to change the calendar is such a way as is proposed by the committee would cause great confusion extending over years. Even if it were granted that changes in the calendar would alter existing contracts, provided the changes were accompanied by legislation causing the dates fixed in the contracts for the performance of stated acts to be the corresponding dates in the new calendar, it is obvious that the changes would cause very great confusion and that this confusion would extend over a period of many years.

Although the committee makes no mention of the date as of which it believes changes in the calendar should become effective, it is well known that some advocates of calendar alterations argue for January 1, 1933, as the date when the changes should go into effect. Any deviations from uniformity would cause endless difficulty. Experience has abundantly demonstrated that, no matter how important the subject, the interval before 1933 is not sufficiently long to obtain uniform legislation among 48 states.

The calendar cannot be "fixed" in the sense contemplated by the committee without the insertion of a blank day or days. The use of a calendar which does not include all of the days of the year would cause many difficulties. The present calendar has the great advantage of having the week days follow one another in their seven-day cycles without any break. Because of religious or other special significance, which has for centuries attached to the seventh day of the week or the first day of the week, this continuity of the week days has great significance to some people, and to some sects.

There are other objections to the use of blank days to eke out the calendar. There can be no blank days. On any day artificially designated as a blank day people will be born and people will die. In modern business life there can be no days which are really blank. Activities which continue upon every day of the year are increasing in number and in their importance. Reference need be made only to hotels, public utilities and railroads.

If the calendar were now changed, the value of the vast quantity of accounting and statistical data compiled according to the present calendar would be impaired, for the data already collected could not be compared directly with data brought together under a new calendar. For comparison between data "Old Style" and data "New Style" it would be necessary to convert the old material into terms of the new calendar. These conversions would have to be made upon so large a scale that the cost both to business and to government would run into high figures.

EXPRESSES APPRECIATION OF THE LATE SAMUEL KINDER

The following appreciation of Samuel Kinder, who had relatives in this city and who died in Denver on Wednesday, July 24, following an emergency operation for appendicitis is expressed in The 57 News, the publication of the Heinz company in which Mr. Kinder was one of the most widely known members of the sales department:

Mr. Kinder joined the organization in October, 1905, when he was employed at Pittsburgh. In 1911, he was transferred to Boston. After June 27, 1921, his duties made him an especially outstanding figure, for while he was assigned, from time to time, to various territories in all parts of the country, he was attached to the home office and not to a sales branch.

Throughout his career Mr. Kinder's ability as a salesman made him conspicuous among his associates. He was a master salesman and always found a way to secure business. As a result of his ability, his work was generally in territories where there were unusually difficult problems and there he aided the regular salesmen in building up business. Mr. Kinder had a strong personality and radiated friendship that made friends for him. It was natural for him to win the admiration and respect of those with whom he associated, and there is general regret because of his death.

For several years he made his headquarters and home in Portland, Ore., but more recently resided in Los Angeles and his remains were buried in Glendale, a suburb of that city.

A Change of Appeal

Within a few days the annual appeal for contributions to carry on the work of the United Workers will be made to the people of Norwich.

For many years the District Visitation committee has collected subscriptions through a house to house canvass. As present day conditions are such that this method no longer seems practical, it has been decided to make the annual appeal for membership, by means of a letter and membership card, through the mail, hoping for a generous response.

No one has been intentionally overlooked, but if by chance persons who usually contribute, or would gladly contribute do not receive one of these letters, their subscriptions may be sent to Miss Ruby Vaughn, chairman of the membership committee, 34 Warren street; to Miss Adelaide L. Butts, 272 Washington street; or to the social workers and public health nurses employed by the United Workers. All subscriptions will be greatly appreciated.

THREE AUTOS IN CRASH ON NORTH MAIN STREET

A three-cornered accident Thursday morning caused a traffic tieup on North Main street in front of the Mack truck station. Benjamin Combies was driving his machine to the U. S. Finishing company's plant where he is employed, and an automobile ahead of him stopped to pick up a passenger. Mr. Combies, it is understood, turned out to pass the machine and collided with an automobile approaching from the opposite direction. All three machines figured in the crash and two of the machines were forced onto the trolley tracks and into the excavation where the new ashphalt street is being laid. Two of the machines were quite badly damaged and trolley traffic was delayed for a short time. No one was hurt.

FINED ON THREE COUNTS WITH ONE REMITTED

Fines on three automobiles charges were imposed on Morris Paster, R. F. D. No. 1, in the city court Thursday morning. Paster was fined $25 and costs on a charge of driving with defective brakes, $10 and costs for driving without a taillight and $5 and costs for not having a reflector on his truck. The latter fine was remitted. Paster was arrested Wednesday when the above defects were discovered by state motor vehicle inspectors and Officer Clifford Crary who were examining equipment on machines in this city.

Moved Two Voting Machines

While some repairs are being made in the second district polling place on Falls avenue, the two voting machines used there have been moved to the court house where they are stored temporarily in the lower hallway.

ASCRIBES DRIVER'S DEATH TO HIS OWN CONDITION

Because the evidence showed that John Lewis, 31, a Stonington resident, was under the influence of liquor and was driving recklessly when he was in an automobile accident which caused his death, Coroner Edward G. McKay has made the finding that the death of Lewis was caused by his own negligence. The accident happened Aug. 17 on the Boston Post road, when the Lewis car was in collision with another, and Lewis died in the hospital in New London the next day with a fractured skull.

Coroner McKay in his finding says: "The above mentioned collision occurred on a straight and level piece of road along the Boston Post road about 250 feet west of the Buddington road in Groton. The highway is surfaced with tarvia with concrete base, 18 feet wide running generally in an easterly and westerly direction. About two hundred and fifty feet easterly of the scene of the collision the Buddington road intersects the Post road on the north and beyond this intersection the Post road curves to the southeast. Westerly of the scene of the accident the road runs straight for a considerable distance. At the time of the collision the road surface was dry and the weather was clear. There was no other traffic at this point except the two motor vehicles which were involved.

John Carasiti was driving a G. M. C. 5-ton truck owned by Louis Sherry, Inc., from New York on his way to Newport. He had a helper with him. He was driving easterly along the Boston Post road in Groton near the Buddington road. At this time he was going at the rate of between 15 and 18 miles per hour. As he approached a point about 250 feet westerly from the said Buddington road he saw the automobile driven by the deceased come around the curve toward him proceeding in a westerly direction. At this time the said Carasiti truck was on the southerly half of the road. After the Lewis car rounded the curve it took up a course on the southerly side of the road going in a westerly direction. It swerved to the northerly side of the road and then suddenly turned again toward the southerly side and into the truck in a head-on collision. The two cars came together about in the center of the road and both cars were damaged considerably.

When Carasiti saw the Lewis car approaching him along the southerly part of the highway he turned to the left to avoid the on-coming car. He turned back as the Lewis car turned and at the time of the collision the left rear wheel was about 5 inches northerly of the center line of the traveled roadway. After the collision the truck continued along the highway in a curve to the northeast for about 46 feet and stopped with the head end of the car off the highway in a cart way.

As a result of the collision the Lewis car which was a roadster was thrown to the north side of the highway and turned over. With Lewis in the car were two people whom he was taking to New London from Stonington after a dance. The occupants of the Lewis car were thrown out and Lewis sustained the injuries from which he later died. The other two received minor injuries and a shaking up. Lewis was rushed to the Lawrence and Memorial hospital in New London. While he was here examination of his effects disclosed a bottle which contained an odor of gin which was found in the clothes of the deceased. There was also an odor of alcohol on the breath of the deceased.

The testimony of one of the occupants of the Lewis car was of little value because his attention was diverted just previous to the collision. When he entered the hospital he was intoxicated and was arrested. The other occupant testified that as the Lewis car approached the truck the Lewis car was on its right of the road and the headlights of the truck were directly in front of them and immediately before the impact the Lewis car turned to the right to avoid the truck. Assuming this to be true the fact that the head-on collision took place approximately in the center of the road with the left rear wheel about 5 inches to the north thereof would indicate that the Lewis car as it approached the truck must have been on the south side of the highway or on its left hand side of the highway. The roadster received the impact in the left of the front; both headlights were broken. The truck received the impact near the left front wheel and spring.

In reviewing the evidence in this case I find considerable proof that the responsibility for this collision rested upon the deceased. A bottle which contained a strong odor of gin was found in the clothes of the deceased; his breath smelled of alcohol; he was urged to cut down his speed as he left Stonington; and the course of the car as describey by the driver of the truck and the other passenger of the roadster would indicate that it was being driven on the wrong side of the road. These facts indicate to me that the deceased was driving while under the influence of liquor and that the car was being driven recklessly and without due regard for the safety of others.

I am satisfied and find that the death of John Lewis was caused by the recklessness and carelessness of the deceased.

Charges Against Canterbury Man

Nick Vitioz of Canterbury, who was driving a motor truck in the city Thursday afternoon, was arrested by Officer Clifford Crary and has two counts charged against him. He is charged with improper use of markers and with having no reflector on his truck.

NAVAL CONFERENCE TO BE HELD EARLY IN DECEMBER

Result of an Understanding on Principles and Basic Factors Between the United States and Great Britain—Five Great Naval Powers, Including Japan, France and Italy Are to Consult With a View to Participating in the Parley.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—(AP)— A naval limitations conference, as a result of current Anglo-American discussions, has been proposed for as early in December as possible.

The calling of such a conference has been made possible by an agreement in principle between the United States and Great Britain on parity in cruiser strength, which has been a stumbling block to full naval limitation since the Washington arms conference of 1921.

Japan, France and Italy, the other powers signatory to the Washington treaty, will be invited to the conference at which the American government will propose that the ten years' holiday in the construction of capital ships be extended from 1931 to 1936.

The view here is that by 1936, the date of the expiration of the Washington treaty, there should be an opportunity for a second conference at which it should be possible to take even greater steps looking to a reduction of fighting ships of all categories as by that time the navies of the world would have been stabilized.

It was made known officially today that the discussions between the United States and Great Britain on the cruiser question has narrowed down to the proposition of whether some 30,000 tons of cruisers shall be embodied in three craft carrying 8-inch guns or four of five smaller ships carrying 6-inch guns, the size of weapon which the British government long has favored for virtually all cruisers.

This question probably will be left for the December conference, it is explained, and there is no present thought that President Hoover and Ramsay MacDonald will undertake to settle it during the forthcoming visit of the British premier to Washington.

Obsolescence in submarine and destroyer tonnage is expected to bring about equality in these categories between the United States and Great Britain by 1936. The American navy now has a preponderance of both of these types of ships, but a number in each class soon will pass out of commission, the navy department having announced today that at least 35 of the present active list destroyers would be decommissioned and eventually disposed of.

The present idea is that by 1936 both the British and American destroyer fleets will have been reduced to between 125,000 and 150,000 tons. A lesser reduction in existing submarine tonnage is anticipated.

National needs create a more difficult question in cruisers. The British have widespread islands and coast lines to police in peace time by light cruisers. The United States requires cruisers of wide steaming range because of a lack of naval bases.

The national obligations of Great Britain place their requirement in the neighborhood of 340,000 tons of cruisers to cover police duty and to balance other naval equipment. This is 110,000 tons below the minimum demanded by Great Britain at the tripartite naval conference at Geneva in 1927.

SALESMAN FATALLY WOUNDED BY HOLD-UP MEN

EAST ST. LOUIS, Ills., Sept. 13.—(AP)—Ted Marshall, 35, brother of Al Mitchell, master of ceremonies at the Olympia theatre, New Haven, Conn., died today in St. Mary's hospital here of bullet wounds inflicted by two hold-up men on Tuesday when he resisted efforts to rob him of a demonstration car.

Marshall's step-father's name is Mitchell.

The hold-up men went into the Lambert Graves Motor company, in St. Louis, across the Mississippi river from here and announced they were in the market for a car. Marshall, a salesman for the concern, was sent out with them to demonstrate one of the machines.

When they had crossed the Mississippi and reached a point outside this place, they pointed revolvers at him and demanded he turn over the car and all his money. When he resisted, one of them shot him, took the car and robbed him of $10. Marshall was thrown out of the machine and left lying unconscious on the road. He was found later by a searching party. The car was abandoned by the hold-up men a short distance from the scene of the shooting.

Marshall, before he lost consciousness at the hospital, said the bandits wore sombreros.

ARTIST, HIS WIFE AND THEIR BACHELOR FRIEND MISSING

NORWALK, Sept. 13—(AP)—Police of this city, were asked tonight to make a search for Theodore Leisen, Jr., commercial artist, son of an Omaha, Neb., utilities superintendent, his recent bride and their bachelor friend, Frank C. Clark, New York city, architect and interior decorator, all three of whom, after living together in a cottage at Rowayton, near the artist colony, disappeared last Saturday.

The request for the search came from the New York police department's missing persons' bureau, which said it entertained a theory of foul play. It was assumed the New York police were asked to make the search by relatives of young Leisen's bride, whose maiden name was Florence Murray and who told neighbors at Rowayton she had been divorced from a man named O'-Neill, a member of the Vanderbilt family, six years ago. Clark supposedly has no relatives in New York and Leisen's father has communicated with neither the police here nor the police of the metropolis.

NEW HAVEN BOY MISSING OFF THE COAST OF MAINE

HANCOCK, Me., Sept. 13.—(AP)—Efforts of an airplane, coast guard boats and 150 fishing craft were unavailing today in a search of Frenchman's bay and off-shore waters for William Reed, 19, of New Haven, Conn., son of Prof. and Mrs. Edward Bliss Reed, of Yale university, missing since Tuesday in his small sloop. Mist and fog hampered the search and boats struggled back one by one tonight to report failure.

Prof. Reed, personally supervising the hunt, offered a reward of $1,000 for the finding of his son, dead or alive.

Reed left Little Gotts Island, where he had been visiting, for the Reed summer home at Hancock Point. No anxiety was felt until it was learned yesterday that the youth had left the island two days previously. Searchers therefore were forced to extend the hunt over a wide area.

FORMER CUSTOMS COLLECTOR IS EXPECTED TO SURRENDER

ST. PAUL, Minn., Sept. 13—(AP)—Oscar Dahly, former collector of customs at Duluth, was expected to surrender to federal authorities Saturday to answer charges of conspiracy to bribe a public official.

Bench warrants have been issued for Dahly and three other men, indicted with Dahly, on charges growing out of an alleged attempt to "fix" the case of a man arrested by narcotic agents in Duluth.

E. E. Beaton, former chief special customs agent in St. Paul, and E. A. Peters of Duluth, former employe of Dahly in a drug store, were named in the two indictments returned against Dahly, while Thomas F. Hoban, former customs inspector on Dahly's staff, is named in one of the indictments.

TARIFF BILL ATTACKED BY SENATOR HARRISON

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.— (AP) — Vituperation was heaped upon the tariff bill in the senate today by two of its most fiery speakers, Harrison of Mississippi and Brookhart of Iowa.

The southern democrat and the republican independent from the mid-west agreed that the measure was designed for special privilege. The opposite view was taken tonight, however, by Senator Watson, the republican leader, in a radio address which marked his first public statement since the house bill was revised by the senate finance committee majority.

Facing the silent republicans, Harrison termed the measure a masterpiece of discrimination with deception abounding, and shouted: "The forked tongue of hypocrisy hisses through every paragraph."

The major Brookhart objection was that "the bill fails to give the farmer the home market pledged to him in the republican platform and in the recent campaign."

Speaking over a nation-wide hook-up of the National Broadcasting company, Watson called for passage of the bill to carry out the program of President Hoover recommended to congress in a message to the special session.

The Indiana veteran asserted it was "easy to rail against these duties, to say that they are "outrageous" and "infamous" and that this is a tariff of "monstrosities," but the members of the finance committee spent months in the formulation of this bill and to that end brought together the most skilled experts of the country and that is the only intelligent way in which a tariff bill can be formulated."

STREET CAR SITUATION IN NEW ORLEANS QUIET

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 13—(AP)— The street car strike situation rested here today just where it had fallen after stumbling over the reemployment clause of the proposed settlement agreement.

Officials of both the local carmen's union and the New Orleans Public Service, Inc., said the next move should come from W. D. Mahon, president of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electrical Railway Employes and William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, who approved a tentative settlement plan at a conference in New York with A. S. Paterson, vice president of Public Service.

Fascisti Chieftains Meet In Rome Today

Premier Mussolini Will This Morning Address the Grand Assembly of the Fascist Party.

ROME, Sept. 13—(AP)—Eight hundred per cent fascists await with extraordinary expectancy the speech which Premier Benito Mussolini will make tomorrow morning at Venezia palace before the grand assembly of the fascist party.

The chosen hundreds compose the upper hierarchy of fascism and they gathered in Rome today from all over Italy preparatory to tomorrow's historic session of the organization. But great as their interest is it hardly exceeds that of the country at large in view of yesterday's radical changes in the Italian cabinet when the fascist dictator divested himself of seven cabinet posts.

Appearing either in the ordinary fatigue uniform of the fascist militia or in dark suits and black shirts, the fascist leaders from Rome and the provinces will be the only persons outside representatives of the "national press" who will hear Mussolini's speech. Close control of tickets will be exercised at the doors of the Venezia palace.

The fascist dictator's arrival will be announced by three trumpet blasts. He will speak from a special tribune after his own musketeers have rendered military honors when he enters the ornate "Hall of the Globe" of the palace.

His speech is the sole item on the program of the morning session and it is believed the duce will seize upon the occasion to explain the new policies of the party. He also is expected to deal with outstanding problems such as reclamation of lands, education and unemployment. During the afternoon the provincial fascist officials will be received at Vidoni palace by the secretary general of the party, A. Turati, who will outline to them a report of the internal activity of the organization. He will lay particular stress upon the program to be carried out during the "Year VII" of the fascist regime which begins October 29, the day after the seventh anniversary of the march on Rome.

Prince Boncompagni-Ludovisi, governor of Rome, will receive the visiting party of fascist chieftains tomorrow at 7 p. m.

Described Threats Of Killing Made By Mob

Testimony of Mrs. Helen Lodge, Boarding House Keeper in Gastonia—Mob Visited Her House.

CHARLOTTE, N. C., Sept. 13—(AP)— Threats by members of the Gastonia mob that swept through three North Carolina counties Monday night to kill Ben Wells were described by Mrs. Helen Lodge of Gastonia before Judge Thomas J. Shaw here today in the veteran jurist's inquiry into the actions of the mob.

Mrs. Lodge operates a boarding house in Gastonia, which was visited by the mob and from which Wells, C. M. Lell and C. D. Saylor were kidnaped and carried to a point in Cabarrus county where Wells was flogged.

Mrs. Lodge said that William Pickering, a Loray cotton mill worker led a crowd of men, who were singing "some sort of a song," into the house. "We aren't going to have these communists," she said Pickering told the people in the house.

The crowd then seized Wells, she said, and asked him to speak. He had said only a few words when they started yelling: "Kill him, take him for a ride." The men then took Wells to the porch of the house and there were more cries of "Kill him, kill him."

The men under arrest and who were being given a hearing before Judge Shaw this afternoon are:

A. G. Morehead, William Pickering, Carl Holloway, Dewey Carver, Tom Carver, Smiley Lewis, John Holly, Horace Lane, C. Jolly, Oscar Goodman, Dr. Lee Johnson, Patrolman C. M. Ferguson, Patrolman T. A. Gilbert and former Policeman A. J. Roach.

CHARGED WITH CONSPIRACY AGAINST THE GOVERNMENT

CHARLOTTE, N. C., Sept. 13—(AP)— Charged with conspiracy to revolt against the government of the state of North Carolina in Gaston and Mecklenburg counties, eight men connected with the Loray cotton mill strike in Gastonia late today were held in the Mecklenburg county jail.

Seven of them were arrested during last night when police and deputy sheriffs, engaged in an abortive liquor raid on a rooming house here, found a half dozen shotguns, and riot guns and hundreds of rounds of ammunition. The eighth was taken several hours later while driving an automobile which was admitted to belong to the international labor defense but which was licensed in the name of Juliette Poyntz in charge of the work of the organization in this section.

The conspiracy charge was placed against the men when Judge Thomas J. Shaw, veteran North Carolina jurist, called Sheriff John R. Irwin, Jr., into court and notified him tersely that unless charges were preferred against C. M. Lell and C. D. Saylor, witnesses in the investigation of mob activities earlier in the week, before noon, they would be released.

Just before the "dead line" set by the judge, City Detective H. M. Joyner lined up Lell, Saylor, Taylor Shytle, Dewey Martin, John Gibson, Etley Ritch, Paul Sheppard and Georg Saul and read the warrant to them. They were remanded to jail but efforts to gain a hearing for them this afternoon before Judge Shaw started immediately.

The men all have been connected with the National Textile Workers union and communistic activities in this section although it was stated by communist leaders here today that only Saul is affiliated with the communist party.

Advertisements Are a Guide to Value

Experts can roughly estimate the value of a product by looking at it. More accurately by handling and examining it.

But no person can be an expert on steel, brass, wood, leather, foodstuffs, fabrics, and all of the materials that make up a personal purchase.

There is a surer index of value than the senses of sight and touch —knowledge of the maker's name and for what it stands. Here is the most certain method, except that of actual use, for judging the value of any manufactured goods. Here is the only guarantee against careless workmanship, or the use of shoddy materials.

This is one of the reasons why it pays to read advertisements and use advertised goods. The products that are advertised are worthy of your confidence. Read The Bulletin's advertisements.

HASBROUCK HEIGHTS, N. J., Sept. 13.—(AP) — The biggest land plane ever built, primarily designed for whisking sleeping passengers across the night skies at 150 miles an hour, was officially launched today.

It was the first of the Fokker F-32's equipped to carry 32 passengers in daylight flights and 16 at night and is destined for early installation on the trans-continental plane-train system of the New York Central railroad and Universal Airplanes.

TO ASK THAT WAGGONER BE PLACED UNDER $100,000 BOND

CHEYENNE, Wyo., Sept. 13—(AP)— If C. D. Waggoner, president of the closed bank of Telluride is to be released pending his trial in connection with the deal whereby he obtained a million dollars from New York banks through faked telegrams sent from Denver, he may have to post bond of $100,000. Federal authorities here today declared they would ask the court to fix that amount when Waggoner is arraigned on a warrant from New York.

Held in jail at Newcastle, Waggoner today issued a statement in which he admitted he had hired two women in Denver to send the telegrams which set up the half million dollar credit in the Chase National bank against which he presented drafts for $495,000.

He insisted the girls had no knowledge of the contents or purposes of the messages.

"Having secured the girls, I alone wrote the six code messages which I placed in sealed envelopes," said the bank president. "After instructing the girls to present the code messags at the telegraph office on Friday, August 30, I left for New York."

Armed with a fugitive warrant, a six shooter and a pair of handcuffs, Earl Schoel, deputy United States marshal left Cheyenne by train at 3 p. m. today for Newcastle, Wyo., to arrest Waggoner formally.

If Waggoner demands a preliminary hearing it will be held in Newcastle before United States Commissioner Dorothy Shank.

DEATH OF AUTHOR OF DIAMOND DICK TALES

AUBURN, N. Y., Sept. 13.—(AP)— In an atmosphere the opposite to that which he created in his tales of Diamond Dick, and later of Nick Carter George Charles Jenks, author and newspaper man, lay dead tonight in the quiet hamlet of Owasco to which he came 18 years ago after the heyday of his career.

He died Thursday night after an illness of two weeks. There was nothing about him to remind one of the hair-raising escapades of Dick nor the cuff button deductions of Nick Carter except copies of the volumes. He died in serene surroundings on the shores of Owasco lake having completed 79 years of productive life.

Born in England, April 13, 1850, Jenks came to the United States in 1872 and began his newspaper work in Pittsburgh in 1882. Later, for a period of six years, he was editorial writer for the Pittsburgh Press when he went to New York. That was in 1895 when he became a dramatic critic and started writing short stories.

Shortly after that Jenks began his famous series on Diamond Dick which continued for several years. At times he was forced to write as much as 10,000 words a day to keep pace with his publishers and even with that tremendous output his financial remuneration was comparatively small.

Following the death of the originator of the Nick Carter series, Jenks continued the work.

SPAT BETWEEN CHILDREN LED TO DOUBLE TRAGEDY

PORT ANGELES, Wash., Sept. 13. —(AP)—A double tragedy that started as a spat between two school children and ended in their death brought sorrow today to the little community of Joyce, west of here, in the forests of the Olympic peninsula.

While riding from their homes in Joyce to the Lyre River school in a bus yesterday, Jesse Spurrior, 16, seized a text book from Helen McClaine, 13, and threatened to tear it. Helen protested and complained to the bus driver. The driver made Jesse return the book. In doing so the boy said to the girl:

"You'll be sorry for that."

Last night, Helen and her sister, Leona, age 11, were walking through a fern lined trail in the woods near their home with milk, as was their custom.

About a quarter of a mile from their home the girls were suddenly confronted by Spurrior who carried a rifle. He fired and a bullet went through Helen's body. The younger girl ran home and told her father, C. J. McClaine, a rancher, but before he could reach her she was dead.

A sheriff's posse started in search of the boy. Just before midnight Jesse's body was found with a bullet hole through the head, about 200 yards from where he had shot the girl. The boy was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Warren Spurrior of Joyce. Both families were well known in the district.

INDICTED FOR MURDER OF HER 15-YEAR OLD SON

BELLAIR, Md., Sept. 13—(AP)—Mrs. Hattie Stone, of Havre De Grace, was indicted by the grand jury today on a charge of murdering her 15-year old son, George, by poison. No action was taken by the grand jury in the case of her husband, Edward Stone, whose death two years ago was said by a chemist to have been also due to poison.

George Stone, a high school student, died under circumstances which aroused the suspicion of the attending physician and an investigation was begun which resulted in finding of poison in his body by a Baltimore chemist. Bodies of his father and his brother, Edgar, both of whom died suddenly within the last two years, were exhumed and the chemist found the same poison in the father's body. At preliminary hearings a sister-in-law testified Mrs. Stone intended to use the boy's insurance money to leave the state with a railroad employee formerly a border in the Stone home. The grand jury also indicted Amos Dick, Aberdeen resident who shot and killed an Aberdeen proving ground soldier he found in his home.

BARN AND CONTENTS ARE TOTALLY DESTROYED BY FIRE

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Sept. 13—Fire of undetermined origin on the farm of Barney Benowitz at Chestnut Hill, town of Columbia, about 10 o'clock this morning, destroying a two and one-half story barn, a horse, some 45 tons of hay, a variety of farming implements and an ice house located between the barn and residence. The loss is pratically covered by insurance. Miss Celia Benowitz discovered the blaze. By this time the flames had gained such headway that neighbors were unable to save the horse which was occupying a stall in the structure. When the house became endangered a call was sent in to Engine company No. 1 of the local fire department. Upon receiving permission to leave the city limits from Alderman William E. Webber, chairman of the fire committee, Fire Chief Wade U. Webster, Lieutenant Charles A. Reynolds, and a platoon rushed to the scene with the pumper. Upon the arrival of the firemen the barn was a mass of flames and attention was devoted to saving the house and about 25 cords of wood stacked near the building. Chemicals were used. The probability that the fire started either from spontaneous combustion or defective electrical wiring within the barn, was expressed by the fire chief.

James J. Shea Post, No. 19, American Legion, is going on record as favoring the passage of a bill giving a service pension to certain disabled soldiers, sailors, marines and nurses of the World war. The legislation has already been presented and at present is under consideration by committees from both the senate and the house of representatives. Roy W. Downer and James J. Lee have been appointed to draft appropriate resolutions which will be presented U. S. congressmen and senators from Connecticut, noting the unanimous endorsement of the bill by the post. The bill provides that to receive the pension ex-service men and women who are disabled must have had overseas duty during the war, this not affecting those veterans who are already receiving benefits from the Veterans' bureau. Local interest centers in another provision of the bill including benefits in cases in which records of service and disability have been lost, there being four or five such cases in this city.

Friday, the 13th, may be unlucky for some people, but such was not the case of an unknown woman this afternoon who entrusted a small boy with a $50 bill requesting that he go have it changed while she awaited the afternoon express to Boston which she planned to board. It was only after the youngster had left with the bill that the woman realized her carelessness and became somewhat hysterical. Officer William Hurley was summoned. After some 20 minutes the boy relieved all anxiety by returning with the money in smaller denominations explaining that he had met with difficulty in breaking the bill. The woman gave the youngster a tip, purchased her ticket and boarded the train in the nick of time. The officer was then left to wonder who had changed the bill without questioning the boy's ability to possess such a sum of money.

DANIELSON

DEMOCRATIC CAUCUS RESULTS ARE UNCERTAIN

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Sept. 13—The forecast today was for a lively democratic caucus Saturday afternoon and for a large attendance. Notwithstanding an announcement earlier in the week that John Z. Labelle, of Ballouville, would be named as a candidate for selectman in the democratic caucus, this was flatly denied by Former Representative Benjamin Leonard, of Ballouville, in presenting Mr. Labelle's name to the republican caucus last evening as a candidate for a nomination as selectman on that ticket. Mr. Leonard went further and stated that Mr. Labelle has told representatives of the democratic party that he would not consider a democratic nomination; that he was a good republican and that he would rest his chances solely with the republican party. Mr. Labelle lost the nomination to Selectman N. P. Gingras last evening, eliminating him for the year as a candidate of that party. The effect of Mr. Leonard's statement today on some democrats who were boosting Mr. Labelle for nomination by both republicans and democrats was that of surprise and disappointment. The statement has rather upset some carefully worked out plans, and leaves the outcome of the democratic caucus a matter of uncertainty, even in greater degree than has existed for the past fortnight. One forecast today was that Allcott D. Sayles, member of the present board of selectmen, and Amos E. Hall, of South Killingly, a former selectman, might be the nominees.

FUNERAL.

Mrs. Alice C. Greenslit.

This afternoon at the Union Baptist church in East Killingly funeral services for Mrs. Alice C. Greenslit were conducted by Rev. Chester J. Armstrong of the Danielson Baptist church. During the service Mrs. Andrew Potter and Mrs. Wilfred Wade sang Jesus Cares, and Face to Face. Burial was in the Bartlett cemetery at East Killingly. The bearers were Albert Brooks, Claude A. Moran, George Mason and Henry Hill. A. F. Wood was in charge of the arrangements.

Wauregan A Happy Village.

The village of Wauregan comes in for interesting review in a current issue of one of New England's foremost publications devoted to textile manufacturing and kindred interests. The article sets forth the particularly interesting fact that Wauregan is a "mill village" wherein residents live a quiet and useful existence, notwithstanding that the working residents are kept very busy.

What the article contains is not news to the people of this section of eastern Connecticut, but nevertheless highly interesting and valuable information to people of other areas that read the textile weekly. Wauregan is close to an ideal manufacturing community, its pleasant and happy homes are in a pretty setting. The big "bosses" and the employes are intimately acquainted and on a basis of real friendship in the affairs of life, which flows along smoothly in Wauregan.

The Wauregan company, owners of practically the entire village, on the Plainfield side, are personally interested in every human being that lives there. Insofar as Wauregan residents are concerned, J. Arthur Atwood is the Wauregan company, and he is a neighbor to all of them and an acquaintance. He represents a tradition fast disappearing in manufacturing life in New England. He is not an "absentee" owner. He is one of the home-like Wauregan community, yet no one forgets that he heads the organiaztion, as did his father before him, that makes Wauregan what it has been for two generations, a community that may be rated a place of peaceful endeavor that practically guarantees a comfortable livelihood in pleasant surroundings and with many comforts at far more reasonable price than the majority of larger communities can offer. It is of special interest to this section of eastern Connecticut that a textile journal has seen fit to broadcast this information generally.

Next Tuesday afternoon from four to six o'clock and by invitation of Principal Ernest R. Warren, mothers of boys and girls who are attending Killingly high school are to visit the building to meet Principal Warren and the staff of teachers. Those attending have been asked to wear cards on which their names are printed or written. A committee in charge of arrangements for the affair is made up of Mrs. M. J. Waller, chairman; Mrs. A. M. Thompson, Mrs. Theodore Hammett and Mrs. Harold Holehouse, refreshments; Mrs. Oswald Street, decorations; Miss M. Louise Perkins, music; Mrs. Charles Alexander, Mrs. Herbert Keech, Mrs. Sabin S. Russell and Mrs. Oswald Street, ushers.

Speculation on LeClair Case.

There remained uncertainty this afternoon as to whether Earl LeClair, of Moosup, will be presented before the town court of Killingly or brought into the superior court on a bench warrant to answer to such charges as may be preferred against him in connection with the death of Edward K. Ewart, of Wauregan, on Sunday night, August 25. Ewart was a passenger in LeClair's car when it was in collision with another machine operated by Charles Tracy, of Putnam, near Attawaugan. In a finding made this week Coroner Arthur G. Bill found LeClair guilty of criminal carelessness and negligence in operating his car as he did at the time of the accident. Meanwhile LeClair remains at liberty under bonds of $3,000. The September term of the Windham county superior court at which cases on the criminal list will be considered opens on September 24.

Hitch-Hiking on Decline.

It was remarked today by several automobile owners who were talking about one thing and another that the hitch-hiking business, in this territory and for miles around at least, has gone into a great decline. The now generally accepted practice of turning down these strange solicitors for free rides, with all the risks involved, appears to have had the effect of discouraging a great percentage of them—not all, but a good healthy majority.

Commander Walter F. Jacobs, U. S. N., and in European waters the past two years as commander of the cruiser Raleigh, has been assigned to the Army War college at Washington, D. C.

Capt. Edward F. Perry, M. D., of Putnam, has resigned his commission as commanding officer of medical detachment, special troops, 43rd division, stationed at the Danielson armory, because of ill health.

Dr. W. W. Adams, of Moosup, who has many friends and acquaintances in Danielson, has been seriously ill for some time past, having suffered an attack of appendicitis.

Tuesday afternoon members of the Ladies' Prayer circle are to meet with Mrs. George Miner, of Maine street.

Having held no meetings during the summer season, members of the Girls' Friendly society, of St. Albans church are to meet next Monday evening at the parish house.

Herbert J. Barnett has been at Briarcliff, N. Y., to attend a convention of automobile dealers in one of the lines he handles here.

Mrs. Margaret Fulton has announced the engagement of her daughter, Marion, to Frederick J. Moran, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick J. Moran, of West Gloucester, Mass.

PUTNAM

REPUBLICAN CAUCUS WAS MUCH SMALLER THAN USUAL

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Sept. 13—Whether or not it was the fact that the majority of the republican voting element in the town was assured that no contests for office would take place that caused the unusually small turnout at the caucus last evening is not determined, but for some unexplained reason the attendance at the annual nominating gathering fell way below par of those of the past year. The male section of the municipal hall was filled to its capacity, but only a small gathering of the feminine republican voting list was in evidence. While the session ran along an unusually smooth course, without not even as much as an occasional argument to offset the tentative plans of the town committee, the present incumbents seeking re-nomination feared a last minute uprising that could have possibly snatched away their chances for town office this year.

Name Omitted.

In the list of nominees published in Friday's edition of The Bulletin, the name of Lucius Parker Merriam, who was nominated and incidentally elected to the office of town auditor, was inadvertantly omitted from the list. Mr. Merriam's name when presented, received the hearty endorsement of his party.

Democrats Gauge Chances.

Following the republican caucus Wednesday evening the democratic town chiefs went into session to select their champions who will be nominated at their caucus to be held on Monday evening Sept. 16. The democratic caucus it is believed will be largely attended as the word has been passed around that the full ticket will be put up and a vigorous attempt will be made to carry the election this fall. Democratic town committee man Edmund Dubois Sr., has stated emphatically that two candidates will be nominated for the board of selectmen and other nominations made. If promised opposition is given the republicans by the democratic slate a lively campaign will be waged by both parties, since the republican list has increased this year and noteworthy gains have been made in the democratic ranks. The success of the democrats in carrying the town last year is believed to have inspired the full ticket slogan and created the desire of the party to clinch control of town government.

A large sedan driven by E. J. Marshall, of Keene, N. H., failed to round the dangerous cemetery curve at the intersection of Grove street and Killingly avenue yesterday morning and as the result of a crash, both Mr. and Mrs. Marshall are patients at the Day Kimball hospital. The accident happened in the middle of the forenoon. The two were returning from a trip to Rye, N. Y., to their home in Keene. When he approached the corner, Mr. Marshall met another car. He swerved to the crown of the road and in doing so lost control of the vehicle which crashed into the telephone pole. Mrs. Marshall sustained a severe laceration of the skull and a deep gash in the neck. She was taken to the Day Kimball hospital where she was still a patient at a late hour this afternoon. Marshall, the driver, received several cuts about the face and scalp. He was taken to the hospital, but was discharged today.

Seeks Place As Selectman.

Edmund Dubois, Sr., democratic alderman, ward 3, in the common council tonight confirmed rumors which have been circulated about the city during the past few days to the effect that he will seek the democratic nomination that will place him in the race for a berth on the board of selectmen. Mr. Dubois will not oppose the present democratic selectman, Edward F. Girard, but will enter into the race as Girard's running mate.

Mr. Dubois stated definitely that the party leaders will also fill their ticket at the party caucus to be held on Monday evening. When asked for names of possible office seekers, he said, "I am unable to answer at the present as the slate has not been tabulated as yet." Mr. Dubois is chairman of the democratic town committee, a position he has held for a number of years. He has been a member of the common council for the past eight years and has proved to be an efficient and capable public servant.

Airport Possibility.

Engineers of the United States department of commerce were in North Woodstock today inspecting a large stretch of land on the North Woodstock-Southbridge relative to its possibilities of becoming an emergency airport. The government officers represented the airways division of the department of commerce. Measurements and surface surveys were taken. One of the officials was approached for a statement but replied that the site will be entered on the records of the department which he represented to be considered at a later date.

Putnam Tax Lowest.

Putnam as a town and a city, has the lowest tax rate of any community in the state, according to a table of figures contained in the quadrennial report recently published by the state tax commission. The tax rate in the town being 12½ mills while in the city it is 5½ mills. The estimated population in the town is 8,098 and it has a total indebtedness of $240,317.34. The grand list returned totals $11,299,062. The town debt per capita amounts to $29.68, which is many dollars less than other towns in the state the size of Putnam.

The municipal population of Putnam is estimated at 8,500. Its grand list totals $10,559,404. The report shows there is a debt of $371,600 which amounts to $43.72 per capita. The city figures quoted are less than those of any other city the size of Putnam. The tax rate reduction was created three years ago following the revaluation of property.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Renshaw, Louis H. Mathieu, Fred J. Mathieu and Miss Agnes Mathieu spent Thursday in Boston.

Sidney A. King, son of Mr. and Mrs. Allie S. King, of Center street, left today for Springfield, Mass., where he is to enter the Y. M. C. A. college, enrolling as a member of the freshman class. Mr. King is a graduate of Putnam high school, class of 1925 and since his graduation has been employed in the Stanley Tool works in New Britain.

JEWETT CITY

FRIDAY NIGHT COLLISION RESULTS NOT SERIOUS

Joe Wolkowski, driving his Plymouth coupe and Adam Rojeski in a brand new Buick sedan, were in collision, corner of Soule and Main streets early Friday evening. The Buick, coming up Main crossed over to enter Soule street on the left. The Plymouth was bound straight down Main. Both cars were damaged. Mr. Rojeski's wife and child were riding with him. The child was thrown against the side of the car and bruised slightly. Wolkowski was riding alone and he received a minor cut on the face.

Car Strikes Unlighted Wheel

At about the same time, Chester Zadora, one of The Bulletin newsboys, riding a bicycle, was struck at Greene avenue and North Main street by a Glasgo car, driven by Mr. Banning. Zadora and his wheel were thrown over the curb to the sidewalk but he told Officer Balcom was not injured. Mr. Banning was not blamed by the officer as the boy had no light on his wheel. When questioned the lad told the police officer that he did not know that he had to have a light.

Simon Brewster Recovering

Simon Brewster, who has been very ill, appears to be on the mend. This pleasing intelligence came to local friends, from a man who was born in the same year, (1850) as Mr. Brewster. At the time it was recalled that there are five Jewett City men, all born in that year, who, at not far differing periods during 1930, will pass the octogenarian milestone, Dr. George H. Jennings, Maxcy Seymour, George A. Barber, John E. Phillips and Simon Brewster. Mr. Barber is a resident of Wallingford, Mr. Brewster was born in the homestead which is still his home.

William Christopher, formerly of Jewett City, was a visitor at Pachaug fair. A resident of New Jersey, he plans to return at an early date, and take up his residence locally again. Mr. Christopher was captain of the "house on wheels" which made the trip from Jewett City to St. Petersburg, Florida.

Mrs. Charles R. Carey and infant son are at home from Groton Long Point, where they have spent a part of the summer with Helen Hogan.

The Fisk tire mill was still Friday, and as no water was passing through the wheels, the natural flow of the Pachaug river showed six inches on the Slater dam.

Mrs. Jennie Colesworthy, of Worcester, is the guest of Mrs. G. H. Prior.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Medberry, of Old Mystic, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Edward Prior, Jr., were recent local callers.

G. H. Prior is away on a vacation trip which will include a steamship voyage from Buffalo to Detroit.

Norwich Preacher Sunday

The preacher at the Methodist church Sunday morning will be Rev. Frank B. Adams, of Norwich. Rev. Mr. Adams is one of the pioneer preachers of this part of New England and well knows the hardships of the times when reaching the country churches was difficult. He preached at one time in Hopeville, also at Ashwillet. A man of great vigor for his years, he can still give a good account of himself in the pulpit. Friends will be glad to hear him again. Mr. Adams will preach at Bethel church at 2 p. m. and at Voluntown at 3:30. The Methodist pastor will preach at Westerly for Rev. C. E. Suter who is abroad on a vacation, but will occupy his own pulpit for the evening service.

The new parochial school of St. John's parish, opened the past week with 112 pupils registered. Rev. Fr. The first two with Sister Arthur Marie instructor, are meeting in the church, and the third and fourth, with Sister Louise Marie instructor, are meeting in the hall. Sister Arthur comes from St. Joseph's school, Waterbury, and Sister Louise from Graniteville, Vt., and previous to that from Waterbury. The Sister Superior is Sister Marie Isidore, also from St. Joseph's school. She will teach music. Fr. Landry hopes that by October first the classes will be in the new school building.

Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Bradford, of Boston, were recent visitors in town.

Miss Maud Wibberly, of New York is visiting at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Wibberly.

The services at St. Paul's Episcopal church the coming Sunday will be as follows: 8 a. m. holy communion; 11 o'clock, morning prayer and sermon, Sunday school at 9.45. The rector, having returned from his vacation, will officiate. Bishop E. C. Acheson will visit the church and administer confirmation next Tuesday evening at 7.30.

THE DECREASING RANKS.

Every Memorial day and every Grand Army encampment furnish additional evidence concerning the depletion of the ranks of the Boys in Blue. They are steadily responding to the call of the Grim Reaper, but even though they are passing at the rate of five an hour they are by no means willing to say that there will be no more encampments. Efforts in behalf of such a decision have been promptly frowned upon and the honor which was conferred upon Portland, Me., this week will next year go to Cincinnati.

Even though the ranks are rapidly thinning there are those who are ready and eager to carry on, and it will be many years before there can be singled out the last survivor of the Civil war.

That the interest of the veterans is just as keen as it ever was is disclosed by the effort that was made to bring about a joint encampment of the Blue and the Gray. There was much to appeal in such a proposition. For many people that old feeling created by war days is gone. For many it never really existed except by inheritance and new generations are escaping it. With all living under the same government and the same flag, with the country thoroughly reunited there was a desire for the elimination of the Mason and Dixon line. There will always be the north and the south quite the same as the east and west, but the prompters of the joint encampment believed it was time to let bygones be bygones, and contribute what they could to the elimination of the sectional feeling.

Even though this view appealed favorably to some of the veterans it brought violent opposition from others. The convention debated it spiritedly and turned it down, but there's no certainty but inasmuch as the ice has been broken and the idea is further discussed that future encampments may take a different view.

It was the claim of one veteran who opposed the joint encampment that the G. A. R. could never march behind a Confederate flag. The attitude is not surprising, but why should there be any such attempt? Why march? Let all the veterans ride, if there just be a parade, and ride not behind battle flags but under the Stars and Stripes, the flag of this glorious nation, the flag of the south as well as the north.

THE WAGGONER CASE.

Something new is always bobbing up. It doesn't involve a world's record, a new discovery or an Einstein theory it may be a new crime. Just now it is the method by which C. D. Waggoner, of Telluride, Col., obtained a half million from the banks of New York.

In this connection the western bank president has used the regular banking practice, aided by his standing as a banker, to obtain money in a fraudulent manner. That he obtained it so easily can be attributed to his method and good reputation, but that doesn't overcome the fact that he misrepresented. Such being the case there seems less ground for the contest over the recovery of the funds so obtained than is indicated.

According to the reports there appears to be much uncertainty as to whether the New York banks will recover the money which they parted with. There appears to be a disposition on the part of the bank authorities of Colorado to block the return of the money. The arrested banker admits that he got the money so that there would be no loss for the depositors in his bank. He considered that those in no way involved could stand such a loss as the depositors faced much better than they could. That could hardly justify his resort to fraud to obtain the needed money and it seems impossible that any banking authorities would insist upon keeping what it was known was not legitimately obtained.
